The work has been of a pioneer character, but there has been much encouragement. The first home of the missionaries was a group of round thatched huts, built one after the other, as required. Later on, Mr. Aitchison erected a square wooden schoolhouse, and a frame dwelling-house with verandah. As he learned the art of brickmaking, better and weather-proof out-buildings were put up. All this involved a large amount of effort in the practical education of the natives, which was, of course, additional to the school and Gospel work and visiting of kraals. On one occasion an astonished native remarked, "When we want to build a house, we think and talk about it; we see the missionaries building their house as we go to a week's beer-drinking; when we come back the missionaries have built their house!" As a contrast to this, last year the first native's red-brick cottage was erected by and for a married worthy couple, who had been scholars at Ikwezi Lamaci. The opening and consecrating of the cottage was an occasion of much rejoicing among the missionaries and scholars, all being invited to share in the feast. The joyful faces of the happy couple were good to see. Mr. and Mrs. Aitchison realised what an education in more civilised ways the building of such cottages by other of the natives would be, but the making of the bricks was slow work, and discouraging to all concerned. Therefore Mrs. Aitchison made a strong appeal for a brick-making machine, which, we are glad to say, was warmly responded to by a lady in Leeds, who collected for a machine, which is now on its way up the country to make glad the hearts of the missionaries.

The latest innovation this year, while agriculture was at a standstill, was the erection of a grinding mill, which caused great astonishment to the natives. When the water was turned on, and the mill-wheel fairly started, and the first dread of the people was allayed, one of them remarked, "Oh these white men! these white men! nothing would put it into our heads to make water do a work like this!"

Though very suspicious at first, the Kaffirs learned by degrees to trust the missionaries, and the Chiefs from the neighbouring districts appealed for teachers to be settled in their midst. In response to such request, some years ago the coast out-station of Malan Cliff (named after Major Malan) was planted, and put under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Christison. The Chief M'Pegua, himself an adult scholar at Ikwezi Lamaci, after long entreaty, got Mr. Aitchison to help him to build a schoolhouse in his district. Lately it was burned, and is being rebuilt. Another station opened is Ihlukw, ten miles off, which has lately held its first annual meeting at Ikwezi; the interesting reports of the varied work done, and their small offerings in money and kind, rejoicing the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Aitchison. George Jojo, a native, who had some training in London, also conducts a school some miles off. Other tribes are now begging for schools, but for want of funds our friends do not feel justified in opening more. A recent letter tells of quite a number of services going on at once on the Sabbath, in connection with the Mission, giving a good idea of the extension of the work.

Mrs. Aitchison has long had it on her heart to begin a boarding school for girls to counteract heathen influence and example. As these girls are to be the future mothers of the tribes, it is certainly a work of very great importance; but it means a separate building, and that means more money. Meantime Mrs. Aitchison proposes doing what she can to reach more of the women and girls by visiting among the kraals, by means of a "slip" drawn by oxen over the rough ground where she cannot trust either wheels or horseback.

A few years ago Mr. Aitchison purchased from Government, at a small cost, 500 acres of land, which he cultivates with native help, so teaching agriculture. A church was erected with only such help as the natives could give. At Harding, a postal and military station four miles distant, a church was erected, and the cost defrayed by those who attend the services. Far from any medical practitioner, our devoted friends are thrown on their own resources when sickness comes or accidents happen. Mr. Aitchison has gained a wide reputation for rendering medical aid in all kinds of disorders, and the gratitude felt by those who have benefited by his medical skill has often won a sympathetic ear for words about the Great Physician.

Mr. and Mrs. Aitchison's path has not been without much personal sorrow and trial. Some years ago their eldest son, a promising boy, was removed by death; their surviving son, Gershom, bids fair to follow in their footsteps, as a child of God with a heart of compassion for the benighted and oppressed. From droughts and storms they have suffered seriously at times, but they have nevertheless held on their way, and continued their plodding task to the honour of the Lord whom they serve.

MR. CURRIE IN PAISLEY.

On Friday evening, in the Free High Church Mission Hall, Storie-street, Paisley, there was held a remarkable testimony meeting, at the close of a fortnight's special evangelistic services, by Mr. John Currie. Rev. J. B. Sturrock having borne testimony to the success that had attended the evangelist's labours, Mr. Currie delivered an animated address, in which he counselled the young converts to grow in knowledge, and so in grace. Thereafter the meeting was thrown open, and a good many rose freely and spoke shortly and simply as to what God had done for their souls.

Mr. Currie then conveyed to the meeting the message with which he had been intrusted by Bob Hindle, at one time a champion runner, who had been one of the first to give himself to Christ at the meetings. Mr. Currie had sought out his old chum in Paisley, and the outcome of private visits and public preaching was Hindle's conversion to God. Bob was unable, through illness, to be present at the meeting, but sent word that he was happy in his new Master's service, and meant to run with patience the race set before him, "looking unto Jesus." His stand on Christ's side has made a deep impression on the young men of Paisley, who are much given to athletic sports.

The past fortnight will be remembered in Paisley as a special season of blessing, and the desire among Christian workers there is very strong that some means should be found for retaining Mr. Currie in this country for evangelistic work. He begins a month's mission in Carluke on Sabbath first, and his present intention is to leave for America about the middle of January.

CHRISTIAN INSTRUCTION SOCITEY.

On Tuesday week a conference was held at the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street. Rev. T. C. Udall read a brief paper on the history and work of the Christian Instruction Society. He suggested some special departments of effort the Society might undertake with advantage, viz., the organisation of a large band of voluntary lay preachers, the arrangement of missions in connection with churches, and the extension of its good work in providing deaconesses to visit the poorer districts of London. The need of visitation from cultured Christian ladies in our poorer districts is very great. The fifteen deaconesses already employed might with advantage be increased to fifty or 100.

Ladies who are desirous of devoting themselves to this good work may communicate with Rev. R. MacKay, secretary, at the offices of the Society, Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, E.C.

India and Opium.

INTERVIEW WITH BISHOP THOBURN.

Thirty-five working years' residence in any country, as Methodist preacher and bishop, is not a trivial qualification for forming a true judgment on the social and moral condition of its people. This lengthened experience has been the lot of Bishop Thoburn, missionary bishop in India of the American Methodist Episcopal Church. His active labours during these years have necessitated extensive travel in various parts of the Indian Empire, and much close contact with its population. The matured views of such a man on the opium question and its ramifications we have felt to be so valuable, that it was with unusual pleasure we embraced a fortunate opportunity last week of eliciting them. The Bishop reached London on Thursday evening from the United States, and next evening he left the city en route for his Indian diocese, where many pressing engagements await him. Though he had but a few fleeting hours to spend in the metropolis, and much to do, he was kind enough to grant an interview last Friday morning to a member of our staff, on this question, about which he is so well qualified to speak, and which has now reached such an acute crisis in its bearings on the mutual relations of Great Britain and her mighty Eastern dependency. There were also present at the interview Mr. Benjamin Broomhall, of the China Inland Mission, and Rev. A. W. Prautch, who is one of Bishop Thoburn's helpers in his Indian work.

The friends of the cause in London, knowing that the Bishop would pass through the city, were extremely anxious that, if at all possible, he should break his journey for a week or two, in order to help personally in the much-needed enlightenment of the English mind as to the true inwardness of the situation; especially in view of the conflicting evidence given before the late Royal Commission. The Bishop at once declared this proposal inadmissible, as official arrangements rendered imperative his immediate departure for India. This being so, we are the more glad at having secured an expression of his views, and we trust they will carry the great weight they deserve, to the mind of every unbiassed reader. The conversation took somewhat the following form:—

"What, in your opinion, is the common judgment of the people of India as to the habitual use of opium?"

"Up to the commencement of the recent official inquiry, I never heard anyone in India question the fact that the opium drug is very injurious, and that its consumption is a very bad habit. Undoubtedly that is the general view in most parts of the country. If a man is known to use opium, the fact is accepted among his neighbours as proof positive of his low moral character."

"Then the people of India must have been much surprised at the amount of evidence given before the Royal Commission in favour of opium?"

"I do not hesitate to say that that evidence is regarded by the people generally as having in a measure been extorted from the witnesses. For the time, at any rate, Government influence was so strong that the official witnesses were willing to testify as they were expected to do. I may here explain further how, in my opinion, the official evidence took the form it did. When the Royal Commission was announced, there was great alarm in Government circles in India. It was felt that they were to be put on the defensive—in short they were to be on their trial. Then the time chosen was unfortunate. Both Government and people were at their wits' end on the question of taxation, and there was general fear that the imposition of a fresh tax on an already overburdened people would be the result of relinquishing the opium revenue. Still further it must be remembered that the Government had all their official machinery at hand in preparing for the investigation. The anti-opium party in the country had no such organisation. They had no money resources for the purposes of collecting evidence. They were all busy men, and could not turn aside from their proper work. The advantage, therefore, was all on the side of the Government."

"What would you be disposed to say, Bishop Thoburn, as to the quality of the official medical evidence?"

"Official opinion, being sought for in the way I have indicated, became so pronounced that witnesses came forward to testify to all manner of absurd things. For the time there was what I may call a in favour of opium. We have been freely called fanatics in this discussion, but I would not scruple to put the fanaticism on the opposite side. For instance, one doctor said that opium was as harmless as hay! Nobody but a real fanatic would say that. Another actually asserted that it was "God's best gift to man!"—an opinion that no genuinely sane man could possibly hold or express. All through the official medical testimony, that kind of fanatical utterance was so general as to render the medical testimony practically worthless. I might quote another example of this. A prominent medical man spoke with approval of the habit of nursing-women putting raw opium under their thumb nail, and letting babies six months old suck it. For a responsible medical man to make such a statement is little short of idiocy. Such a practice on the part of mothers or nurses is commonly considered to be most reckless and vicious. It is my strong belief that the medicinal value of opium has been, and is, very much over estimated. Its usefulness as a febrifuge, for example, I regard to be a pure delusion."

GENUINE MEDICAL FANATICISM

"Passing to another part of the subject, would you say what is the action of your Church in the case of habitual users of the drug?"

"On that point I may give you an illustration. When I went to Lucknow in 1870, I encountered this opium evil in a very concrete way. Among our native preachers were four men who were opium eaters. Within twelve months I discovered that they were utterly useless for the work; they were untruthful and altogether untrustworthy. We had a long and painful investigation before the native and American missionaries, and in the result we were obliged to dismiss all the four. I have never known a recognised opium user to be accepted by any of our missionaries. We regard it as a crucial test of Christian character, and any church member found addicted to the habit would be immediately disciplined."

"Is this the universal practice in the Indian churches? We know that it is so in China."

"Certainly, where there is any extensive membership. And we lay down the same rule with respect to strong drink. We know that for these people, weak in physique and moral stamina, abstinence is the only thing. If they touch liquor they will become drunkards; if they touch opium, in like manner they are lost. Therefore, we enjoin abstinence absolutely. As to the distinction sometimes drawn between opium and liquor, we regard it as similar to the distinction between the krait and the cobra—both venomous and deadly serpents."

"Another matter on which your opinion would be welcome is this:—How have the professed restrictions of the Government on the supply of the drug affected the opium habit among the Indian people?"

"No doubt the habit has been spreading considerably during the past twenty years. Latterly I have not been so much among the country people as in my earlier Indian days; I am now more in the large cities. The habit was spreading steadily in Calcutta, until we began to agitate against it. In 1877 I personally visited the Calcutta dens for the first time, and I then called public attention to the evil. After a course of regular visitation of these places, I collated the facts, and they were printed in The Indian Witness, and afterwards in The Indian Statesman. An agitation was the result, and the Government, I believe, reduced the number of the shops. Still, the thing went on till last year, when the order was given for closing them up. Three months later I gave my evidence before the Commission, and during that time I was not able to find that any dens still existed in Calcutta." (At this point in the colloquy Mr. Prautch interjected the remark that, according to the evidence in the Blue Book by the Brahmo Somaj people, some Calcutta opium dens were still in existence.)

Being interrogated on the question of revenue, the Bishop said that when before the Commission he said he was not a British subject, and therefore felt some hesitation in discussing the point. He took the liberty of suggesting, however, that the great military expenditure on the north-west frontier, on account of supposed Russian advances, was really a European rather than an Indian matter, and consequently the expenditure should properly be borne largely by the Imperial exchequer. That view, doubtless, was not a popular one with the English authorities, but it was held by a great many impartial people. The standing army in India he considered to be twice as strong as need be. Considerations of revenue, however, do not affect the moral aspects of the case at all. If the traffic is morally wrong, that is an end of the matter; nothing can possibly justify it. As to the Royal Commission, the bishop considered that it had been thrust on the Indian community without cause. The people generally knew enough on the merits of the opium traffic, and they regarded the appointment of the inquiry as a mere cloak for postponing any decided action. In certain directions it has done much harm, as many people have taken for granted the truth of the medical evidence in favour of opium; they have come to the conclusion that their former attitude was a mistaken one, and that the evil is not so bad as represented.

"What position do you hold, Bishop Thoburn, on the question of exporting the drug to China?"

"I hold that the Government policy of acting the part of a merchant is at least a hundred years out of date, leaving out of count all moral considerations. If the Indian Government must assume the functions of an ordinary merchant, let them select some article of commerce that has no immoral tendency. Alike on moral and economic grounds, I deem the export traffic to be wholly indefensible."

"I would like," continued the bishop, "to say a word about another related question. The officials make a great deal of the increase of smuggling and illicit trade that would result from Government stoppage and prohibition of the export. I have never been able to understand the affected horror and solicitude of the traffic defenders on this point. I am not able to see even if all the anticipated results should accrue, that the outcome would be so disastrous as is represented. A few persons only would be involved in any illicit trade that might spring up. It is simply absurd to assume that more opium would be consumed, in consequence of prohibition, than at the present time. At one time I lived on the borders of Nepaul, and at another time near the boundary line of the native Mohammedan State of Rampore. In both cases there was plenty of temptation to liquor smuggling, but I could never discover that any serious results followed. A few miserable natives did manage to bring strong drink across the frontier, but the thing was of small dimensions, and when the discovery was made the illegal action was easily suppressed. I am satisfied that much more ado has been made of this point than it really deserves."

We think the reader of the foregoing statements will feel convinced that the testimony of a man like Bishop Thoburn, with such a long and varied experience, and having the true interests of the people at heart, is sufficient to outweigh any amount of interested—not to say "extorted"—official opinion.

MEETING IN MARYLEBONE.

In a line with the agitation being carried on by the Indian deputation, a meeting was held on Saturday evening, under the presidency of Dr. G. F. Pentecost, in Marylebone Presbyterian Church, Upper George-street. Addresses were delivered by Rev. A. W. Prautch and by Mr. S. C. Kanaga Ratnam, a native Christian, graduate of the Madras University. His utterance on this question from the point of view of a native was eloquent, and his satire of the civilised heathenism which seems to possess the official mind was humiliating to a degree for Englishmen to listen to. An important and startling point was brought out by this gentleman's speech, taken in connection with his personality. He, in common with other enlightened Indians, looks at this question as a native and as a Christian, and evidently realises that the Church of Christ abhors the enormity of the opium evil. But we must remember that the millions of his fellow-countrymen are ignorant and judge us by the treatment meted out by officialdom, which is un-Christ-like in the extreme.

Dr. Pentecost, in briefly introducing the deputation, claimed for the Christian community in India, as represented by the missionaries, a universal adherence to the side of justice. He regarded the evil to be as great as the traffic in intoxicating liquor and condemned the revenue obtained by its means.

Mr. Prautch contrasted the anomaly of the restrictions imposed under the Pharmacy Act in England with the sale of opium in India. The High Court of Justice in England recently decided that the proprietor of a certain cough mixture containing one-tenth of a grain of morphia must insert the word "poison" across the labels on his bottles; yet a child in India can purchase four ounces of opium, sufficient to kill two hundred people. Whilst we protect ourselves against one-tenth of a grain of morphia we think nothing of scattering 80,000 chests of opium.

Mr. Prautch complained bitterly of the heartless attitude towards native races assumed by certain English newspapers. Before the meeting closed Dr. Pentecost read a resolution expressive of indignation at the deliberate evasion by the Bombay authorities of the order to close the opium dens, expressing the view that the opium traffic is a crime against the human race and God, and is morally indefensible, as shown by the resolution of the Commons.

CALEDONIAN CHRISTIAN CLUB.

This institution, centrally situated at 5, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury, forms an important link between new arrivals from Scotland in the great Metropolis and the Christian Churches. At a moment of special need, as well as special danger, it extends a hearty welcome and a helping hand to our countrymen and women from the far north, about to embark on the troubled sea of London life.

The new report of the club furnishes many encouraging statements as to the way in which it has been able to accomplish its end. Help has been given not only as to safe lodging, but in securing situations, and in other useful ways. That the agency is appreciated may be gathered from the steady growth in the membership. There is one excellent suggestion in the report that ought to be widely carried out—the affiliation of Scottish churches, guilds, and other religious associations with the institution, so that for a small annual fee they could have the privilege of introducing those of their members proceeding to London.

We are sorry to observe that the club still requires over £600 to wipe off the debt incurred on starting operations.

A GOOD WORK IN BARNES.

The services held in "The Welcome" Mission Hall, Barnes, have been much blessed in the past. For many years members of the Evangelisation Society have preached the Gospel there. Classes, clubs, and meetings of all sorts are being carried on and the working expenses are large. The people are for the most part very poor, and it is impossible to raise all the needed funds in the immediate neighbourhood. The sum of £50 is urgently needed before Christmas.

I would plead for help from those of your readers who wish to spread the knowledge of the truth among the poor. Fancy or useful articles of all sorts will be thankfully received for a sale to be held on December 7 and 8. A jumble sale will also take place the same week. Any parcels of old clothes or goods would be acceptable.—Yours truly,

E. Wilkinson, Hon. Sec.

"The Welcome" Mission, Westfields, Barnes.

EVERY FAILURE IN CHILD LIFE is a double failure; for the community loses the productive force of the child and the addition to its resources, which ought to come from him; and, on the other hand, if he becomes a pauper or a criminal, the financial burdens of the State are increased, and much of the best vital force of the community is expended in meeting the added strain.— H. H. Hart.

Letters to the Editor.

CHRISTIAN GIVING.

Dear Sir,—I am very much interested in missionary work, and should like to put one or two points before your readers, as matters of principle with regard to business which would revolutionise the present system of giving to the Lord's work, and cause the stream of blessing to flow very much more freely towards the world at large, as well as to all forms of Christian work at home.

If we examine the conditions of life in our own country, we shall see that the customs of society are set very largely by those who have abundance of wealth wherewith to carry out their wishes. But the Christian is besought not to be conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of his mind, that he may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom. xii. 2). The Christian ought not, therefore, to follow the customs of society.

On the other hand, it should be the desire of every Christian to attain to a simple, regular mode of life, which will secure the fulfilment of all the laws of health, while fitting him to serve God to the utmost of his ability. A simple mode of life is an inexpensive mode of life. A man, therefore, who adopts a simple mode of life is likely to have far more money to spend on God's work. How does this affect his business then? His business is the channel through which God enriches him. Is he to use his prosperity as a means of rising in the social scale? This is what most Christians do; and as a consequence their families do not maintain the simplicity that is in Christ. How frequently is it the case that worldly prosperity is the secret of spiritual declension, and those who have "begun in the Spirit" very often end by trying to make themselves "perfect in the flesh," and by this means fall from grace.

These are terrible consequences, and can only be avoided by living a life of continual dependence upon God. What is the law, therefore, that should govern a Christian's giving? It is expressed in two ways in the New Testament. "Give as the Lord hath prospered you" (1 Cor. xvi. 2). This is, evidently, whatever he has received over and above his own requirements, not laying by in store for his own aggrandisement, but for sending abroad, as the context in the above passage clearly shows. The early Christians received from a general fund "as every man had need" (Acts iv. 35). This is, evidently, the measure of every man's expenditure, just what he needs.

It is easy to see, therefore, that if every Christian would adopt these principles, God's treasury would overflow, and I dare to say that the reason the Church does not flourish is that the lives of Christians are not lives of dependence upon God for their daily supplies. "God is faithful." If we seek first his kingdom and his righteousness everything else shall be added unto us. In business the Christian's object must be, "How much can I make for God?" I pray that God will move the hearts of his people to bring the tithes into his storehouse and prove Him if He will not open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing such as there shall not be room enough to receive it (Malachi iii. 10).

Yours faithfully,

Liverpool. T. Forsyth.

"BELIEVERS IN A DILEMMA."

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent "Out in the Cold," it occurs to me whether it is not better for good and devout men to stand up for the truth where God has been pleased to place them, without absolutely disconnecting themselves with that section of the Church of Christ where error is preached. Surely it would not tend to the glory of God if all the good men were to leave the Church of England?

There is error in all denominations and truth in all, and if the locality is very dark, is there not all the more need for "Out in the Cold" and others to let their light shine brightly? I am not a "Churchman," but sincerely think that the whole Church of Christ often receives loss of power in the eyes of unbelievers through the many schisms that occur.—Yours sincerely, J. R.

Dear Sir,—We live within easy walking distance of eight churches, and I have never heard a Gospel sermon preached in one of them; all Popish teaching. Is it to be wondered at that our children grow up worldly, if not worse? or, still worse, to think that if they attend early communion they may do anything they like? I, as the mother of nine sons, can speak of that I have seen and suffered. Oh, what we suffer in country villages in this way! We are as badly off as the heathen; I mean, particularly gentle-people. The poor have a simple faith, and learn some truth in their little chapels. Great things are done by such men as Mr. Moody and many more in London and big towns. Why must we be starved?

We have a dear little village and church here, where for the last fifty years the teaching has been all Popish. Now we are awaiting a fresh appointment, but have no hopes of any improvement under the present bishop. All one can do is give to all our poor people books with true teaching, and I often send them to gentry, clergy, etc., by post, hoping almost against hope for some good to come out of it. —Yours truly, A Village Resident.

A BOOK TO READ.

Dear Sir,—I feel it to be a duty to call attention to "The Story of the China Inland Mission," by Miss Guinness. Doubtless hundreds, if not thousands, of your readers have already read it. Maybe, however, there are large numbers who have not. To all such I would say, "If you want to know how great is the power of prayer, if you want to know how near Christ is, and how ready and able to help and bless those who trust and call upon Him, if you want to know how grand your life may become, and how great the work He can do through you, if leaving yourself in his hands, you look to Him, then read the story of the China Inland Mission."

This is a book which ought to be lent as widely as possible by all who wish to help their neighbours and friends. It ought to be given to every minister and evangelist, and placed in every Sunday-school and church and college library throughout the land.

I came to Finland to try and help others, and seem to have been used to do this beyond my expectations, but, if so, it is, under God, due to the help I myself have received through reading a copy of this book, which I found in the room from which this is being written.

Praying that these lines may lead many others to read this striking and most helpful book, and that it may help them as it has helped me, I am, very truly yours, John D. Kilburn.

Helsingfors.

THE BIBLE LEAGUE.

The first gatherings in West London under the auspices of the Bible League was held on Monday in Queen's Hall, W. Mr. J. E. Mathieson presided at the morning meeting, when addresses were delivered by Revs. Percival Smith and John Wilkinson, each of whom set forth the importance of the Bible being accepted in its entirety as the only safe guide whereby men can be brought into living relationship with God through Christ.

Lord Kinnaird, who occupied the chair in the afternoon, explained the aim of the Bible League, and urged the necessity, in these days of so-called "higher criticism," of having the younger people in the schools and universities of the country instructed in pure, undiluted Scripture truth. Rev. J. B. Barraclough followed with an address on "The need of prayer for faithfulness and testimony." Rev. W. Cuff spoke onthe same subject. He remarked that the Church of Christ to-day was giving her attention to things that were not of the first importance. Let them, for instance, compare the time which the Church was giving to music with that which she was devoting to prayer. The Press was urging the Church to occupy herself more with social questions, and to feed the hungry and clothe the naked. Mr. H. F. Witherby spoke on the theory of evolution as propounded by Huxley and other scientists.

In the evening Mr. W. H. Seagram stated that meetings of the Bible League which had been held in other places throughout the country, had been attended with a gratifying amount of success, in waging war against the doctrine of doubt so largely prevalent with regard to the Divine authority of God's Word.

Rev. Principal Waller, D.D., spoke on "The necessity for full acceptance of God's testimony as contained in His Word." From the days that he studied at Oxford up to the present time, he had held the conviction that there was not a single syllable of Scripture but what one could absolutely trust. A person was reasonably and logically bound to accept the Bible as a whole if he was going to have any solid basis for his religious faith at all. The question to be decided was not whether they had got the Bible exactly as it was written in the first instance. If God had suffered variations of any kind to creep into it, that was his own doing, and they must accept it as it was. The concluding speaker was Rev. John Urquhart, who delivered an address on "The meaning of the present attack upon the Scriptures."

CONVENTION IN LIVERPOOL.

The annual Prophetical Convention, convened by Mr. H. D. Brandreth, was held in Hope Hall, Liverpool, from Tuesday to Friday of last week. As in former years, the Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures was the subject for the first day; God's dealings and purpose with Israel, on Wednesday; and on Thursday and Friday, the Lord's return. Mr. James E. Mathieson, London, presided on Tuesday and Wednesday, and afterwards the convener.

On Tuesday morning, the Chairman, as he always does, gave a lofty direction to the speakers by a short but earnest commentary on John xx. 19, onward. "Blessed are they which have not seen and yet have believed." That was their blessed position. They had not beheld the Lord with their bodily eyes, but they believed Him, and were looking for his appearing in the air to take his children to be for ever with Him in glory. In their relationship with the world they found their place clearly defined in Philippians iii.: "Our citizenship is in heaven." His politics were in heaven, and they were more engrossing to him than all earthly politics. He was looking for the Lord Jesus Christ to come from heaven to set all earthly politics right. They would never have good government until He came and took the government of the world into his hands.

Dr. Neatby spoke on Inspiration. Christ was the great subject of Scripture. For Him they were looking. What a stamp the Lord Jesus Christ put upon the Scriptures. They were the authority. They were the words of God, not only that the Word of God was contained in the Scriptures but they were the very Word of God. In all the Scriptures the testimony of God was of Christ, and He pointed every eye to Christ. Everything pointed to Christ. He held it to be in the nature of things absolutely certain that

THE WORD OF GOD PROVED ITSELF.

He wanted nothing outside the Bible to prove that it was the Word of God. The fact that such proof was needed would prove that it was not the Word of God.

Rev. J. Urquhart delivered a striking address, in which he showed how God had opened up the truth by sending men with ability to decipher the inscriptions upon the monuments and tombs of Egypt and Assyria and other countries. He severely criticised the statement of Dr. Driver that the book of Daniel must have been written a long time later than the time of Daniel. It had been stated that the use in the book of Daniel of Greek words for musical instruments demanded a later date than the period of the prophet. But there was one striking proof which God had given them to meet on this point the enemy within the gate. Eighty years before the time of Daniel, 650 B.C., a Greek poet and musician invented a Greek harp with seven strings, and there was indubitable proof that this Greek harp found its way to Babylon eight years before the time of Daniel.

At the afternoon meeting the Chairman spoke of the revival of Ritualism—so closely allied to Romanism. These errors were not confined to one church. They had

UNITARIANISM AVOWED AND UNITARIANISM CONCEALED.

Where were the people to go to find a church in which there was no danger of being led into grievous error? Religious history was repeating itself. The Apostle Paul foretold that in the latter times many should fall from the faith, and were they not now in the midst of those times?

Pastor Marsh spoke on the Silence of Scripture as a proof of its inspiration. There were many things on which the Word of God was silent. It was silent as to the origin of evil. To a large extent it was silent as to the future. It simply gave them one or two facts, and they accepted those facts. Sin met with eternal punishment; faith in Christ and fellowship with Him meant eternal blessedness. Basing his remarks on 1 Kings vi., he pointed out that there was an apparent discrepancy of ninety-three years, but if they would remember that this was a spiritual book given to spiritual people to be interpreted on spiritual lines, they would at once see that many things that appeared to be contradictions and discrepancies went to prove that there were many apparent contradictions which were confirmations of the Word of God. The apparent discrepancy of ninety-three years was accounted for by the fact that God never reckoned time with his people when they were out of fellowship with Him, and in the book of Judges they learned that the people of Israel were in captivity to their enemies exactly ninety-three years.

Rev. John Wilkinson spoke of the Living Word, and Rev. Dr. Bullinger followed with an instructive address on the Divine Perfection of the Word of God, as seen especially in the Numbers of the Bible.

There was a large attendance at the evening meeting, and stirring addresses were delivered by Pastor Fuller Gooch, Rev. J. Urquhart, and Mr. Carr, of New York.

On the Wednesday morning Rev. John Wilkinson prayed for the new Emperor of Russsia and his bride, and hoped that their hearts would be drawn towards all God's people in their empire.

Pastor Fuller Gooch spoke at length on the manner in which the Jews would return to their own land in unbelief, but they would not remain so, for they were told in the Word of God that "thy people shall be all righteous."

At the afternoon and evening meetings addresses on the Jews and God's purpose regarding them were delivered by Pastor Marsh, Mr. Carr, Dr. Neatby, Dr. Bullinger, Rev. John Wilkinson, and Rev. J. Smith, of Dufftown. The last-named reviewed the three recorded instances in which Christ raised the dead, and showed that they were in every respect typical of the glorious resurrection for which God's children were now waiting.

Rev. John Wilkinson delivered a touching address on the Christians' desire to see their Lord and Master face to face. But they must remember that, however much they desired to see Him He desired to see them a great deal more, and was waiting for the time when He could rise from his throne and come to gather his people together to be for ever with Him in glory. The times of the Gentiles are running out. All kinds of evidence lead us safely to infer that we are at just about the close of those times, without hinting at any date. When the times of the Gentiles had run out, what followed? There would be signs in the sun and moon and in the stars, and in the earth distress of nations with perplexity. Then shall the Son of Man appear in great glory. Some people said that Christ came at the destruction of Jerusalem, but this was not the coming at the destruction of Jerusalem. He was with Him into the glory. Many said that Christ came at death, but it was not death that they were looking for: it was the coming of a personal Christ. Christ was telling his people now not to be discouraged; He is coming. He might come at any moment.

COMING TO TAKE HIS PEOPLE

The Eastern Question would be settled by the Lord Jesus Christ at Jerusalem. The nations would be gathered together to battle in Jerusalem, and the Lord would come and fight against them, "and He shall stand in that day on the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east." The Jews were to be gathered in order that the world might be evangelised.

Pastor Marsh discussed the question,—Will the Church, or any portion of it, pass through the Great Tribulation? On this point they must be very careful as to the exact meaning of the Church. When he referred to it he meant those who had been called out by God and constituted the body of Christ. Christendom was not included in the Church. In Jeremiah xxx. the Great Tribulation was spoken of as the time of Jacob's trouble. The time of the Great Tribulation was the last half of the seventieth week spoken of by Daniel. Those who had been born of God were kept by the power of God. Those were the people who constituted the Church of God, and everything that was said of them in the Word of God corresponded to the description of those who, being found faithful, would escape all those awful things which were to happen in the future.

Mr. R. C. Morgan gave a general outline of the fall of angels and men, and of the coming kingdom.

Rev. Dr. Bullinger spoke at the evening meeting on the light of prophecy in a dark place. Many thought that prophecy was a dark thing in this world, and they would do well to let it alone: but the Scriptures taught that the world was the dark place, and that prophecy was a light shining in it. Every dispensation had ended in judgment, and the present dispensation would be no different.

Dr. Neatby spoke again on the coming of the Lord, and said that Christ might come in his glory before midnight; and the right attitude of the Christian was to be watching and waiting and longing for his appearing, and be doing those things which they would like to be found doing when He came.

On Friday morning Dr. Neatby continued the same subject, and spoke of Christ's coming as a purifying hope. It was an open secret of the Scriptures that they should not all die. He had known it for forty years, but many Christians did not seem to have got into the secret yet. Many said that the only thing certain was death, but he appealed to them to say such things no more. It was not certain that they would all die.

DEATH WAS NOT HIS EXPECTATION,

and he supposed he had as poor a lease of life as any present in that hall. He was not afraid of death. The King of Terrors had lost his sting. He did not want to die. We are not called to die, but to meet our Lord in the air without passing through the valley of death. It might be that he would die, and if any of them heard that he had been called away he begged that they would not say amongst themselves that he had told them that he would not die. He was looking for Christ to come and fetch him, according to his blessed Word.

Rev. Dr. Bullinger again spoke at the afternoon meeting, and was succeeded by Pastor Marsh, who continued his address on the Church in its relation to the great tribulation.

Mr. Morgan closed the afternoon meeting by a short address on the Jews, considering them from five points of view:—(1) as the slip of the vine of the earth which God took out of the wood and planted in a very fruitful hill; (2) as the family and nation that God separated from mankind that the Messiah might be born and all nations blessed; (3) the history of Israel as typical of the spiritual Israel; (4) the present condition of Israel and the penalty which they are suffering, and which has yet to come to a consummation; and (5) the future of Israel.

The closing meeting was characterised by the intense fervour of the very large audience.

Mr. Brandreth presided, and spoke a few words on the subject of eternal punishment, and, for the first time in the history of these conventions, protesting voices were raised from the audience by gentlemen who denied the doctrine of eternal punishment.

Rev. John Astley, of Llandudno, in a solemn and thrilling address, warned those who had raised the protest. There was a glorious heaven, and there was an awful hell. The worm was in the heart, and they carried it with them if they were not serving the Lord. The fire, too, was in the heart of those who would not come to Christ.

His words seemed deeply to touch the audience, and no further protests were heard.

Rev. J. Smith surveyed the addresses which had been delivered during the Convention in the hope of being able to give a practical direction to what had been said. It was high time for them to awake out of sleep, for their salvation was nearer than when they believed. Did they know what time it was on

GOD'S DISPENSATIONAL CLOCK?

If they did not know this time they would not realise as they ought to do their practical position. Turning to the 22nd, 23rd, and 24th Psalms, he said they were in the 23rd Psalm at the present time, going through the valley with their Shepherd, looking back to the cross and forward to the crown, obedient to the Shepherd who was leading them.

Mr. Carr concluded the meeting by an impressive address on the nearness of Christ's coming, and the vast audience seemed to hang upon his words, and almost refused to allow him to conclude. He had not stepped upon his feet for twenty-five years without pain; he knew what it was to suffer, but he thanked God that in the glory he would have a new body. The physicians had told him that he was killing himself by continuing this work, but he would rather die in this business than live in any other. He was looking forward to the time when he should have a body like unto Christ's glorious body, and he wished it would come to-night.

---

EACH AND EVERY ONE of us can strive to keep back from innocent childhood such savage enemies as pernicious literature, intemperance, and ignorance, and can help to throw around it all the protecting shield of education, morals, and religion. The love for one's own children, which has first grown beautiful in the home, can be made to become solicitous and grand in the great temple of humanity.—C. R. Crandall, M.D.

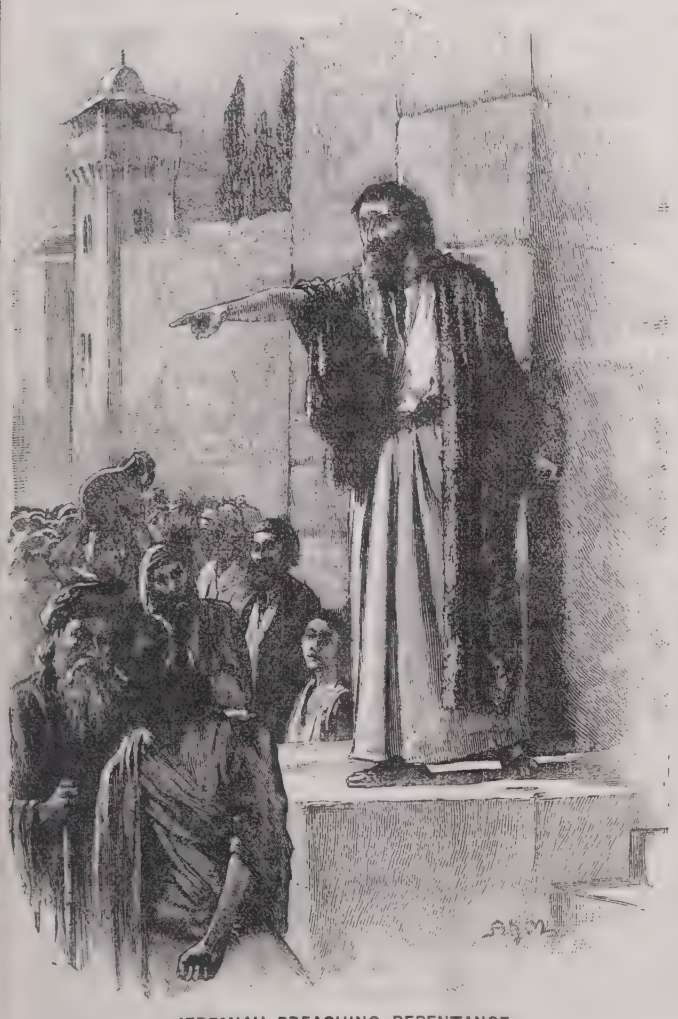
THE LIBRARY OF SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY, and all the other Volumes mentioned on this Page will form specially acceptable and handsome CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR PRESENTS.



JEREMIAH PREACHING REPENTANCE.
One of the Illustrations in Rev. F. B. Meyer's New Book, "Jeremiah."

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF

Scripture Biography.

CONSISTING OF THE FOLLOWING

Six Volumes

Bound in Library Style, in a Handsome Case:—

ABRAHAM: or, The Obedience of Faith.
ISRAEL: A Prince with God.
JOSEPH: Beloved—Hated—Exalted.
MOSES: The Servant of God.
ELIJAH: And the Secret of his Power.
JOSHUA: And the Land of Promise.

Each Volume contains NINE SPECIALLY PREPARED ENGRAVINGS.

PRICE 12/6 NET.

Postage 1s. extra.

Each of the above Volumes may be had separately.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT.

A NEW VOLUME OF SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY
BY
REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Jeremiah:

Priest and Prophet.

Just Published.

Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

With Nine Full-page Illustrations, Specially Prepared and Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

PRICES.
Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6
Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Top 3/6

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

JEREMIAH has always a fascination to Christian hearts, because of the close similarity that exists between his life and that of Jesus Christ. Each of them was "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief"; each came to his own, and his own received him not; each passed through hours of rejection, desolation and forsakenness. And in Jeremiah we may see beaten out into detail, experiences which, in our Lord, are but lightly touched on by the evangelists.

It is by no means an easy task to discern the true order of Jeremiah's prophecies. The clue to their present arrangement seems lost. Probably the chapters are grouped more according to subject than to chronology, those touching on the same topic being grouped together. In this book I have endeavoured, as far as possible, to follow the chronological sequence.

There is an especial message in the ministry of Jeremiah for those who are compelled to stand alone, who fall into the ground to die, who fill up what is behind of the sufferings of Christ, and through death arise to bear fruit in the great world of men, which they passionately love.

Uniform with "JEREMIAH."

SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHIES

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Abraham:
Or, the Obedience of Faith.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Record.
"A delightful book; full of experimental religion, and a most suitable present for any pure-hearted young man or woman whose desire to devote life to the service of the Great Master is sincere and fervent. The volume is a very decided help in climbing the steep and rugged path that leads to the land of delight."

Israel:
A Prince with God.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Primitive Methodist.
"Mr. Meyer has done his work well. He not only gives us the outward facts of Jacob's life, but he leads us to the inner springs from which they flowed. The book grips us, and helps us to understand ourselves. Fathers and Sunday-school teachers will do well to buy a copy for their boys."

Joseph:
Beloved—Hated—Exalted.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Friend.
"We can heartily recommend this book as full of helpful teaching happily and forcibly conveyed. Mr. Meyer speaks of the special charm which Joseph's life has had for him, not only for its intrinsic beauty, but because of its vivid anticipation of the Life that lights all lives. This thought is exemplified in a great variety of ways, and forms a prominent feature of the book."

Moses:
The Servant of God.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Methodist Times.
"An exquisite series of vignette studies in the life of the great Prophet and law-giver of the old dispensation—devotional in their character, and yet based upon the latest knowledge of criticism. This volume will be of especial service to much-pressed lay preachers, class readers, and Sunday-school teachers."

Joshua:
And the Land of Promise.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Irish Congregational Magazine.
"Mr. Meyer's book on Joshua is worthy of being placed beside the best book that has been written on the subject; it is calm, dignified, thoughtful, and deeply spiritual throughout, full of great truths, and avaluable companion for busy workers."

Elijah:
And the Secret of his Power.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Sword and Trowel.
"Good, exceedingly good. Mr. Meyer is a great gain to the armies of evangelical truth; for his tone, spirit, and aspirations are all of a fine gospel sort. In all his books there is a sweet savour, and in 'Elijah' it is specially prevalent."

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C d may be ordered of any Bookseller.

PUBLISHED BY MORGAN AND SCOTT.

WORKS BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

A REVIEW FROM "The Sunday School":—

"Messrs. Morgan and Scott are to be congratulated on having given us in 'THE BELLS OF IS' one of the best books of the season."

A CHARMING PIECE OF AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

The Bells of Is:

Or, Voices of Human Need & Sorrow.

LARGE OCTAVO SIZE.
Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

With Life-like Portrait of Rev. F. B. Meyer and Seven other Full-Page Engravings Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

PRICES.

Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6

Presentation Edition — Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Top 3/6

From The Freeman.

"Mr. Meyer's new volume is packed with thrilling incidents, which lose nothing by the grace and vigour of the style in which they are told. Some of the stories read aloud will provoke to mirth even the most stolid: while others can scarcely be read without tears. Preachers, Sunday-school teachers, and temperance speakers will find here many a suggestion and illustration, and philanthropists of many sorts will find shrewd advice."

A NEW VOLUME OF "The Christian" BIBLE READINGS.

Joshua to 2nd Kings.

NOTES AND READINGS.

Tinted Covers, 1/- Cloth limp, 1/6

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2/6

Other Volumes of "THE CHRISTIAN" BIBLE READINGS:

THE FIVE BOOKS OF MOSES: Genesis to Deuteronomy.
NOTES AND READINGS.
Tinted Covers, 1/-; Cloth Limp, 1/6.
Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2/6.

THE PSALMS:
NOTES AND READINGS.
Tinted Covers, 1/-; Cloth Limp, 1/6.
Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2/6.

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF

Devotional Works.

FORMING THE "CHRISTIAN LIFE" SERIES.

CONSISTING OF THE FOLLOWING FIVE VOLUMES—

CHRISTIAN LIVING.
THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE
THE FUTURE TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE.
THE SHEPHERD PSALM.
THE PSALMS.

Any of the above volumes may be had separately—

In Cloth Boards, 1/-

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 1/6

Except THE PSALMS, the prices of which are—

Cloth Boards, 1/6

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2/-

PRICES.

| In Cloth Boards, Library Style: In Neat Case. | In Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges: in a Handsome Case. |
|---|---|
| 5/- Net. | 7/6 Net. |

Postage 6d. extra in each case.

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF

Scripture Exposition.

CONSISTING OF THE FOLLOWING THREE VOLUMES—

THE WAY INTO THE HOLIEST:
Expositions of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

TRIED BY FIRE:
Expositions of the First Epistle of Peter.

THE LIFE AND LIGHT OF MEN:
Expositions of John I.—XII.

Any of the above volumes may be had separately—

Cloth Boards, 2/6

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3/6

Each Volume is bound in Library Style, and the three enclosed in a Handsome Case.

Price 6/6 Net.

Postage 7½d. extra.

The "F. B. Meyer" Libraries and the other Volumes mentioned on this Page will form Specially Useful and Attractive

CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR PRESENTS.

THE NEW YEARLY VOLUME.

"It would be difficult to present anything more attractive and readable." Divine Life.

The Herald of Mercy.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

CONTAINING Stirring Appeals, Striking Narratives, Choice Extracts, Biographical Sketches, Children's Pages, &c., &c.

"It is bright without and within. It is full of good pictures. It is well printed, and every line is laden with the good old story of Jesus and His love."—Baptist Messenger.

ATTRACTIVELY BOUND IN PICTORIAL BOARDS PRICE 1/-

"The Christian" SHEET ALMANACK For 1895.

Size 20 in. by 30 in. Printed in Colours.

ONE PENNY.

Sample Copy post free for THREE HALFPENCE.
Twelve Copies sent post free for 1s.
100 Copies sent post free for 7s. 6d.

This Almanack contains a specially selected TEXT FOR EACH DAY IN THE YEAR,
ALSO POSTAL AND OTHER INFORMATION,
And Nine Original Illustrations
Of various Scenes in the
LIFE OF DAVID.

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THE Y.M.C.A.

New Associations have been formed at Raglan and Crosskeys, Monmouthshire.

No less than twenty-nine clergymen and ministers in Islington and Highbury have been preaching special sermons to young men on behalf of Y.M.C.A. work.

The winter programme of the Bristol Association tells of vigorous and diversified work in the way of lectures, Bible-classes, and meetings—Gospel, educational, and social.

In connection with the universal week of prayer for young men, Mr. Henry Thorne, evangelist, conducted a series of special meetings at Bournemouth from the 18th to the 25th inst.

The Newcastle Association reports an average attendance of 240 at the Sunday afternoon Bible-class, and many tokens of good work. The early morning prayer-meeting is also well attended.

The annual Convention of the Pennsylvanian Associations showed progress in all parts of the State. The "Jubilee evening," held during the Conference, will long be remembered for its enthusiasm.

Mr. Justice Hensman presided over the third anniversary meeting of the Y.M.C.A. at Perth, Western Australia, accounts of which are just to hand. The Association is doing a very successful work.

Eighty young men attended the preliminary meeting of the newly-formed association at Stowmarket; a large room has been already engaged, and there appears to be a good prospect of success before the Association.

Prebendary Webb-Peploe addressed a crowded audience of men on Sunday week in the Association Hall, Oxford. At the evening meeting undergraduates conducted the service, and very searching and telling addresses were delivered.

Mr. Frederick B. Pratt, of New York, has been elected President of the American International Committee, to replace Mr. Elbert B. Monroe, who died a short time ago while discharging the functions he had only just recently accepted.

The Association at Rheims, France, has just successfully inaugurated a new building, which is centrally situated, and admirably adapted to the requirements of young men's work. The Nîmes Association has also entered excellent new premises.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Wimbledon Association was recently held at the Lecture Hall. The report, read by the secretary, Mr. Lomer, was interesting, and showed the valuable work this branch is doing. In response to an earnest appeal by Mr. W. A. Stead, £55 was collected during the evening.

The Madrid Association "Juventud Evangelica" desires to enter into relations with foreign Associations to claim their sympathy in efforts it is about to put forth to develop its work both at Madrid and in other towns of Spain. The secretary of the Association is Mr. Antonio Estruch, Calle Benificencia, 18, Madrid.

The first of a special series of delegates' meetings arranged by the north-west district was held at Ambleside under the chairmanship of Mr. John Fleming, president of the local Association. A good number of members assembled, and addresses were given by Mr. J. F. Curwen, district secretary, Mr. Harvey (Kendal), and the travelling secretary of the northern district, Mr. J. C. Moor.

The annual conference of the South Wales District Union was held in Newport under the presidency of Mr. John Cory, J.P., D.L., the president of the district. An encouraging report of the work of the past year was presented by the honorary district secretary, and cheering accounts of the Associations in different parts of the district were given by the delegates, of whom there was a large attendance.

Col. St. Quintin, president of the Woolwich Y.M.C.A., gave a conversazione to the members and friends at the Masonic Hall on Thursday evening. Over a hundred young men, and a few ladies, were present, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The Association, which is an old-established one, has suffered many vicissitudes, but it is believed this gathering will give the work an impetus. Woolwich affords an excellent sphere for Association work, as there are no fewer than fifteen thousand hands engaged at the Arsenal, more than half of whom are young men.

Mr. J. J. Virgo, secretary of the Adelaide Association, has been giving lectures to large Colonial audiences upon the subject of his visit to England and the Jubilee Conference. The associations in this country he describes as "very spiritual in their work, aggressive in their Gospel efforts, and enterprising in their endeavours to win young men to Christ." Those in America, many of which he also visited, he says are "less aggressive in evangelistic meetings, but exceedingly active in regard to personal effort among young men," reaching "a class which is scarcely touched in any part of the world." The Belfast Y.M.C.A. is enjoying a season of much spiritual blessing. The various Gospel meetings are crowded, and the Bible-classes report numerous decisions for Christ. On the Sunday nights there is scarcely room in the large hall for the cab and car men's meetings. The great Ulster Hall is overcrowded every Sunday afternoon at the united Gospel services of the Y.M.C.A., the addresses being delivered by the leading clergy of the city. Mr. Black, the secretary, has organised a Gospel mission for the postal telegraphic boys. A considerable number of them have professed conversion. The Open-Air Mission continues every week to hold services in the city.

THE Y.W.C.A.

THE WORK IN INDIA.

Princess House Y.W.C.A. Institute, 108, Brompton-road, S.W., was the scene of a very interesting gathering on Monday, Nov. 19, when a number of friends assembled to bid farewell to Miss Bethune and Miss Collins, who have lived and worked there for some years, and who are now going to take charge of the new Y.W.C.A. Institute at Calcutta.

The first to speak was the Hon. Emily Kinnaird, who read extracts from Miss Orlebar's (Y.W.C.A. missioner in Calcutta) letters, showing how marvellously God had led and blessed her since she took up Y.W.C.A. work there last autumn; of the extraordinary openings amongst the Eurasians and English-speaking girls, of the consequent need of more workers, and of the absolute necessity of having an Institute and home. All difficulties have at length been overcome, and a splendid house been opened as a home, in Free School-street. She concluded: "While our hearts are full of thankfulness for what has been done in Calcutta, we must not forget that the same awful need cries to us from Bombay, Madras, and, in fact, from all the great railway centres of India. May God open our eyes and our hearts to see this great responsibility."

Prayer having been offered, Miss Bethune and Miss Collins, each in turn, told how, at the recent quiet days at Morley Hall, they had heard the Master's voice, bidding them leave all they had hitherto known to carry his love to the neglected girls in Calcutta. Rev. Charles Fox gave a most encouraging address upon the Word Himself. God's work is everywhere, and when He calls one of his own to go forth we may know that He has another to fill the place. The need of Princess House is great; which of God's children will go and live there (having the means) at their own charges, and by blessing others be themselves enriched?

The evening meeting was presided over by Lord Kinnaird, who introduced Mr. H. Wilson, treasurer of Princess House, as the first speaker. It was but three years ago that Miss Bethune decided to devote her service, and time, and her talents to the work at Princess House, and through her quiet Christian influence peace and contentment reigned in the Home. Now the call has come to her to go out to India with Miss Collins, and no one has dared to ask her to change her mind. May God watch over them, take them to their new sphere of labour, comforting and sustaining them under all the difficulties of the work they are undertaking!

Mrs. Leeson followed with an interesting account of how she became president of the Calcutta Branch. It was through the Miss Kinnaird's visit that she was brought out of darkness into God's marvellous light, and the earnest longing to be engaged in definite work for the Master.

A stirring address on the need for more workers in Calcutta, and other parts of India, was then given, and the fact noted that no less than ten members from Princess House had gone forth into the mission field.

Miss Reynolds, who has lately arrived as the secretary of the World's Committee of Y.W.C.A., spoke of the joy it was to encircle the globe with such work.

The Hon. Mrs. Waller, correspondent for Indies Y.W.C.A., 316, Regent-street, will be glad to hear from any ladies offering personal or other service.

THE STORY OF CAPE JUBY.—The Anti-Slavery Reporter states that this British settlement on the North-West Coast of Africa, founded some eighteen years ago by Mr. Donald Mackenzie and others, is about to be enlarged in scope. A recent report says: "The success which has attended the settlers in their dealings with the natives is due very largely to the fact that they have consistently abstained from the introduction into the country of alcoholic drinks as well as modern firearms. They have never employed slaves, although these unfortunate beings are to be found in the district. They have always carried out a continuous policy without any variation, and have made it clear that they always intend to keep their engagements, and not to take advantage of the natives in any way."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

A Floating Society has been established among the Endeavourers of New South Wales.

In the Methodist Episcopal Church of Calcutta Endeavourers are doing a vigorous work.

At a united Christian Endeavour missionary meeting, held at Broadmead Chapel, Bristol, the Rev. D. J. Hiley presided, and gave an address.

Three societies in Ilfracombe (Baptists, Bible Christians and Congregationalists) held their first united anniversary in the Bible Christian Hall.

The first anniversary of the Hebden Bridge Hope Society has been held. The meetings were attended by about 800 people, representing twenty-six societies

Endeavour meetings are regularly conducted in Chicago in seven different languages—German, Dutch, Norwegian, Chinese, Bohemian, Welsh, and Swedish.

The latest C.E. comes from Paola, Kan., where the Endeavourers have placed in the city park a handsome seat on which is marked the time of the weekly prayer meeting.

The Normanton-road Society, Derby, started with eighteen members, and now numbers thirty active, sixteen associate, and four honorary. During the year, ten members had joined the Church.

The Endeavour Society of Boston, in co-operation with the Epworth League and the Baptist Union have been the means of stirring new interest in the missionary cause in Boston and its suburbs. About sixty missionary sermons have been preached.

All Endeavourers will be delighted to know that Dr. F. E. and Mrs. Clark are paying another visit to this country. They will be entertained at a breakfast on the morning of Tuesday, Dec. 4, and on the evening of that day will address a public meeting in the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

The first anniversary of Cambridge-street (Baptist) C.E. Society, Glasgow, has been held. The pastor, Rev. E. Last, presided at the public meeting. Reports were given, showing that the membership has been steadily increasing during the year. There are eighty active members on the senior roll, and thirty in the junior. Short addresses bearing on the different clauses of the pledge were given by eight of the members, also by Rev. Chas. Robson.

NOTES FROM BOURNEMOUTH.

There are abundant signs of life and activity in Christian work in Bournemouth. Rev. J. Ossian Davies has celebrated the third anniversary of the opening of his handsome building. The meeting was of a most enthusiastic character, and the work of the church continues to be prosecuted with considerable vigour.

The less prominent, but hardly less important, work of Pastor R. B. Morrison, of Upper Parkstone, was also marked by a celebration last week. He labours among the working-men of Bournemouth, but for whom no homes are provided in the town itself. It is three years since the new building was opened, and the work was never more hearty and prosperous than now. The people have a mind both to pray and to work. A revival seems to be at hand.

Mr. Henry Thorne has been conducting meetings at the Y.M.C.A. The attendances have not been large, but good has been done. His recent mission at the West Cliff Tabernacle has left excellent results behind. The increased attendance at the week-night services and the manifest life and activity in every department of Christian work prove that the mission has not been in vain. Of the enquirers during the mission, some have already been proposed as associate members of the Christian Endeavour Society, at which the attendance last week reached the number of eighty.

The Hampshire Federation of Free Churches also held its first annual conference in this town last week. The object of the Federation is to strengthen the Free Churches, and to help the village churches in various ways. The report given last Thursday did not tell of much work done, but the organisation is at present perfecting its machinery, and hopes to give a better account of itself next year. The discussion in the afternoon on "The Parish Councils Bill" was very interesting and profitable, and the public meeting at night was valuable, because of the speech of Rev. J. M. G. Owen on "The Nonconformist Conscience," and that of Rev. J. Oates on "Sacerdotalism." Both utterances were timely.

GREENWICH.—Under the auspices of the South London Christian Institution, the Greenwich Theatre was crowded on Sunday week, for the first of a series of Gospel services, to be held during the winter months. It is hoped that by means of these services a class may be reached who are not usually to be found in churches or chapels.

The Book World.

ANNUAL VOLUMES.

The Mother's Friend. Vol. VII. of the new and enlarged series is bright and useful. The serials include "The Diary of Madame Elizabeth" and "A Story of the First Hospital." There are contributions on domestic service and home life; and many other very practical and helpful items. (1s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton.)

The Fireside Annual is as attractive as ever. Among the very readable series of sketches are "Æsop in England," by Rev. Dr. S. B. James; "Ins and Outs," by H. Somerset Bullock, B.A.; and "Tales of the Night," by W. T. Stratton. The very helpful pen of the editor, Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D., has done much for the volume. There are wholesome stories by Edward Garrett, Agnes Giberne, and the late Emily Sarah Holt; the story of Sir Thomas Browne is told by Emma Marshall; and Sunday readings are given by various Evangelical preachers. (7s. 6d. "Home Words" Office).

SCOTTISH IDYLLS.

Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush. (6s. Hodder & Stoughton.) Without controversy, Ian Maclaren's prose idylls, delineating peasant life in Central Scotland, which are collected in this volume, are masterpieces, and are destined to literary immortality. If anything finer and more true to the best elements of Scottish character has been written, it has not come within our ken. The author has stated that the portraits he has drawn are pure creations, but the knowing reader instinctively feels that these sketches are real photographs without a spice of idealism about them. The critic will not discover a strained or jarring note in the music, whether it be in the major or the minor key. Verily the truths embodied in these tales are well fitted to "enter in at lowly doors," but they will also yield satisfaction to the man of profoundest intellect. We heartily wish they may be read alike in lordly halls and by cottage firesides, wherever the braw Scottish tongue is sufficiently known to be understood and appreciated. We do not envy the person who can read them "with a dry heart," or even with dry eyes and unquickened pulse. We will venture to parody a famous ballad and to prophesy that by coming generations

> With weeping and with laughter,
> Still is the story told,
> How well the doctor fought with death
> In the brave days of old.

Themes and Variations, by Mrs. James Glenny Wilson ("Austral"), Rangitsikei, New Zealand (Elliot Stock), is a little volume of bright poetry. The writer passes from grave to gay, and is always stimulating as well as entertaining,

The Islet o'er the Sea, and other poems, by "H. H.," a little volume of choice verse, has reached a second edition, revised and enlarged. Dr. J. Murray Mitchell writes an introductory note. The author has spiritual perception as well as the poetic faculty. (Elliot Stock.)

The Boy's Own Paper. The Christmas number (6d. Religious Tract Society) is a repository of striking stories and sketches fully illustrated. Young people will read it through with great zest. The Christmas issue of the companion work, The Girl's Own Paper (6d.), is very seasonable in its contents, and attractively got up.

Archie Mackenzie. By J. Macdonald Oxley. (3s. 6d. Religious Tract Society.) No boy or girl can fail to be interested in this book; it is full of adventure, but has the right ring through it. Archie Mackenzie is the son of the factor in one of the Nor'-West Fur Trading Forts. The story relates many exciting hunts after buffalo and other wild animals, but the interest culminates in the capture of the factor himself by his enemy at a rival fort, and in the rescue by his own son.

Mr. Spurgeon on the Second Coming of Christ. Twelve sermons by the departed pastor on this great theme have been reissued. (Passmore & Alabaster. 1s.) Seeing that these, in delivery, range over a period of thirty years, it is very interesting to observe how increasing emphasis is laid on truths concerning the return of Christ. Mr. Spurgeon ever refused to rank himself as a teacher in prophetic subjects; but none the less, as these sermons show, he cherished the hope of the Church warmly.

Calvinism Popularised. By H. A. Long. (3s. 6d. Nisbet & Co.) Harry Long and his sturdy championship, on Glasgow Green, of the Protestant faith are familiar as household words to every "Glasgow chiel." Throughout his long career he has held and vigorously maintained the doctrines of sovereign grace; and now in his old age he sends forth this volume developing, in dialogue form, that view of truth which he has so stoutly held and so earnestly taught. Even those who cannot accept his particular exposition will hear with respect what this aged and devoted servant of Christ has to say in defence of the doctrines he holds dear.

Lyrics of a Long Life. By Newman Hall. (3s. 6d. Nisbet.) During many years the muse of Dr. Newman Hall has been productive of "psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs"; and in this goodly volume they constitute a collection likely to appeal to all tastes in the household of faith. "Mountain Musings" and "Children's Hymns" are not the least attractive sections. Many of the pieces are suited for public worship, and some designed for private devotion. "Sacred Songs in Cloud and Sunshine" will be found to interpret the experiences of many a suffering and rejoicing servant of God. This is a welcome volume, which many would be delighted to receive as a Christmas present.

---

Messrs. Cassell & Co. have issued the first monthly number of The Paris Mode (6d.). A special feature of this publication will be the presentation to purchasers of free patterns cut to their own measurement.

Fellowship, a weekly journal concerning holiness and the possibilities of the spiritual life, is the title of a new paper to be edited by Rev. J. Gregory Mantle. The publisher is H. R. Allenson, of Paternoster-row.

The Minister's Pocket Diary and Clerical Vade Mecum, 1895. For the nineteenth year this publication is before the public. It is a very useful pocket companion. (2s. and 3s., according to binding. Hodder & Stoughton.)

The life of Bishop J. S. Hill, of the Niger, will be published early in December by Mr. H. R. Allenson. Miss R. E. Faulkner is the author. Any profits are to be given to the Niger Mission. There will be three portraits of Bishop Hill.

---

BOOKS RECEIVED.

From Nisbet & Co.—The Holiest of All: An Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, by Rev. Andrew Murray (7s. 6d.); Great Principles of Divine Truth, by the late Rev. Edward Hoare, M.A., Canon of Canterbury, edited by Rev. J. Gurney Hoare (6s.); Youth's Ideals, by Rev. J. Reid Howatt (1s.)

CAMBRIDGE NOTES.

[From our own Correspondent.]

On Sunday morning last Principal Moule continued his series of Bible readings on the Epistle to the Ephesians, taking as a starting point Eph. ii. 6. He dwelt upon the nearness of the believer to his Lord; In Christ Jesus gives union, together with Him gives association in details. About eighty men were present.

The Hon. and Rev. Talbot-Rice gave a searching address at the Alexandra Hall in the evening, the subject being 2 Chron. xxix. 5. The speaker pointed out the wonderful way in which Hezekiah was used by God to bring Israel back from their sin. (1) God puts it into the mind of Hezekiah to purify the Temple. (2) Hezekiah offers a sin-offering as an atonement for all Israel. (3) Israel begin to sing praises with gladness. (4) They keep the Passover for seven days. (5) They keep seven other days for joy. (6) They go out and destroy all the idols in the land.

A meeting of the Nonconformists' Union was held on Sunday night. Mr. Wm. Reason, of Mansfield Hall, addressed the meeting on "University Settlements and the Drink Question."

On Monday, November 19, the annual meeting of the Church of England Homes for Waifs and Strays (Cambridge branch), was held in the Guildhall, the Bishop of Ely being in the chair. The meeting was well attended, and great interest was displayed.

On the same evening the C.E.T.S. (St. Matthew's branch) annual tea and meeting was held in the schoolroom, Norfolk-street. Rev. J. Hargrove presided, and Rev. A. E. Humphreys gave a very encouraging address.

The Refuge for Women in Cambridge held its annual meeting on Friday last in the Guildhall. The vice-chancellor, Rev. Austin Leigh, presided, being supported by many of the professors of the University and masters of the colleges. From the report we gathered that an excellent work is being done amongst those poor women for whom the Home is intended.

On Sunday last Bishop Barry continued his Hulsean Lectures in the University Church.

---

CHEDDAR.—A fifteen days' mission (November 11 to 25) has been held at Christ Church, Cheddar. The services were conducted by Mr. Murch, of the Evangelisation Society. Night after night the attendances were encouraging. The services were devoid of all sensationalism, the addresses were simply declarations of the Gospel message, forcibly and faithfully set forth with the paramount desire that the way of salvation might be made so clear that none may fail to lay hold of it. This was a united Gospel Mission arranged for by the authorities of Christ Church—a church devoted to Evangelical work and established as an antidote to Ritualism. It has been, as might have been expected, opposed, but has hitherto been sustained.—W. P. B.

IRISH NOTES.

Gospel services have been held in Strabane by Mr. J. Brandon; in Castlewellan by Rev. R. Butler; and in Agnes-street Church, Belfast, by Mr. J. H. Moran.

Rev. Geo. C. Grubb has conducted a short series of meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life in Carnlough Methodist Church, to the delight and profit of many who attended.

A series of Saturday evening meetings for the people has been commenced by Rev. W. A. Smyth, in Kingsland Park Church, Dublin, and is likely to be the means of much blessing in the neighbourhood.

A three days' conference on the deepening of spiritual life has just been held in Patrick-street Methodist Church, Cork. The principal speakers were Revs. William Gorman, of Belfast, and William Crawford, of Dublin.

A successful Sunday-school conference, attended by a large number of teachers from the surrounding districts, and held under the auspices of the Sunday School Society for Ireland, has taken place in Carnew Parish School House. Amongst others, a helpful address was given by Rev. Dr. Todd, secretary of the Society.

REV. HAY AITKEN IN CHELSEA.

The mission conducted by Rev. W. Hay Aitken in the parish church of St. John's, Chelsea, has been attended with the most happy results. The parish occupies the site of old Cremorne Gardens, and has a population of over 15,000 souls, for the most part working people and poor.

Very thorough and careful preparation had been made—for more than six months a daily prayer-meeting was held, and a thorough visitation of the parish made before the mission began on Nov. 11; while a large band of devoted workers helped in every possible way to make the services known and induce the careless to attend. Each night before the service a band of workers held open-air meetings in the streets. The result was that, with God's blessing, large numbers attended the services. Some hundreds professed to have received great spiritual benefit, and very many were led to give themselves to God. Special services were held for men only, with great profit, while the addresses on the spiritual life were largely attended.

One of the most pleasing features of the mission was the remarkable work carried on among the children. A special service was held for them daily in church, conducted by Rev. H. Jones, who was well supported by the Sunday-school teachers. The interest was well maintained throughout the fortnight, 300 to 400 attending each day.

Special meetings were conducted daily for women by Mrs. Crouch, not without signs of blessing.

The mission was closed on Monday, the 26th, with special thanksgiving services, which were largely attended. The vicar, Rev. F. W. A. Wilkinson, and his curates and fellow workers have cause for great thankfulness to God for the blessing vouchsafed during the mission.

THE RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

The Wheatsheaf, Vauxhall, was crowded on Saturday evening, Nov. 17, to hear a lecture on "Diving and Delving," or the fifty years' work of the Ragged School Union. The pictures—many taken from life and illustrative of various phases of slumdom and the agencies to uplift its denizens—were much appreciated, as were also the descriptive accounts given by the lecturer.

At the Camberwell Ragged Schools the parents' annual tea on Monday week was largely attended. Mr. W. J. Orsman, as Chairman of the R.S.U., presided. An address was given by Rev. J. Carnegie Brown, and a brief report of the Sunday-school was given by Mr. John Kirk, who for nearly twenty years has acted as honorary secretary of this much-blessed institution. The superintendents, Mr. C. A. Park and Mr. Christison, urged the co-operation of the parents in winning the children for Christ.

Fifty-one years is a long period in the life of any institution or individual. Such is the record of the Lamb and Flag Ragged School Mission, which, after varying changes, is still at work amongst the poor children of Clerkenwell. The Mission premises in Red Lion-street have been rebuilt, through the parent Ragged School Union, and now form a perfect hive of useful agencies and good work, which the London City Mission shares. The original committee lapsed through death and removal, and for some years there has been an honorary superintendent. It has now been resolved to re-form the committee, under good auspices, to give more stability to the Mission.

MESSRS.

NELSON'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete List post free on application.

Price 5/- — A new Concordance to the Holy Scriptures.

THE COMPREHENSIVE CONCORDANCE TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES. By Rev. J. B. R. WALKER. Based on the Authorised Version. Containing Fifty Thousand more References than Cruden's Concordance. With Introduction on the GROWTH OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE by Dr. WILLIAM WRIGHT, of the British and Foreign Bible Society, London: and a BIBLIOGRAPHY OF CONCORDANCES by Dr. M. C. HAZARD. 990 pages. 8vo cloth.

"One of the best in the English language."—CHRISTIAN COMMONWEALTH.

"This is by far the best Concordance in the Market."—PRESBYTERIAN.

"Cannot but prove of great service."—THE CHRISTIAN.

5/- — JUST ISSUED. NEW AND IMPROVED EDITION. With numerous additional Illustrations and the Results of the most Recent Discoveries.

ILLUSTRATED BIBLE DICTIONARY and Treasury of Biblical History, Biography, Geography, Doctrine, and Literature. By M. G. EASTON, M.A., D.D. With over 200 Illustrations, Maps, Plans, &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra.

"For accurate scholarship, reliable information, and spiritual insight, we can thoroughly recommend this volume."—WORD AND WORK.

6/- — New Story of Adventure by TALBOT BAINES REID.

KILGORMAN: A Story of Ireland in 1798. By TALBOT BAINES REID, Author of "The Fifth Form at St. Dominic's," "The Willoughby Captains," "Follow my Leader," &c. Illustrated by John Williamson. With Portrait and an "In Memoriam" Sketch of the Author by John Sime. Crown 8vo, cloth extra.

5/- — New Historical Tale by E. EVERETT-GREEN.

SHUT IN: a Tale of the Wonderful Siege of Antwerp in the year 1585. By E. EVERETT-GREEN, Author of "In the Days of Chivalry," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra.

2/6 AND 3/6 — Miniature Edition.

COME YE APART: Daily Readings in the Life of Christ. By the Rev. J. R. MILLER, D.D. Miniature Edition. Printed in red and black on Antique Paper. Cloth elegant, gilt edges, price 2s. 6d.; paste grain, gilt edges, price 3s. 6d.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS,
35 and 36, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.; Parkside, Edinburgh; and New York.

SECOND AND ENLARGED EDITION. ADMIRABLY SUITED FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

IN THE FAR EAST,

By GERALDINE GUINNESS (Mrs. Howard Taylor).

A Valuable Book on CHINA and the CHINESE, with Map, Portrait, and many beautiful illustrations of Chinese Life. Mr. Spurgeon said of it:—"The book should send armies of believers to invade the Flowery Land."

In Ornamental Paper Boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition, 3s. 6d.

MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. Or direct from Publication Dept., Harley House, Bow, E.

CHEPSTOW CHIPS;

OR, O'ER TRUE TALES.

Specially adapted for distribution amongst Working Men.

2s. per 100. Packets 1 to 7, each containing 25 Booklets, assorted, 6d. per packet.

PACKET 6. 41.—Number 17 Ward. 42.—You all know Me. 43.—A Sprint Runner. 44.—A Changed Man. 45.—How a Farrier was Won. 46.—R.H.A. 47.—A Flare-up. 48.—A Sunday Hunt.

PACKET 7. 49.—How the Answer Came. 50.—Can't Find Old England. 51.—A Deserter's Story. 52.—That's Worth While. 53.—The Last Glass. 54.—Find the Winner. 55.—Hell-fire Jack. 56.—An Italian Brigand's Story.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling.
S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co., London.

NEW BOOKLET
By the REV. F. S. WEBSTER, M.A.

THE SWEETNESS OF PARDON
(Thoughts on the Thirty-second Psalm).
SIXPENCE.

C. CASWELL, EDMUND STREET, BIRMINGHAM.
List of Season Publications on application.

Choirmasters, Post a Card
To J. CURWEN & SONS,
8 and 9, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.
And receive by return their new Catalogue of Christmas Cantatas, Anthems, Carols, Children's Songs, etc.

MESSRS. MORGAN AND SCOTT,
12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, LONDON, E.C., WILL SEND THEIR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
POST FREE UPON APPLICATION.

BIBLES. BIBLES. BIBLES.
Wonderful Value. Catalogues Gratis.

THREE SPECIAL TEACHER'S BIBLES—
Pearl, 24mo, Refs. Persian Morocco, kid-lined, red gold edges, silk sewn. Usual price, 8s. 6d.; for 4s. 6d.
Minion, 16mo, Refs. French Morocco, yapp, red gold edges, round corners. Usual price, 11s. 6d.; for 6s. 9d.
Bourgeois, 16mo, Refs. Persian Morocco, yapp, silk sewn, kid-lined, round corners, red under gold edges, magnificent print. Usual price, 21s.; for 11s. 3d.
All post free from the BIBLE AND BOOK SALOON, 57, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.'s BOOK SALOONS,

8 & 9, PATERNOSTER ROW
(No. 9, up the Passage),
Contain the largest and most varied collections of
NEW BOOKS FOR THE SEASON, ANNUALS, CHRISTMAS CARDS, &c.
Conveniently arranged for inspection.

New Illustrated Catalogue Post Free.

CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR.

Christmas Cards.

The Best Shilling Packets ever Offered.

"Messrs. Thridgould and Co.'s Packets are Marvels of Cheapness, Beauty, and Variety, and they deserve the highest praise, being as perfect as it is possible to imagine or produce.—Ladies' Journal of Fashion."

1s. — No. 1. Santa Claus Packet. Fifty Cards, Eclipses all previous Value, well Assorted with Seasonable Verses and Greetings. The best Shilling Packet when quantity is required. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. — No. 2. Goodwill Packet. Twenty-five very pretty 1d., 2d., and 3d. Cards, including several very good Novelties, also Folding shaped and Autograph. A very welcome packet where Quantity and Quality are required. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. — No. 3. Christmas Chimes. A Prize Packet of Twelve very handsome Cards, including Jewelled, Folding Autograph Cards, Relief Edge, Embossed and "Ideal" shaped Cards. Also many Novelties which alone are worth more than the price charged for the whole. All will be delighted with this selection. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. — No. 7. Mizpah Messages. A choice Packet. Six most Beautiful Floral Cards, with carefully chosen Religious Verses by Frances Ridley Havergal, including a very pretty booklet by Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Son. Appropriate for the Season. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. — No. 8. Three 1s. Autograph Booklets. Elaborate Designs and Jewelled, Highly Finished, with Silk Cord and Tassels, Gold and Silver blocked. "FAITH," by Frances Ridley Havergal. "PROMISES," by Charlotte Murray. "GOD BLESS YOU," by same Author. Published by Raphael Tuck, and are well worth 1s. each. The three sent, post paid, 1/1.

THE FINE ART HALF-GUINEA BOX.
10/6 Worth of Cards for HALF-A-CROWN.
A Combination of Good Taste, Artistic Merit, and Unequalled Value (vide Press).

Our Superb Selection of Best Cards contains a splendid variety of Twenty-five Rich Designs, most graceful and charming Cards. This Season's Selection is certainly the best we have ever had the pleasure of offering, comprising Cards from the value of Twopence to Ninepence each, including Jewelled, Frosted, Novel Shaped and Cut-out Cards, Elegant Folding and Model Cards, Ideal, Irradiant, and Tabletine Cards, all of the very best description, with carefully selected verses and quotations from celebrated Authors. Sent, Parcels Post paid, 2/9, or Two Differently Assorted, 5/-. 2/6

Special Parcels and Orders as hitherto will receive our best and prompt attention.

☞ Shopkeepers should send for Wholesale Catalogue and Samples of Christmas Cards, Novelties, &c., post free, Three Stamps.

JOHN THRIDGOULD & CO.,
18 and 20, Sidney street, Commercial-road, London, E.
(ESTABLISHED 1851.)

Messrs. ISBISTER'S NEW LIST.

NEW ANNUAL VOLUMES.

Royal 8vo, gilt edges, 7/6 — GOOD WORDS, 1894. Edited by DONALD MACLEOD, D.D., and containing S. BARING GOULD'S New Three-Volume Story, KITTY ALONE, Short Stories by BRET HARTE, W. E. NORRIS, L. B. WALFORD, W. CLARK RUSSELL, LANOE FALCONER, and others,

And Articles by The Bishop of Winchester, Sir R. S. Ball, LL.D., Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P., the Dean of York, Sir Wm. H. Flower, LL.D., the Dean of Gloucester, Archdeacon Sinclair, D.D., Justin McCarthy, M.P., "Shirley," John Hunter, D.D., George Matheson, D.D., Katharine Hinkson, Wm. Canton, Augustus Jessopp, D.D., the Editor, &c., &c, With over 300 Illustrations by Gordon Browne, Alex. Ansted, Lockhart Bogle, W. H. Overend, A. J. Goodman, Charles Whymper, F. H. Townsend, Herbert Railton, and others.

Royal 8vo, gilt edges, 7/6 — THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE, 1894. Edited by the Rev. BENJAMIN WAUGH, and containing ANNIE S. SWAN'S New Three-Volume Story, A LOST IDEAL.

And Articles by Archdeacon Farrar, D.D., Precentor Venables, M.A., Professor J. P. Mahaffy, D.D. Canon Atkinson, D.C.L., Rev. Professor H. C. Shuttleworth, M.A., Julia Wedgwood, Canon T. Teignmouth Shore, M.A., L. T. Meade, Professor W. T. Gairdner, M.D., Wm. Wright, D.D., Canon Liddell, M.A., J. Monro Gibson, D.D., R. F. Horton, D.D., Professor T. M. Lindsay, D.D., G. F. Pentecost, D.D., the Editor, &c., &c. With 12 Coloured Plates and 300 Illustrations by G. F. Watts, R.A., Sir E. Burne-Jones, Fred Morgan, F. G. Kitton, C. E. Brock, C. W. Wyllie, A. S. Boyd, &c., &c.

NEW CHRISTMAS STORIES.

GOOD CHEER, 1894. Price 6d. (the Christmas Number of "GOOD WORDS") containing:

The Minister's Dog. By Maarten Maartens.
The Interregnum in Fairy Land. By John Davidson.
The Laird's Daughter. By Alexander Gordon.
An Emigrant. By Katharine Tynan-Hinkson.
"The Fool" of the Four Corners. By G. B. Burgin.
Held in Ambush. By Edwin Whelpton.
A Strange Expiation. By Geoffrey Winterwood.
Robin Goodfellow. By John Reid.
How He Came Out at the Other Side. By William Canton.

With numerous Illustrations by A. J. Goodman, H. R. Millar, W. D. Almond, F. Feller, C. E. Brock, W. Thomas Smith, and others.

PATHS OF PEACE, 1894. Price 6d. (the Christmas Number of "THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE"), containing: A GREAT INDISCRETION. A New Complete Story. By EVELYN EVERETT-GREEN, Author of "The Doctor's Dozen," &c. Illustrated by James Greig.

ISBISTER & CO., LIMITED, Covent Garden, London.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. William Noble has been holding successful meetings in Wiltshire at Calne and Marlborough, as well as in Lincoln and London, during the past week.

Mr. Henry Smith has completed his third mission at the Wesleyan Chapel, Upleatham, where much blessing was again vouchsafed. He is now evangelising at the Mission Sanctuary, Leeds.

Mr. Wm. Day has concluded a sixteen days' mission at Bloomsbury Institute, Birmingham, which God has used in blessing to many. An address on the "Tabernacle in the Wilderness," illustrated by diagrams, was greatly appreciated.

Rev. D. H. Moore, of Barking, has closed a most encouraging mission in Auckland Hall, West Norwood. Much interest has been aroused, and many sinners awakened and compelled to seek refuge in Christ. Altogether it has been a time of reviving.

Mr. Monro Collings has concluded an interesting ten days' mission at Leigh, Tonbridge. Notwithstanding the floods and unfavourable weather the meetings were well attended, some walking four miles after a hard day's work. Souls have been brought to Christ, and Christians have been helped and refreshed. A. T. Fisher.

Mr. Charles Minor is doing good work in and about New York city. At a great free supper meeting on Friday night, Nov. 9, he did good service. Four hundred working-men out of employment listened to his words, and at the after-meeting more than fifty came forward for prayer, and many were converted. It was a scene never to be forgotten. H. H. Hadley.

Mr. John H. Cooke, of the Evangelisation Society, conducted mission services in the Congregational Church, Sutton Valence, from Nov. 4 to 18. They were well attended, and increasing interest was shown. At most of the meetings one or more declared themselves willing to accept Christ as their Lord and Saviour. The converts were chiefly young people. W. H.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has been conducting a united mission at New Barnet in connection with the Presbyterian and Congregational churches. There was hearty co-operation on the part of the pastors and the choirs. It has also been a means of spiritual quickening to the churches, and the ingathering of young people. Mr. Balgarnie commences on Saturday a mission at Eastbourne.

Cranbrook, Kent.—Mr. Bray, of the Evangelisation Society, has been conducting a three weeks' mission in the Congregational Church. His earnest and powerful addresses have been very helpful to believers, and have also, we believe, led many to Christian decision, and have left impressions which will, we hope, produce much good fruit. C. Chandler, Pastor.

Mr. G. W. Clegg, now residing at Camborne, has been holding mission services at Crelly, Helston, for three weeks. God has greatly blessed his labours in the salvation of souls. Mr. Clegg not only conducts the services, but is continually visiting the people in their homes. He is a man of prayer and of faith, and full of the Holy Ghost. Crelly people will never forget the blessing they received during this mission.

Mr. E. P. Telford.—The special twelve days' mission which commenced in Penge Tabernacle on November 18 is increasing in power and blessing. Already some 300 names have been recorded by those who have passed into the inquiry room seeking salvation. Large audiences assemble nightly. The pastor and others are working vigorously, and the closing days of the mission are expected to yield much fruit. A. McLatchie.

Hull.—A fortnight's mission was commenced on October 27 at the Y.W.C.A., when we had the pleasure of welcoming Miss Haddon to conduct the meetings. At the morning prayer-meetings the attendance was only small. The afternoon Bible-readings were much appreciated and well attended. At the evening evangelistic meetings there was much blessing received. Though this branch has not been long established, we believe the blessing of the Lord is on the work, and we go forward in his strength hopefully. F. H. and R. S.

The Weaver Brothers have concluded a mission at Helensburgh, N.B., where the Lord has been blessing the word with convicting and converting power. From the first night there were anxious ones seeking the way of salvation; but as the meetings went on the interest increased, so that on the second Sabbath the Victoria Hall, the largest in the town, was packed to overflowing, many having to stand all the time. The Christian workers have been greatly cheered by seeing many of those in whom they were interested, and for whom they have long prayed, being brought to decide for Christ.

Mr. Charles Cook held last week a special mission for young men at the Westbourne Grove Y.M.C.A. rooms, 172, Queen's-road. Night after night the workers have had the joy of pointing not a few to the Saviour. There have, in fact, been some remarkable cases of conversion. The secretary writes:—"We shall not soon forget Tuesday evening, when the missioner spoke with solemnity from the words of the Lord Jesus—'In danger of eternal damnation.' A profound sense of God's presence was experienced throughout the meeting, and a number of young men remained behind until nearly half past ten to be dealt with personally. On Saturday evening a prayer-meeting was held at Hyde Park Hall, when a number of letters were read from some who had been brought to Christ during the week, while many who were then present gave testimony to the saving power of the Lord Jesus. We are still receiving letters from young men who have been convicted of sin. Walter Wild."

---

Mr. W. Bacon, 38, West-square, Southwark, S.E., is open for engagements in and around London.

Mr. J. Albinson, whose present address is 40, Kent-street, Fleetwood, Lanc., will be in London after first week in January, when he is open to engagements.

Clarendon Chapel, Camberwell New-road.—Mr. F. C. Spurr commences a fortnight's mission on Sunday next. Miss Ada Rose will sing at all meetings.

PERSONALIA.

Alderman J. Duckworth, J.P., president of the United Methodist Assembly, has been seriously ill, but is now convalescent.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, Mrs. Hughes, and a friend have been staying at Venice. Mr. Hughes, who is benefiting largely from his Italian sojourn, has preached in the Scottish Church, Piazza San Marco (Rev. Dr. Robertson's).

Rev. J. D. Kilburn is on a visit to Finland. At Helsingfors he has addressed two, and sometimes three, meetings daily. The students at the University, and the prisoners at the country prison, have heard the Gospel from Mr. Kilburn's lips.

Mr. J. J. Sims, who has been preaching with much blessing in the East of London during the past month, commences on Sunday next a three months' ministry at Kilburn Hall, Kilburn Gate, on Sundays and Thursdays. He hopes to give a series of six addresses on the Lord's Second Coming.

Mr. Henry Varley writes from Brindisi on the eve of embarkation. He is full of hope and courage. Referring to the future he says: "I hope to return to England in May next. I believe the battle is to be fought out in England. There is the centre. Let good, and right, and truth win with you in London, and all is well."

The Baroness Wrede, whose work among the criminals of Finland is well known, has had a serious illness, contracted through nursing a dying prisoner. She is still far from strong, but is back again at her much-loved work, in which God is greatly blessing her. She not only attends to the men in the prisons, but to their families at home, some of whom are reduced to great destitution.

Miss Ida B. Wells is having a most successful campaign in the Northern States, thanks to the vantage ground which she found in London. Wherever she goes anti-lynching committees are springing up, and signatures are being rapidly collected in support of the motion of Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, for the appropriation by Congress of £5000, in order to investigate the causes of lynching, and devise a remedy.

Mrs. Josephine Butler has just published (through Messrs. Horace Marshall and Son, Temple House, E.C.), a small volume of Scriptural studies, under the title of "The Lady of Shunem." (2s. 6d.) Mrs. Butler has written this book for fathers and mothers, more especially for mothers, and without being didactic she takes certain Old Testament stories, like that of "The Lady of Shunem," and directs attention to those great and unchangeable principles which can never, with impunity, be neglected in the attitude of parents towards their children. Mrs. Butler hopes her friends will help in making the book known.

Dr. H. R. Reynolds has resigned the office of Principal of Cheshunt College, after having held it for nearly thirty-four years. This step was necessitated by the condition of Dr. Reynolds's health, which has of late caused much anxiety and prevented anything like close attention to the work of the college. At a meeting of the subscribers and friends of the institution last week, Professor Whitehouse said that weak and irregular action of the heart has induced frequent fainting fits after the exertion consequent on the delivery of college lectures. Indeed, the physical conditions under which Dr. Reynolds has done his work during all the years of his splendid service at Cheshunt, have been a wonderful illustration of what a strong and devoted spirit can do in spite of an enfeebled body. Before commencing his Cheshunt career he had been practically given up by the doctors!

OBITUARY.

REV. S. CHINN, ALTON.

Many who have heard of the interesting work carried on for years by this earnest servant of Christ among the hop-pickers in Hampshire will mourn his loss. He fell asleep on the 13th inst. Some thirty-four years ago Mr. Chinn, while labouring as a Congregational minister in and around Alton, had his attention drawn to the heathenism and condition of spiritual neglect prevailing among the poor men and women attracted to the picking. Beginning to visit in the gardens, he met with many rebuffs, but gradually won his way, so that for many years he had been well received, and had carried on extensive operations in the district. For some time he had been failing greatly, but none expected the call so soon. Apart from the Mission to the Hop-pickers, which made his name so widely known, Mr. Chinn had organised a whole network of village evangelisation reaching far into the hamlets around Alton.

REV. DR. HAPPER.

Rev. Andrew P. Happer, D.D., LL.D., for many years a missionary in China, has passed away, at the ripe age of 76, in Wooster, Ohio, U.S.A. He went to the Flowery Land in 1844, when there was no such liberty as is to-day enjoyed of access to the interior. It was just after the Treaty of Nanking, when five ports along the coast were opened to foreign trade. Free access within the city of Canton was not allowed, yet the then young and single missionary worked with those of the people that could be reached by the kindness of medical aid and the preaching of a Gospel of redemption and goodwill to men. After ten years of unremitting labour, he welcomed the first convert of his ministry. Tongue and pen were used in Chinese as well as English, and at length he was permitted to do much for the cause of education in China. In February last, at a meeting of the Presbytery of Pittsburg, he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his being set apart for foreign mission work.

REV. R. H. LOVELL, BROMLEY.

The well-known minister of Bromley Congregational Church died at his residence late on Thursday evening, at the age of fifty-six years. Mr. Lovell was trained at Western College, Plymouth, and entered the Congregational ministry in 1863, when he settled at Exmouth. In 1869 he received a pressing invitation to the new church at Victoria-park, London, where he laboured successfully for ten years. After a temporary charge at Leytonstone, he removed to the large and influential church at Bromley, Kent, where the best years of his life were spent. During his ministry the church buildings had to be enlarged twice at a cost of over £7000. In 1892, the year of the centenary of the Kent Association of Churches, Mr. Lovell was unanimously chosen chairman, and he rendered splendid services during his year of office on behalf of the weaker churches by the inauguration of a special fund for their support. He leaves a widow and three children to mourn his loss. He had been for some time in an ailing condition.

LORD CARBERY.

The death is announced of William Charles, eighth Baron Carbery, of Castle Freke, co. Cork, and Laxton Hall, Northamptonshire. Born in 1819, he succeeded to the title in 1889. He was a generous and considerate landlord, and was held in honour by all engaged upon his estates.

The funeral at Laxton was largely attended, many public bodies being represented. Rev. G. C. B. Bruton, of Rathbarry, County Cork, in the course of an address at the grave, said his parish was virtually dependent on the generosity of the late Baron, whose personal interest in Christian work was very marked. Speaking of the last days of Lord Carbery, Mr. Bruton said:—Such as he was in life, so also was he in death, for when God was evidently calling him away, what was it on which his hope of immortality rested? Was it on the life that God had permitted him to live? Was it on the good deeds and charity that God had enabled him to dispense? No, not for one single moment. He seemed to realise then, far more fully than ever before, the vanity of human things. "Forgive me; forgive me. Give me thy Holy Spirit." That was his prayer, and that is a prayer that God always answers, and it was answered to him. As his life ebbed away, the answer from God seemed to be realised more and more distinctly, and the voice that began with prayer ended with a psalm of praise. It was no longer "Forgive, forgive." It was "Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, praise his holy name."

And then he would break off to the words, "Fade, fade each earthly joy! Jesus is mine!" He knew that Jesus never fails, because he knew that "his anchor would hold," in the words of a hymn which he often sang as a solo at his own house services.

Important!

£5000 Wanted.

PARLIAMENT has recently voted a large sum of money for the increase of our Navy, but as ships are useless without men, 14,000 Boys, Seamen, Stokers, and Marines are to be added to the Service—

7000 THIS YEAR, AND 7000 IN '95.

Extra accommodation of every kind will be urgently needed at our Royal Sailors' Rests, to enable us to receive and house these men when ashore. A grand opening presents itself at Devonport. Some premises, suitable to our requirements in every way, are in my possession; they adjoin the present buildings, and they give space for all that I want.

It would be a thousand pities to lose this splendid opportunity of going forward. To meet this vast increase of our naval forces, to build Dormitories, Reading and Recreation Rooms, and a Hall for Spiritual, Social, and Philanthropic work. Never was a clearer case for prompt action. To stand still, at the present moment, is to go back; to hesitate is to be lost. Work of this kind is left by the Government to the enterprise and patriotism of the country, to whom I confidently appeal at this important juncture. If this grand chance of extension is lost, it will be a dark day for the ROYAL SAILORS' REST, which has worked so successfully for eighteen years.

I WANT £5000

I NEVER GO INTO DEBT,

therefore I appeal confidently to my many kind friends all over the country, and to everyone interested in the Navy, to come at once to the rescue, and to enable me to do this great work, by sending me any sum from 1s. to £5000.

Friends willing to give, and promise, £100 and upwards, will be of the very greatest help in this emergency. Five thousand "One Pound Shots" are wanted! Let me plead with each reader to put one shot—or many—into "JACK'S LOCKER"; but the silver, as well as the gold, is of the greatest value.

In full confidence that I shall shortly be able to report the work as commenced,

Yours in Christ's Service
Agnes L. Weston

Royal Sailors' Rest,
Devonport.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

A good mission has been held in Purley by Rev. J. H. Haslam.

The venerable Rector of Hurstpierpoint, Prebendary Borrer, attained last week his eightieth birthday.

The Archbishop of Ontario, who is visiting his friends in the North, preached in St. Luke's, Liverpool, on Sunday.

In many of the churches throughout the district known as the Potteries special missions have been held with good results.

Canon Jacob, of Portsea, will be the preacher at the Intercession Service for Foreign Missions, to be held to-day in the Liverpool Cathedral.

The annual meetings of the York C.M.S. Auxiliary have proved full of interest. Rev. H. J. Schaffter, from Tinnevelly, was among the speakers.

The chaplain of the Hastings Fishermen's Church, Rev. Molesworth Edwards, has gone to Tunbridge Wells as curate of St. Stephen's Church.

The ladies in the choir of St. Mary-at-Hill Church, Monument (Rev. W. Carlile's), are shortly to exchange their surplices for another simple uniform.

Rev. Thomas Priestley, who has done valuable work at St. Peter's, Hoxton, has bidden his attached flock farewell, being about to take up his new charge at Albrighton.

Rev. H. J. Watters, Organising Secretary of the Scripture Readers' Association, delivered last week a lecture, with limelight illustrations, on "East London Industries and Church Work," in the Church Institute, Croydon.

In connection with the N.P.C.U. a series of special addresses has been given at Christ Church, Folkestone, before large congregations. Rev. W. A. Purton, Chaplain of the South-Eastern College, spoke last week on "The Bible the Sole Rule of Faith."

The Islington C.M.S. Association arranged on Sunday half-yearly simultaneous addresses to Sunday-schools. The list included eighty-six addresses—seven by clergymen, twenty-five by ladies, fifty-four by gentlemen. The addresses were delivered in thirty-seven parishes.

The Record states that Rev. G. A. Sowter, vicar of St. Silas's, Bristol, has accepted the rectory of St. George's, Birmingham, in succession to the late Rev. J. W. Mills. Mr. Sowter goes to a harder parish and a lower stipend—the kind of transfer which does not occur every day.

A mission has been conducted by Rev. Dr. Morgan in the parishes of Lawley and Dawley, near Wellington, in Shropshire. During the first week services were held every day in the parish church of Lawley. The attendance increased each day, the church being quite full several nights. Dr. Morgan gave addresses to pitmen at the different pits at their dinner hour; in one instance he descended the shaft and held a service in the pit itself.

The C.M.S. Younger Clergy Union held its monthly meeting on Monday week at Salisbury-square. There was a large attendance. Rev. A. E. Barnes-Lawrence gave a study of the Mission of the Seventy, and Rev. J. Williams, of Tokio, described his experiences of mission work in Japan. He gave it as his opinion that the Japanese would not long endure the imposition of bishops upon them from without, but would insist upon appointing their own.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Maldwyn Jones has been welcomed to the pastorate of Queen's-walk Church, Nottingham.

Rev. Seys Howell has opened his new pastorate at Sohohill, Birmingham, with much encouragement.

New chapels are being built at Great Chishill, Carnforth, while a new chapel has been opened at Moorlinch.

Rev. T. T. Sherlock, of Smethwick, Birmingham, has conducted a week's evangelistic mission at Stamford.

Rev. J. Guinness Rogers is this week lecturing to the students at Mansfield College on "Pastoral Work."

The church at Staines has agreed to supply the pulpit for four months, to enable the pastor, Rev. H. de Vere Gookey, to recruit his health.

Rev. D. Smith Carlyle, who was recently set apart to work in South Africa, under the auspices of the Colonial Missionary Society, has reached Graaff Reinet.

At the annual meeting of the Bradford Congregational Association in the Horton-lane School, Principal Simon gave his presidential address on "Our Raison d'Être."

Above Bar Church, Southampton (Rev. T. Nicholson), has celebrated its 232nd anniversary. Rev. Dr. Berry preached morning and evening to crowded congregations.

Efforts are being made to extend the work at East Cliff, Bournemouth. In connection with this movement Dr. Barrett has visited the place on behalf of the new scheme.

A united Communion Service of Ashley-lane, Broughton-park, Bury New-road, Cheetham-hill, Hewitt-street, Hightown, and Rooden-lane churches, Manchester, has been held in Broughton Chapel.

At the recognition of Rev. Joseph Cliffe at Lymington, Dr. Bruce preached from the text, "And the common people heard Him gladly." Revs. J. Collins (Baptist) and J. Whitehead (Wesleyan) took part in the service.

Calls.—Rev. W. M. Beeby, of Sheffield, to Watling-street, Canterbury; Mr. A. J. Owens, of Thorne, to Kimberley, South Africa; Rev. Isaac Hartill, to St. John's Wood-terrace Church, N.W.

Resignations.—Rev. T. A. Leonard, of Colne; Rev. Joseph Fowler, of Little Waltham.

BAPTIST.

A new mission-hall has been opened at Wootton, Kent.

A new chapel is about to be put up in Manchester-road, Bury.

The friends at Burgess Hill, Sussex, are erecting a fine new chapel.

Rev. J. H. Brooksbank has been recognised as pastor at Workington.

Mr. J. Morgan has been recognised as pastor of the Welsh Church, Mold.

Rev. Idwal Jones has been welcomed to the pastorate of Bethel Church, Llanelly.

Highbury-hill Church reports that 137 members have been added during the two years of the present pastorate.

Rev. E. Dyer has completed five years' pastorate at Southend Tabernacle. He has just recovered from a serious attack of influenza.

Devonshire-square Church, Stoke Newington, reports 750 Sunday scholars, of whom nineteen had been received into church fellowship during the year.

A new chapel has been opened in Southfields, Wandsworth, in an outlying part, providing accommodation for nearly 300. The work is the outcome of mission labours, commenced some time ago in a cottage in the adjoining street by Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hall, who still have the oversight, aided by a band of workers.

Mr. C. Newth, who presided at the annual meeting of the Bristol Baptist Association, said twenty years ago there were thirty-four churches, with 5225 members, connected with the association, and to-day there are forty-eight churches, with a membership of 7650, an increase of nearly 2500 members and of fourteen churches.

A series of services has been held at Sneek, West Friesland, Holland, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Rev. J. De Hart's ministry in the Netherlands. Mr. De Hart's early years were devoted to the formation and establishment of a Baptist cause at Hengeloo, Overijsel. For several years he was president of the Dutch Baptist Union. On Mr. J. Horn's transfer to Groningen, in 1890, Mr. De Hart undertook his present charge at Sneek.

Rev. James Hughes, of Kimberley, who is now in this country to raise funds for an Industrial Mission in Matabeleland, writes from Bradford:—"I have just received a letter from a Baptist minister in New York, informing me that money and men have been found there to work one of our stations in South Africa, and that our brethren will sail from New York in the first week of January for Cape Colony." He adds: "After a very successful tour through our native land, Revs. H. J. Batts, Chas. Spurgeon, and myself will sail on December 1 for South Africa."

Call.—Rev. J. W. Kettle, of Maze Pond, N., to Pitlochry.

Resignations.—Rev. John G. Raws, of Harrogate; Rev. C. F. Perry, of Dean-street, Liskeard; Rev. A. J. Causton, of Fakenham; Rev. James Wilkinson, of Bramley, Leeds; Revs. R. Davies and L. Partridge, the joint pastorate of Wintoun-street, Leeds.

METHODIST.

Miss Wakefield has held a good mission at Limavady.

Mrs. Coates has had a good mission at Wellgate, Rotherham.

New chapels have been opened at Walmer Bridge, Burton Leonard, and Hirwaen (Glam).

A band of fishermen from Filey have been holding good services at Ebenezer Chapel, Hull.

A nine days' mission held at Regent-road, Manchester, by Rev. Thomas Waugh, has resulted in much blessing.

Sister Blanche, of Bowron House, has held special services at Monk Bar and James-street Churches, York, with gratifying results, many professing to have found peace.

New chapels are being, or about to be, built at Hysongreen and Carlton in the Nottingham district, Bacup, Pwllheli, Masboro', Eastwood View, Dinton (Wilts), Totley Rise.

News is to hand that a small force of Europeans have defeated a party of 200 Somali, who were on their way to attack the mission station at Golbanti, East Africa, where Rev. R. M. Ormerod is stationed, and where already a missionary and his wife have been massacred.

The annual meeting of the Birmingham Mission was held on Monday. Rev. A. Bishop said that through the Mission the worst slums of the city were being visited, and poverty, vice, and misery were being battled with. Rev. F. L. Wiseman gave particulars of the work of the Mission, and Rev. Chas. Garrett referred to the drink traffic, saying that never yet was there a public-house that did not bring a shadow upon some face, darkness to some heart, and death to some soul.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A site has been purchased at Worcester for the erection of new Sunday-schools.

Rev. R. Leitch, of Newcastle, has been nominated for the moderatorship of the Synod.

Five more native preachers have been ordained at Shillong, in the Khassia Hills, India.

The students' missionary effort during the coming year will be in aid of the Belgian churches.

The present is being observed as Foreign Mission week in the Presbyterian churches of England.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. O. O. Williams have started on their return to their field of medical mission work at Sylhet, Assam.

The foundation-stone of a new church has been laid at Alnwick on the site of the old church, which had stood for two centuries.

The Jewish committee has accepted the resignation of its venerable superintendent missionary, Rev. Theodore Meyer, and agreed to recommend a retiring allowance of £200 a year. The Whitechapel Mission to the Jews will be continued.

A successful mission has been carried on at all the Presbyterian churches in Bolton simultaneously during the last two weeks. Evening meetings, Bible readings, and young people's services, conducted by Revs. Z. B. Woffendale, Mr. Holt, and others, drew good congregations.

Calls.—Rev. A. Dickson, of Glencaple, to Woodside, Aberdeen (as colleague); Rev. A. Renwick, of Glasgow, to Kirkbean, Dumfries.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Jail meetings are held once a month by the Army in Salt Lake City.

Plans have been passed for the opening of a Food and Shelter Depôt at Brussels.

One day last week 2089 meals were supplied across the counter of the Whitechapel Food Depôt.

In connection with the Social Wing extensions, a new Poor Man's Palace is to be opened on Dec. 3 in Charles-street, Clerkenwell.

Mrs. Bramwell Booth's Christmas sale is now fixed to take place on December 12 and 13, at St. Martin's Town Hall, instead of at Kensington, as previously arranged.

The Social Wing in Holland is sending a man to the Farm Colony at Hadleigh to superintend the dairy, and a man from London goes to Holland to look after the waste paper sorting.

Another Hindoo temple has been captured by the Army at Cape Cormorin. The people of Chekadi, after removing their idols, handed the building over entirely to be converted into a barracks. This makes the fourteenth which has been given up in like manner.

General Booth's first public meeting in Philadelphia was held in the Royal Academy of Music. The Hon. John Wannamaker, who introduced the General, said in the course of his address: "We rise, stand together around you, and bid you God-speed in your work."

The Army bakery has reached its maximum output, private customers are to be no longer supplied, the increasing demands of the Social Wing institutions being so great. It is to be in the future worked only by steam, with latest and most approved apparatus.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Gourdie, N.B., on 17th inst., Mrs. D. J. Kinloch, widow of Col. D. J. Kinloch, aged fifty-eight, a true friend to many in need.—At Dover, on 14th inst., Rev. T. T. Bazely, aged eighty-seven, for twenty-one years rector of Poplar, and father of the late Henry Bazely, known as the Oxford Evangelist.—At Manchester, on 19th inst., Mr. Jonas Craven, aged forty-three, a solicitor who took an active part in philanthropic work.—At Intake, Mr. William Plant, a preacher of the Gospel for over fifty years.—At East Taranaki, New Zealand, Rev. Gideon Smales, aged seventy-seven, well known as a Methodist missionary and author.—At Lesmahagow, on 17th inst., Rev. Thomas Wilson, after a long illness.—At Pilsley, Chesterfield, Mr. Charles Rouse, a faithful worker among the Methodists.—At Stockport, on 18th inst., Rev. H. W. Price, minister of Wycliffe Church.—At Wrexham, Rev. J. Roberts, for forty years minister at Bryn Lion, Brymbo and Llanerchymedd.—At Bradford, Mr. John Wilkinson, a valued S.S. superintendent.—At Dromard, co. Sligo, Rev. Jno. Ribton Gore, Archdeacon of Achonry, aged seventy-four years.

Appeal.

Mrs. Meredith's Institutions.—The Christmas sales will be held at the Village Hall, Addlestone, Dec. 4 and 5. Gifts of game, vegetables, oranges, apples, nuts, cakes, sweets, plants, flowers, pottery, and toys will be received at the Princess Mary Village Homes, Addlestone, or at 143, Clapham-road, S.W. Help for these Institutions is greatly needed.

Notices.

Communications Received with Thanks.—S.J. E.C. L.A.B. D.A.B. J.M.B. E.F. H.P. A.R. H.L. W.W. B.T.G. M.S.B. W.C. W.H. A.S.D. F.F. A.M.S. R.L. J.H. J.D. B.C. W.E.W. E.S. C.M.B. A.E.W. E.G.B. A.E.C. E.M.H. W.T.S. C.H.T.A. H.C. E.L. Mrs. H. C.W.H. A.O. J.W. G.G. G.C. L.A.B. C.E. A.T.F, T.H. E.E.W. R.R. G.E.P. F.M.L. M.G. C.H.J. T.C. S.R.M. J.H.P.C. A. de St. D. K.A. E.R.B. G.C. A.T.D. C.S.R. M.B.G. J.G. C.A.B. W.S. A.B.H. M.E.L. C.T. J.G.G. G.M. J.W. A.E.W. E.V.K. E.W.G. M.A.A. A.A.B. W.P.B. W.T.F. J.C.T. F.H. D.M.D. A.C. C.A.W. F.H.J. J.P. F.W. E.T.H. R.D.S. W.H. S.V.S. C.C. J.E. F.A.S. H.A.J. J.P.F. F.W.A.W. J.E.S. R.A.G. J.H. G.A.A. J.E.P. E.G. J.J.L. M.R.H.

Applicants for Tracts.—Miss M. A. Sage, 25, Ellingham-road, Shepherd's Bush, W.; Inspector Poate, S.E.R., North Camp Station, Aldershot; T. T. West, 121, St. James's-road, Bermondsey, S.E.; Miss Stains, 30, Southhill Park, Hampstead Heath; Rev. H. E. Wright, 10, Station-road, Kensal Rise, W.; Miss Smith (Bible Woman), 74, Brookbank-road, Lewisham, S.E.; E. C. Howard, 17, Hale-street, Linton-street, Islington, N.; A. Savage, 93, York-road. Red Post-lane, East Ham; Warwick Bishop, Port Isaac, Wadebridge, Cornwall; Ann Worth, St. Tudy, Bodmin, Cornwall; Miss Routley, Carwitham, St. Juliet, Boscastle, Cornwall; G. E. Pearce, Free Lending Library, Camelford, Cornwall; E. J. Snow, 14, Packington-street, Islington; William J. Young. Alleyne's-road, Stevenage, Herts; T. G. Sudborough, 2, Stamford Buildings, Meadow-place, South Lambeth-road, S.E.; Miss Bristow, High-street, Crawley; Mrs. Willer, 20, Huguenot-road, Peckham, S.E.

PROTESTANTS IN AUSTRIA.

My Dear Sir,—We are hoping this year, as usual, to send into the Alpine provinces parcels of Christmas literature, illuminated texts, Christmas letters, etc., etc., anything that is calculated to encourage and strengthen the faith of the scattered Protestants of our mountain regions, hundreds of whom never see a pastor or are able to attend a single service during the long winter months. How grateful they are to get these parcels the many touching letters we receive from them testify. The books are often lent from house to house till the whole village has read them.

The Association for the Free Distribution of Scriptures kindly provides us with as many Bibles and Testaments as we need; but we are very glad to get translations of Mr. Spurgeon's, Hesba Stretton's, Miss Alcock's, and Mr. Moody's writings (in German). These may be ordered of Jäger and Kober, in Basle, who forward them direct to us, or, if friends prefer it, they can be sent by post to my address.

I should like to take this opportunity of thanking all those dear Christian friends who have helped me by their sympathy and prayers in my late bereavement, and to inform them that the Lord has laid it on my heart to take up the precious legacy of work for Him bequeathed to me by my beloved husband. I shall remain here to direct the deaconess and nursing work (which we are about extending), the distribution of Christian literature, correspondence, etc. We are praying that the Lord would send us a man after his own heart to direct and carry on the work of evangelisation, both here and in the provinces. Meanwhile, our only evangelist is industriously searching out the neglected brethren in the faith in the mountains of Carinthia, where the Lord is giving him wonderful success.

A new Occasional Paper is in the Press, and may be obtained from Mr. W. McCluer, 6, Balfour-road, Highbury New Park, N.

Mary A. Reinmuth.

28, Leechgasse, Graz, Austria, November 14.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For a ten days' mission to be conducted by Mr. W. R. Lane at St. George's Hall, Ramsgate, in connection with the Y.M.C.A., Dec. 3 to 14.—For special blessing on a mission at Hardwick, Aylesbury, from Dec. 2nd, by Mr. W. Monro Collings.—For blessing on a special Gospel effort at Livingstone County, Kentucky, during Christmas week.—For a Christian worker in Chester, that God may equip him with new spiritual power and renewed health for prolonged usefulness to his glory.—For special services to be held next week by Capt. Tottenham, in the Cage Lane Mission Hall, Plumstead.—For a mission by Mr. Gerald Coultas at Red Lion Hill, East Finchley, December 2-9.

Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society

FOR GIVING

Life Pensions of Five, Seven, and Ten Guineas

PER ANNUM TO THE

AGED CHRISTIAN POOR

OF

BOTH SEXES, & OF EVERY PROTESTANT DENOMINATION.

WHO ARE

NOT UNDER SIXTY YEARS OF AGE.

INSTITUTED 1807.

Treasurers: F. A. BEVAN, Esq., AND W. J. PARKS, Esq.

"As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men especially unto them who are of the household of faith."—Gal. vi. 10

"This Institution apart from the benefit and relief it gives, is a great moral Institution, and is set to create in men's hearts and minds a feeling of reverence which is necessary in things moral, political, and religious, Old people are apt to be regarded as burdens, whereas it should be a joy and a privilege to minister to them. For this reason I specially commend the Charity to young people."—From the Speech of the late Right Hon. the EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.G., when presiding at the Annual Meeting of 1883.

"It is one of the most admirable Societies that I know of."—The late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon

"I have carefully read the Report and Balance Sheet, and from a business standpoint can recommend the Society as one in which good value is given for the money entrusted to it, as there appears to be the maximum of good at the minimum of cost."—Sir Henry W. Peek, Bart.

Portraits.

"THE hoary head" is the old Christian's glory and claim for reverence. God solemnly links the honour of it with His own fear. "The ancient" are numbered with "the honourable." "Zacharias and Elizabeth, walking in all the ordinances of the Lord blameless;" Anna, "a widow indeed," in the faith and hope of the Gospel; Polycarp, with his eighty-and-six years in his Master's service; Crowns of glory were their hoary heads, shining with all the splendour of royalty.

"Pity upon the poor" involves the opening of the heart, as well as the hands: to "draw out our soul," as well as our bread "to the hungry," thus doubling the alms by giving a part of ourselves. An old writer says: "The poor man's hand is the treasury of Christ; all my superfluity shall there be hoarded up, where I know it will be safely kept, and surely returned to me," for the Lord of Heaven condescends to be the Surety of His poor.

In sketching the position and history of a few pensioners now upon the books, the Committee will be glad indeed if the slight particulars, which can alone be given here, lead readers to make a closer acquaintance with the work, and to visit some of the recipients at the Homes and elsewhere.

Here is a good woman in Sussex: her age is but sixty, but her visitor writes: "She is much afflicted with rheumatism, scarcely any use of her limbs, propped up in a chair, with table made to fit it before her, could just hold out her straight fingers to shake hands." This lonely crippled woman, one of the Lord's jewels, is now sustained and comforted by the pension.

Another recipient, in the same County, has been thirty-nine years a widow, and was formerly Bible woman to the English in Paris. She is now seventy-one years of age, and when only fourteen was led to to the feet of Jesus. She writes, "By the grace of God I am what I am."

In Wiltshire dwells a widow sixty-four years of age. Her history has been an eventful one, her life having, on several occasions, been attempted by her first husband. A friend writes: "Believing as I do, most sincerely, that she is a king's daughter, I have felt it to be a privilege to be permitted to minister to her necessities. Her religion has cost her a great deal in years gone by. Two daughters in service pay her rent. Her only means of subsistence is field work, for which she is paid 8d. or 9d. a day, but being subject to chronic bronchitis, her earnings in this way are most precarious. As she says, 'sometimes when they want me I am not well enough, and again, when I am well, I am often not wanted.'" Out door relief was refused her, and in her hour of need the Lord put it into the heart of a friend to have this tried child of His placed upon the pension for which she is indeed grateful.

An aged married man, in a remote country district, is a wheelwright; his rent and taxes average 3s. 5d. weekly, and his strength is fast failing. He writes: "I keep doing a little work with great difficulty, but I find that I get more enfeebled. The Lord gives me sometimes a token for good, but it is generally in secret upon my knees."

One of the pensioners was servant to the founder of the Society, another, aged sixty-eight, and much afflicted, was supported by a sister over seventy who is a nurse; several who have lost their little savings through the recent disastrous failures of Building Societies have been placed upon the books.

The occupations followed have been various, among them being artificial flower work, silk winding, straw hat finishing, framework knitting, needle work and gardening. A woman recently nominated, is still a Sunday-school teacher. Another, who has for fifty four years been a follower of Christ, earns 1s. 9 by her needle, by rising early and sitting up good woman in Norfolk has for no less than years, been a traveller in Zion's ways.

These have all endeavoured, so long as lasted, to obtain an honourable livelihood, an all their weakness, they appeal to their breth sisters in the Lord, for kindly sympathy and writes: "You cannot imagine what a bles pension is to us: may the Lord bless the abundantly."

AGED PILGR

Guiding Principles.

The Committee, in order to prevent misco
as to the character and aims of the Society point out that its benefits are for "the hous faith"—that is, for those who have been sinners to trust in the Lord Jesus for salvat who have experienced the Holy Spirit's sa work in their hearts.

The Scriptural basis of the Society is "a tion of those things which are most surely ıg us," and within the boundaries indicated, vork is undenominational, because poverty and age and the love of Christ are undenominal. Members of almost every section of the tian Church are upon the pension lists, and the nittee rejoice to have the sympathy and support who, though divided upon minor matters, can ily unite in helping the Lord's aged poor for the s sake. Candidates are recommended by fied contributors.

rsonal visitation is a marked feature of the work, pensioners in the metropolitan and several districts being paid monthly in their own s by the Committee, Lady visitors, and other ; to those in other places quarterly remits are made. Thus the pensions come from arm hand of Christian love, and pleasant inter- e is promoted. The aged ones are not regarded cases," but as brethren and sisters redeemed the precious blood of Christ. This plan keeps Society to the individual personal treatment ed.

RNSEY RISE, N.

means of the pensions, hundreds of the Lord's poor are enabled to pass their closing years free from the pressing weight of pecuniary care, and from the fear of having to enter the workhouse. Honest, hard working children can still have their parents in their midst, and the gracious influence which so often emanates from the occupants of "the old arm chair" continues to be felt in families and neighbourhoods where it is sorely needed. May it not therefore be affirmed that the Institution benefits not only individuals and Christian churches, but the nation also, for God's children are "the salt of the earth" and these precious grains, whose silent, penetrative influence preserves society from decay, should be maintained over as wide a surface as possible.

A summary of the Society's guiding principles may be thus expressed: A scriptural and undenominational basis—discrimination in the reception of candidates—and a simple, safe, and direct mode of providing permanent help for the aged Christian poor, and on the lines indicated, the problem of "old age pensions," occupying so much public attention, is being solved.

Pensions.

1,315 pensioners, living in all parts of the United Kingdom, are now upon the the books. The annual pension expenditure is £8,400.

The recipients are as follows:—182 on the Ten Guinea Pension; 321 on the Seven Guinea, and 812 on the Five Guinea.

672 pensioners dwell in the metropolis, and 643 in other parts of the United Kingdom. 917 are over seventy years of age, and of this number 239 are upwards of eighty, and 16 more than ninety. 151 are men, being 13 per cent. of the entire number.

The average duration of a pension is 10 years, and the total cost to the Society not less tnan £60. Several recipients have been on the books over twenty years; the three oldest having respectively received £213, £207, and £195.

Since the foundation of the Society, no less than 6,000 aged pilgrims have, as life pensioners, received upwards of £240,000.

The Homes.

The Camberwell Asylum has for fifty-nine years been a peaceful dwelling for forty-two of the pensioners. In common with the other Homes each inmate is provided with one room, a sufficient supply of coals, medical attendance and other comforts. The services in the Chapels are especially appreciated by those who, through weakness and infirmity, are unable regularly to attend their own places of worship. No restriction in this respect is placed upon the inmates, the desire being to make these buildings happy and home-like abodes for one and all.

The Hornsey Rise Asylum, an illustration of which accompanies this appeal, was opened in 1871, and accommodates 120 pensioners. Help is urgently needed for the Maintenance Fund, which has been exhausted through the demands upon it.

The Stamford Hill Home has eleven inmates and the Brighton Home, seven.

How Friends can Help.

A wide and varied field of operations has now been traversed; the pensions and the homes together need an Annual Income of upwards of £10,000, but much to the anxiety to the Committee the regular contributions fall far short of this sum. May they briefly recapitulate and summarise the way in which new aid can be given? (1) Annual subscriptions of seven shillings, ten shillings, and fourteen shillings. (2) Donations. (3) Collecting boxes and cards. (4) Collections after sermons. (5) Diffusion of the Society's Literature. (6) Personally interesting others in the work.

The Committee thus plead for those who have been committed to their care, and they earnestly invite additional support for an Institution which has for nearly a century received so many tokens of Divine approval. Our Lord's own words, His love in the heart, Apostolic precept and practice, and the present urgent need of Christ's aged poor, combine as motives of commanding energy for the grace of liberality. May the God of all grace enable each one to remember that—

"All that thou hast and art,
Are but the Lord's by purchase and by right
Bring a whole offering, worthless though it be;
The love which took thy Cross and bore its smart,
Paid the full price, Oh, ransomed one, for thee!"

Contributions in aid of the Institution will be thankfully received at the Society's Office, where any further information will be supplied, also at the Office of "The Christian."

Secretary:—MR. J. E. HAZELTON.

Bankers:—MESSRS. BARCLAY, BEVAN, TRITTON, RANSOM, BOUVERIE & Co., 54, Lombard Street, E.C.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

OFFICE—83, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Name.....

(State whether Rev., Mr., Mrs. or Miss),

Address.....

.....

Annual Subscription..... Donation.....

M. P. BRANSTON & CO., PRINTERS, 56, ST. ANDREW'S HILL, E.C.

The Christian.

☞ To avoid delay it is requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and not to its individual members. Communications for THE CHRISTIAN should be addressed to the Editor, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for THE CHRISTIAN should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 1 of cover.)

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

☞ The Publishers request that all orders for THE CHRISTIAN by post, and remittances for same, be addressed to "THE CHRISTIAN" POSTAL DEPARTMENT, BOUVERIE HOUSE, SALISBURY SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

Cheques and Post Orders to be made payable to Messrs. John Haddon and Co. at that address.

The subscription for one year, including Postage and Coloured Almanack, is as under:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| For Great Britain and Ireland .. | 6s. 7d. | per annum |
| For India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, France, Germany, and other European Countries .. .. .. .. | 8s. 10d. | „ „ |
| For United States and Canada .. | 2¼ dols. | „ „ |
| Or including Monthly Copy of HERALD OF MERCY .. .. | 2½ dols. | „ „ |

Subscriptions for THE HERALD OF MERCY.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 4 Copies monthly .. .. .. .. | 2s. | per annum |
| 8 „ „ .. .. .. .. | 4s. | „ „ |
| 12 „ „ .. .. .. .. | 6s. | „ „ |
| 24 „ „ .. .. .. .. | 12s. | „ „ |

Post free to any address at home or abroad.
Remittances to be sent as above.

Notes and Comments.

☞ Will those of our readers who receive THE CHRISTIAN direct from the Office by post, and who have not recently communicated with us, kindly send their present full postal address; especially Missionaries and others in foreign countries?

Since the Thanksgiving Meetings held in April, there has been a growing desire for another opportunity of meeting together for praise, confession, and intercession. It is probable that such an opportunity will be afforded very shortly in the west of London. We hope to be able to give particulars next week.

Meetings for united prayer and thanksgiving will be held in the Conference Hall, Mildmay Park, on Tuesday, December 18, at 4 and 7 p.m. Special requests for prayer in connection with Mildmay and its needs will be presented at each meeting. It is expected that Rev. C. A. Fox will give a brief address in the afternoon, and Rev. G. H. C. Macgregor in the evening. Friends unable to be present are invited to join in supplication, at the hours named, in their own homes.

Mrs. Reginald Radcliffe is arranging some recollections of her husband's evangelistic experiences at home and preaching tours abroad, including some events in his early days, as well as references to many devoted Christians whom he has met or with whom he has laboured. Any reminiscences of those days, in letters written at the time or communicated now from memory, will be welcomed with thanks, addressed to Mrs. Radcliffe, Inglewood, Waterloo, Liverpool. Mrs. Radcliffe has undertaken this pleasant but arduous task at the request of friends, and would like that much prayer should be made for strength and wisdom in preparing but arranging papers and memories covering a period of more than forty years. Her desire from first to last is to magnify the grace of God and glorify his name.

An esteemed correspondent writes:—

My sympathies and grief have been aroused by reading Hesba Stretton's "Highway of Sorrow" (Cassell), which describes the persecution of the Stundists in Russia. As God's people can help their suffering brethren in Russia in no other way than by prayer, I would suggest that a day be set apart, when, throughout the length and breadth of the country, Christians may meet to implore God to cause the new Czar to grant liberty to these poor people. Now, as he has just come to the throne, seems a likely time, and our God is able to deliver. Many people only wait to have the sorrows of others brought to their notice for them to pray constantly.

Whether a day be appointed or not, the subject is one that should weigh heavily upon Christians who enjoy civil and religious freedom. Miss Stretton's book must have moved many to tears; and as it is founded on unquestionable facts, the sufferings of the Stundists may in a measure be realised.

Another subject which presses severely on the hearts of many Christians is the immediate fate of the Hovas of Madagascar. A correspondent, who writes suggesting prayer on their behalf, says:—

The story of the conversion of the Hovas is one of the most marvellous in the Christian era. The French have determined to march against them with all the deadly modern weapons for destruction, and the Hovas are practically unprotected. Surely God is as able to scatter their enemies, and protect the Hovas, as He was to protect the Jews against Sennacherib and all the host of Assyria, and as He was to deliver our own nation against the Spaniards in scattering the Spanish Armada. Let us pray that the Hovas may be kept, and may put their whole trust in God who will deliver them.

Our nation's hands are not clean enough to say much to France in this matter; but Christians may and must appeal to Him that sitteth on the throne, as well regarding French aggression in Madagascar as British forcing of opium on the Chinese.

"What does it matter, when you think of what these Cretan Christians suffer continually?" So the late Mr. Hilary Skinner, special correspondent of The Daily News, would say, when anyone remarked upon his rough experiences in the East. Surely the words contain a world of meaning. What a testimony they are to the patience, endurance, and faith of brethren of whom we know and hear so little. The Christian faith is very tenacious of life, as is evidenced by the endurance of the Nestorians and Armenians. Whatever defect there may be in the intellectual conception and expression of faith by them and other Eastern Christians, there can be no two thoughts as to the fidelity with which it is so commonly held. Western Christianity is active and aggressive, Eastern Christianity is long-suffering and quiet. The Master is glorified in both.

In another column we insert an extract from THE HOLIEST OF ALL, by Rev. Andrew Murray. With a warm welcome we greet this latest volume of one of the most spiritual writers of this generation. The Epistle to the Hebrews is essential to the present need. One of the worst errors of our time is reversion to ritualism, priestism, sacerdotalism, sacramentarianism. And this was the peril of the Hebrews in the early Church. Andrew Murray's exposition puts this Epistle on its right foundation. Every page is a silent protest against the notion that this Epistle is merely a writing for a transition period, and not as distinctly a Church document as any of the Epistles. On the other hand, the book, from its title to its close, is equally a protest against the neglect of "the Hebrews" by some teachers of "holiness." We very heartily recommend it for its reverent exhibition of the glories of Jesus the Son of God, our great High Priest; and for its clear exposition of doctrine according to godliness.

It is astonishing how feebly those living in Christian lands realise the real condition of heathendom. It seems as though it were true that "what the eye does not see, the heart does not grieve over." But let it not be imagined that we have the poor excuse of ignorance. We may see the awful facts, if not at first sight, through the eyes of others. In one of her last addresses in England Mrs. Bishop painted the condition of the heathen world, especially of its women, in colours so strong and so dark as to move the heart and awaken the resolves of the most phlegmatic. Missionary literature teems with photographic pictures of the fiendish cruelties that are accepted as commonplace events in lands where the Sun of Righteousness has not yet arisen with healing in his beams.

These reflections are prompted by the perusal of Dr. G. D. Dowkontt's little book, MURDERED MILLIONS, an English edition of which has been published by Messrs. Morgan & Scott (price 1s). It is a bird's-eye view of the nameless sufferings endured by those in heathen lands through the ignorance or superstitious follies of their religious teachers and so-called "medicine men." Dr. Dowkontt has culled from missionary writings an array of startling and blood-curdling facts that form the strongest plea for medical missions ever formulated within so narrow a compass. The title of the book appears to savour of sensationalism, but no one who reads the terrible contents will dare to say that it conveys any exaggeration. If this brochure could be widely read there would surely be a forward move in the work of medical missions such as we have not yet begun to dream of.

Rev. J. Watson, of Liverpool, took "The Coming Revival of Dogma" as the subject of his address at the jubilee of the Presbyterian College, London. He pointed out the characteristics of different ages of the Church's history—the age of mystical experience, the age of dogma, the age of scholasticism, and the present age of criticism, which appears to be approaching its close. He thinks that we are returning to the spirit of the early age, and the sign he takes to be that we are returning to the person of Christ:

There has been no age since the first when there has been such honest anxiety to understand what Jesus meant; and, more than that, to endeavour, at any cost, to apply the principles of Jesus to the life of the soul and also to the life of the Commonwealth.

Yet Mr. Watson believes we are on the eve of a revival of "Dogma." It is an intellectual necessity. It is absurd, he contends, to suppose that there is any antagonism between the facts and spirit of religion and "dogma, which is the science that studies, verifies, and classifies them." We agree with him in this contention, but we would go farther and say, that, from the time of the descent of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, the thoughts and experiences of the brethren began to assume shape in doctrine. The Epistles are full of doctrine; indeed, we do not see how any appreciable distinction can be drawn between the "age of mystical experience" and the "age of doctrine," unless Mr. Watson means that in the "age of dogma" persons lived in the region of a formulated theology, rather than in the region of those gracious experiences of the power and love of the Saviour out of which pure theology can alone be drawn. This danger he exposes in a powerful way:

You may have this curious thing: a man profoundly and beautifully religious, perfectly mistaken in his dogma; you may have a man, as we hold, absolutely correct and punctiliously exact in his dogma, in whom there is only one thing wanting, and that is religion.

Dean Hole has some wise remarks on hymn tunes in his new book, "More Memories." What preacher does not sympathise with the sense of shame and disappointment he expresses at seeing a large congregation—or a small one either—reduced to silence by the musical authorities choosing a tune which only a few persons present could sing? The very soul is sometimes taken out of a service by the organ and choir. Dean Hole mentions an occasion when some two or three thousand worshippers were gathered together in one of the largest cathedrals, and hardly a dozen voices could sing two of the three hymns which were selected. When he remonstrated with the clergyman who made the selection, he told him he was educating the taste of the people. The Dean replied that he thought he had about the same chance of success as the man who was employing his leisure hours in teaching a weathercock to crow. Our congregations should be aided, not hindered, as they so often are. Where are the triumphant tunes which our fathers used to sing with such heartiness?

---

On Dec. 15 the London District Councils will be chosen. Great moral, social, and religious interests obtrude themselves, for London has 386,973 persons who live in one-roomed homes, and 828,941 who live "in the overcrowded condition of two or more to a room." Whether good citizens are bestirring themselves to do their duty or not, the drink interest is astir. It would have been infinitely more to the credit of our common faith, if, instead of having a School Board fight, we had all been taking counsel together how to fight disease, dirt, bad housing of the poor, and sin in its ten thousand forms. It is said that "in one parish close to Westminster Abbey there are eight local publicans in the field eager to win over the Vestry to inaction in reforms which would diminish their trade."

---

At the Women's Trade Union Conference some good remarks fell from Canon Scott Holland, who pointed out that women, because the circumstances of their life tempted them to enter the labour market casually, and be contented with smaller wages than men, injured other workers. It was necessary to ask why the wage of a woman was lower than a man's; whether woman should work at home or in factories; and whether the working of married women should be encouraged. He especially insisted that they must keep the home with all the sweetness and joy that that name brought to English ears. From a business point of view it is simply a question of buying and selling; a woman is poor and wants food and will work for it—for a good wage if she can get it, for a bad wage if she cannot—and, on the other side, an employer is ready to hire. But deeper questions also are always involved. Morality, far-reaching in its issues, affects the bargain.

---

The Westminster Gazette raises an alarm with regard to the spread of gambling in the country houses of the rich.

> Baccarat is one of the most popular methods for relieving poor fools of superfluous and necessary cash at the same time. The extent to which it is indulged in is practically unknown beyond the borders of certain sets, but there is no question that it is considerable, and that it means ruin to many members of shooting and hunting parties.

Two young officers of fashionable regiments have resigned their commissions, and are going to the Colonies. The hostesses are blamed for being often the worst offenders. Moral epidemics, like physical, spare no class; and when a great many young aristocrats are ruined, as well as thousands of clerks, the law may be made effective against gambling.

---

The Archbishop of Canterbury must have been reading some remarkable books on moral reform, for he is reported to have said at a Church of England Temperance Society's meeting:—

> They were reminded time by time of the success of Howard, Wilberforce, and the late Lord Shaftesbury; but that was all very well, for these men had underneath all the work a strong, healthy public opinion in favour of the great works they had in hand.

Yes, when they had made it. But their initial difficulty, as that of every reformer, was to make a sound, healthy opinion. Lord Shaftesbury was always being terribly disappointed by the very people to whom he thought he had a right to look for help, just as temperance workers have had their sorest trials at the hands of professing Christians.

---

Professor Max Müller writes in The Nineteenth Century on "Why I am not an Agnostic," and says:—

> If Agnosticism excludes a recognition of an eternal reason pervading the natural and the moral world, if to postulate a rational cause for a rational universe is called Gnosticism, then I am a Gnostic, and a humble follower of the greatest thinkers of our race, from Plato and the author of the Fourth Gospel to Kant and Hegel.

Mr. Gladstone gave it not long ago as his experience of the distinguished men whom he had met, that hardly any of them were unbelievers. Unbelief as an open and systematic thing seems to be under eclipse in our country, but we fear its power more in subtle plausible doubts than in flat denial.

---

The Archbishop of Toledo writes to Cardinal Vaughan:—

> I believe with your Eminence that the time has come to make the conversion of England effectual, confiding more in the admirable workings of the Holy Spirit than in the insufficiency of human discussions.

He promises for Spain that it will not be wanting in "prayers, penances, sacrifices, and tears for the conversion of England to the mother and mistress of all Churches, the Holy Roman Church." This is a great improvement on the methods of Spain under Philip. But we trust it may have no better success.

---

There is one fact in connection with the growth of Romanism on the one hand, and of practical Unitarianism on the other hand, that has not been sufficiently noticed. So long as Romanism remained in the Roman Catholic Churches it made but little progress in this country, but when so-called Evangelical and Protestant Churches were used by men who were supposed to be Protestant ministers for the propagation of Romish teaching, it began to spread similarly. When Unitarianism was confined to Unitarian Churches it had invariably a small number of hearers, and was comparatively impotent. But in professedly Protestant and Evangelical pulpits it finds greater opportunities for success. Both these movements are condemned as evil by the very methods by which they have been advanced. He who uses his position for the purpose of destroying the very faith which he professes to defend is dishonest. The same tactics in matters commercial would receive severest condemnation. Are they not more guilty in the higher realm of spiritual truth?

---

An esteemed correspondent has sent us some counsels for those who collect in aid of missions and other religious and philanthropic agencies. She rightly styles this an "arduous" task; her advice is, however, calculated to lighten the task and promote success. First, she says:—

> "Be practical" or businesslike—informed regarding the history and needs of the society whose welfare you have at heart. Secondly, "Be patient"; do not allow timidity to deter or refusal to discourage you. Thirdly, "Be pleasant"; a winning manner is more becoming than abruptness or ill-temper. Lastly, "Be prayerful"; you cannot expect to succeed in any service for Christ without prayer, and you should not expect to fail with prayer.

These are points which experience has suggested, and will, we are sure, abundantly vindicate.

---

The Puritan family has become extinct, and it becomes a grave question whether the Christian home, under present conditions, can possibly be what it was in the days of Bunyan or the Wesleys; whether, indeed, modern Methodism is not, to a considerable extent, becoming conspicuously and vitally different in this respect from what it was in past days; and whether this is not equally the case with all other branches of the professing Church. And another question arises of extreme importance. Are the servants of Christ acting in providing the feathers to wing the arrow of fiction and worldliness into the Christian home, for Sunday as well as week-day reading?

---

That saying is surely a true one, that "the way whereby the Spirit worketh any grace in believers is by stirring them up to act it. The Spirit of God doth not effectually work love, or give strength to love, until we act it." So the Master said at the opening of his ministry: "If any man hear these sayings of mine, and do them," etc. And so right through the Word the same teaching may be found, that action is the way to experience and knowledge.

---

World-Wide Evangelization.

Beloved Dr. David Brown of Aberdeen, one of the oldest Christians I have the great privilege of knowing, and now over ninety, in his commentary on Ephesians v. 14, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead," says:—'Awake,' the reading of all the oldest MSS. is 'Up,' or 'Rouse thee'! a phrase used in stirring men to activity. . . As Israel is called on to 'awake' from its previous state of 'darkness' and 'death' (Isaiah lix. 10, and lx. 2) for that her light is come, so the Church and each individual is similarly called to awake. Believers are called on to awake out of sleep; unbelievers to arise from the dead. . . Christ 'the True Light,' . . 'shall shine upon thee,' 'so enabling thee by being made manifest' to become and be by the very fact 'light' (v. 13). Then being so 'enlightened' thou shalt be able . . . to enlighten others."

I believe the Jews still respect the very aged. Then should not Christians of Europe and America and the whole world give more than ordinary heed to this exhortation of this aged divine? For it is manifest that it would simply be bringing us out of our present lethargy back to the practice of the early Christians, as recorded in the New Testament, in which book every human being who has been really converted is enjoined and commanded to be an active disseminator of the glad happy tidings of access to the heavenly Father's bosom through his beloved Son.

In my next paper I may be allowed to show very briefly from Wm. Arthur's Tongue of Fire the same truth sounded out like a peal of bells, backed by Dean Alford in his Commentary.

Reginald Radcliffe.

Redeeming the Time.

We hear and read so much of the constantly increasing pressure of work, which leaves labourers for God so little leisure to learn of, and commune with, Him, that a few words on the subject may be helpful. One fears there is a mistake in not making a better division of labour. We have met many earnest Christians who complained that, with the best intentions, they could not "inwardly digest" all the spiritual food placed before them at conventions; while at other seasons there was a famine of the Word of God. Should not each day be spent closer to the Master? Then we should hear his voice directing every step, and not require to put work for Him aside so often. "We need quiet for prayer," some say; certainly the secret place is frequently the sanctified place, but we know Christians who live in hourly converse with God, and who have breathed forth in silence their most fruitful prayers in a railway station or carriage, while others were fretting at the loss of time caused by delay or mistake.

The mention of trains reminds us always to have something at hand which will really profit or help in the way of reading. Too many run to the bookstall, and snatch up an illustrated paper to "amuse themselves with." They will afterwards complain that they have not time to study the progress of philanthropic and missionary work. A lady of our acquaintance was asked recently how she succeeded in studying so much, in the midst of a busy life; she replied that it was by securing the moments during monotonous rides in trams and trains, which she now found real places of rest and refreshment when wearied with district visiting, etc. There are persons whose eyesight will not permit them to read while in motion; but could not such redeem the time by prayer and meditation, or by learning Bible chapters or poetry by heart? This requires only an occasional glance at a book, and is often most helpful.

Again, could not Christians do more of their work together, and thus save the long discussions of ways and means, which are such serious drawbacks to steady labour with pen or brains? Our Lord loved to "talk by the way." David speaks of taking sweet counsel together on the way to the house of God. Some of our most joyful and profitable conversations have been held while walking with a Christian brother or sister, refreshed by the open air, and with some object in view which interested both.

One would beg for a little more consideration also, by which times and seasons may be easily made to fit in, so as to help, not hinder, the duties of others; and ask that fellow-labourers would not take up the carefully-planned hours, entailing often wearisome sitting up at night, when sleep is so sorely needed. Unpunctuality is a fruitful source of wasted time, and one which all should avoid; but that fact is now so universally recognised that it need not be referred to at length.

Could we not arrange the work better in many ways? There are numbers of kindly people who, though not themselves avowedly servants of God, are pleased to do small services for those they love in order to spare them additional burdens, and may be gradually drawn out into wider fields. If one sister is teaching classes of the poor, could not another look after the little ones at home? If one brother must prepare an address, and undertake the head-work for a meeting, could not another arrange the details of fitting up the room, and acting as doorkeeper or steward?

We want more of the wisdom also which does not thrust a square man into a round hole, apportioning tasks to someone unfitted for them, which another could do better in half the time. "If any man lack wisdom let him ask it of God, who giveth to all men liberally" (Jas. i. 5). "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ" (Gal. vi. 2).

C. Maud Battersby.

The Divine To-Day.

BY REV. ANDREW MURRAY.*

"The Holy Ghost saith, To-day."—(Heb. iii. 7.)

What does this mean? God is the Eternal One. With Him there is no yesterday or to-morrow; what we call past and future are with Him an ever-present Now; his life is an ever-blessed, never-ending To-day. One of the great words of this Epistle in regard to Christ and his salvation is the word Eternal—For ever. He has become the author of eternal salvation—that is, a salvation which bears the character of eternity; its chief mark is that it is an ever-present Now—that there is not a moment in which Christ, who ever lives to pray for us, is not able to maintain us in it in the power of an endless life.

Man is the creature of a moment; the past has gone from him, and over the future he has no control; it is only the present moment that is his. Therefore it is that, when he is made partaker of Christ, a High Priest for ever, and the eternal salvation He imparts, God's great word to him is To-day. In Christ all the blessedness of the great eternity is gathered up in an ever-present Now; the one need of the believer is to know it, to respond to it, and to meet the To-day, the Now, my child! of God's grace with the To-day, the Even now, my Father! of his faith.

If you would understand the meaning of this Divine To-day, look at it in its wondrous setting. "Even as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day." Satan's word is ever To-morrow, man's favourite word, too, To-morrow. Even with the child of God the word of unbelief is too often To-morrow; God's demand is too great for to-day; God's promise too high; we hope it will come easier later on. "The Holy Ghost saith, To-day." That means that He who is the mighty power of God is Himself ready to work in us all that God wills and asks; it is He who is each moment pleading for immediate surrender, for a present trust, because He bears with Him the power of a present salvation.

"To-day!" It is a word of wonderful promise. It tells that To-day, this very moment, the wondrous love of God is for thee—it is even now waiting to be poured out into thy heart; that To-day, all that Christ has done, and is now doing in heaven, and is able to do within thee—this very day, it is within thy reach. To-day the Holy Ghost, in whom there is the power to know and claim and enjoy all that the Father and the Son are waiting to bestow, To-day the Holy Ghost is within thee, sufficient for every need, equal to every emergency. With every call we find in our Bible to full and entire surrender; with every promise we read of grace for the supply of temporal and spiritual need; with every prayer we breathe, and every longing that rules in our heart, there is the Spirit of promise whispering, To-day. "Even as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day."

"To-day!" It is a word of solemn command. It is not here a question of some higher privilege which you are free to accept or reject. It is not left to your choice, O believer, whether you will receive the fulness of blessing the Holy Spirit offers. That To-day of the Holy Ghost brings you under the most solemn obligation to respond to God's call, and to say, Yes, To-day, Lord, complete and immediate submission to all thy will; To-day, the surrender of a present and a perfect trust in all thy grace. "Even as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day."

"To-day!" A word, too, of earnest warning. "Even as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day, if ye shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts." They shall not enter into my rest. There is nothing so hardening as delay. When God speaks to us, He asks for a tender heart, open to the whispers of his voice of love. The believer who answers the To-day of the Holy Ghost with the To-morrow of some more convenient season, knows not how he is hardening his heart; the delay, instead of making the surrender and obedience and faith easy, makes it more difficult. It closes the heart for to-day against the Comforter, and cuts off all hope and power of growth. O believer, "Even as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day," so when you hear his voice, open the heart in great tenderness to listen and obey; obedience to the Spirit's To-day is your only certainty of power and of blessing.

To all Christians whose life has been one of feebleness and of failure, who have not yet entered into the rest of faith, into God's own rest, this word To-day is the key to all their disappointments, and to all their failures. You waited for strength, to make obedience easier; for feeling, to make the sacrifice less painful. You did not listen to the voice of God breathing through every word. He speaks that wondrous note, even through the living Word, Jesus Christ, that wondrous note of hope, To-day. You thought it meant for the sinner a call to immediate repentance; you did not know that it means for the believer, each time he hears the voice, immediate, whole-hearted submission to all God says, immediate trustful acceptance of all He gives. And yet just this is what it does mean.

In the Epistle to the Hebrews we have a very wonderful exhibition of what Christ, as a High Priest at the right hand of God, can do for us in the power of an endless life. The entering into the rest of God, the perfect cleansing of the conscience in the blood through which He entered into the presence of God, our access within the veil into the presence of God, the being brought close to the very heart of God, the being taken up and kept in Christ in the love of God—these blessings are all ours. And over each of them is written the words, Now is the accepted time. "Even as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day."

* From The Holiest of All: An Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews. By Rev. Andrew Murray. (7s. 6d. J. Nisbet & Co.)

TABEETHA MISSION AT JAFFA.—Miss Walker-Arnott's report for the past year shows that the work of this Mission has been carried on under depressing conditions, owing to prevalent sickness, which has rendered many of the children unfit for much exertion, and owing to the serious illness of Miss Milligan. The schools have been continued as usual; also the evening classes. The relief of poor Jews proceeds on the same excellent lines as previously; loans are made to worthy people, who are therefore enabled to earn their living, and who invariably repay the amount borrowed with unfailing punctuality. The branch of the Y.W.C.A. has forty-six members. Miss Grierson is secretary, and takes the entire management. There are two meetings in the month, one devotional, the other social. The Children's Scripture Union in connection with our schools had fifty-seven members. Further particulars of the work may be had from Miss E. Walker-Arnott, 24, St. Bernard's-crescent, Edinburgh.

LIVINGSTONIA MISSION.

By DR. GEORGE SMITH, C.I.E.

In the whole history of the Church of Christ it would be difficult to name a mission to the dark races of mankind so rapidly successful in its results, alike spiritual and secondary, as the Scottish Livingstonia Mission in British Central Africa. Following David Livingstone, the Christian missionary and physician preceded the trader, the hunter, and the political administrator. From the first the savage tribes were thus influenced directly by the Gospel; while in little more than fifteen years after Dr. James Stewart and Dr. Robert Laws led the first expedition to Lake Nyassa, a country the size of France became a peaceful dependency of Great Britain. What that means, in the extirpation of the slave-trade and the progress of peace and civilisation, Commissioner Johnston, C.B., tells in his report, just printed by Parliament, of the first three years' administration of its eastern portion alone.

The Church, or every one of its members and adherents, is primarily concerned in that which is the root and the sanction of all this progress—the missionary's Gospel message and methods. For nineteen years the history of the mission has been one continuous effort, in which many noble workers have laid down their lives, to bring the Gospel to the tribes on the west side and north end of the lake, and on the adjoining uplands. The one station of 1875 has become seven stations, occupied by Europeans, each having many out-stations, and commanding a range of country 500 miles in length.

Native congregations have been formed at five stations, the largest at Bandawè, with 120 communicants; and classes for natives anxious to make a profession of Christianity are formed and regularly taught at all the seven.

Seven languages have been reduced to writing; books in them have been prepared, and several of these have been printed at the mission press. The whole of the New Testament and part of the Old have been translated and printed in one, and the Gospel of Mark in other three languages.

Forty schools are now open, taught by 150 native teachers, at which several thousand children are taught to read, and are instructed in Christian truth.

Evangelistic work is regularly shared in by the native Christians, some of them travelling ten miles to conduct services among their countrymen.

Slave-trading and raiding have been almost abolished within a great part of the sphere of the Mission, and a tribe like the Ngoni Zulus, who lived only by war and plunder, are being taught the peaceful arts.

Such results call for profound gratitude to God, and are, at the same time, his summons to increased efforts for the extension of Christ's kingdom.

WHAT MUST NOW BE DONE.

The Livingstonia Committee have given very careful consideration to the needs of the field, and have come to the following conclusions, after conferring with Rev. Dr. Laws before his return:—

1. A central institution is now required to train native artisans, teachers, evangelists, and pastors. The beginnings of such work have already been successfully accomplished in Bandawè; but it must now be undertaken on a plan fitted for the needs of the Mission and of the country, which is rapidly changing under the British Protectorate.

2. Woman's work among women is urgently needed, and the wives of the missionaries must now be aided by woman missionaries. Miss Stewart, certificated teacher, has already reached the Lake, and others should follow.

In order to set free the ordinary fund of the mission for the support of the agents hitherto employed, and of the woman missionaries to be sent out, a separate building fund has been formed.

The committee now ask the Church and all friends of the long-oppressed peoples of Central Africa for annual subscriptions to carry on the living work, above described, by a staff of twenty-five experienced missionaries, of whom five are women.

Ordained and Medical.

1. Rev. Dr. R. Laws, M.D., F.R.G.S.
2. Mrs. Laws.
3. Dr. W. A. Elmslie, M.B., C.M.
4. Mrs. Elmslie.
5. Rev. Dr. Kerr-Cross, M.B., C.M.
6. Mrs. Kerr-Cross.
7. Rev. George Steele, M.B., C.M.
8. Rev. A. G. MacAlpine.
9. Rev. A. Dewar.
10. Dr. G. Prentice, L.R.C.S. and P., Edin.
11. Rev. James Henderson, M.A. (to sail in April, 1895).

Evangelists and Artisans.

12. Miss Stewart, certificated teacher.
13. Mr. R. Gossip, jun.
14. Mr. P. M'Callum.
15. Mrs. P. M'Callum.
16. Mr. William Murray.
17. Mr. C. Stuart (on furlough).
18. Mr. William Thomson (on furlough).
19. Mr. G. Aitken.
20. Mr. W. G. Robertson.
21. Mr. A. C. Scott.
22. Mr. W. D. M'Gregor.
23. Mr. R. D. M'Minn.
24. Mr. Hugh Steven.
25. Mr. Malcolm Moffatt.

An annual salary of £250, rising to £330, and three salaries of £120 each are urgently wanted to complete the estimate by Dr. Laws of the staff required to carry the Gospel to the tribes calling for it in a way unprecedented in mission history, save in Uganda.

The expenditure has risen from £5000 to £8000 a year within the last five years, exclusive of buildings henceforth to be erected out of the separate fund raised by the convener, the Right Honourable Lord Overtoun, and some members of the Glasgow Committee. The inevitable extension of the mission has exhausted even the working balance. The work enters on its twentieth year, by the blessing of God having realised far more than the prayers and hopes of its founders, many of whom have been removed by death, and appealing for liberal support to a new generation who are privileged to reap the harvest.

The general treasurer is Mr. A. Ellison Ross, Free Church Offices, Edinburgh.

NORTH-SEA SMACKSMEN.

The Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen held on Thursday, at the Queen's Hall, W., good meetings for the furtherance of the work.

The afternoon was devoted to conference as to ways of working. An address by Rev. W. A. Bathurst, of Eastbourne, on the body as an instrument for service, prepared the way for the consideration of many practical points. Steps are being taken to extend the work among the boys by following them up when ashore, and for this end a Home is needed at Gorleston. Were it once secured and furnished, it would doubtless be self-supporting.

The evening meeting was largely attended. Mr. T. B. Miller, who presided, outlined some of the experiences of the Mission, and dwelt on the gratifying extension of the spiritual work. Mr. W. F. A. Archibald, chairman of the spiritual work committee, spoke of the efforts being made to found a Christian Association in order to bring believing fisherman into closer unity and helpfulness. The M.D.S.F. is, he said, extending in various ways. An important opening has been found on the south coast of Ireland, and it is proposed to send there a mission smack now too old for the stormy North Sea. Reference was also made to the valuable work begun by Misses Woodman and Wright at Ymuiden, Holland, among our own fishermen resorting thither. God is blessing the work in many directions.

Revs. C. H. Hicks and W. Darlow Sarjeant gave details of genuine results among the men at sea, souls saved from the power and darkness of sin. Miss Wilkes gave glimpses of work along shore among the men and boys in port, and among smacksmen's wives and children.

The interest of the evening seemed, however, specially centred in Labrador, as two nurses and two doctors who had been working in that bleak and desolate region were present to recite their experiences. Dr. Bennett dwelt on the deplorable condition of the fishing population—men and women who call England "home"—from a medical point of view. Sister Williams described in touching terms the state of things around Indian Harbour, where she has been working, while Sister Cardwardine followed with similar details of Battle Harbour.

Messrs. Frank Wilson and G. F. Mumford gave further accounts of work in the North Sea, while Mr. Wakefield, who has been in Labrador, added a few words as to the work the devoted Dr. Grenfell is doing. All interested in this romantic enterprise may have details from the secretary of the Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, 181, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

ALONE WITH GOD.

Glad are the sounds of rustic life,
The ploughboy's whistle gay,
The woodman's axe and laughter low
Of children at their play;
The village smithy's distant clang,
The sheepbell o'er the lea,
The rippling streamlets gurgling sound,
And zephyr's symphony.

But sweeter far eve's tranquil hours,
In Nature's cloisters dim,
When folding blooms their incense raise,
And birds their vesper hymn;
When crystal dew as manna falls,
Upon the daisied sod;
And silence reigns—'tis then the soul
Breathes peace, alone with God.

Gay are the sounds of city life,
The rush, the hum, the stir,
Unto the youthful buoyant heart,
As music on the air.
The ardent spirit longs to press
Life's steep and rugged way;
Labour is pleasant to the strong,
And love doth toil repay.

But sweeter far the shadowed room
And hour of hallowed calm,
When the young soul its flowercup opes
To consecration's balm;
Or as an eagle spreads its wings,
To mount o'er heights untrod,
Imbibing beauty, light, and love,
And strength alone with God.

Sweet are the sounds of choral song,
Through chancel, aisle, and nave,
The strains of the Magnificat,
And Nunc Dimittis grave,
The penitential Litany,
And grand Te Deum high,
Rising and sinking on the air,
In liquid melody.

Yet sweeter childhood's lispèd prayer,
Or contrite mourner's tear:
The sad Peccavi of the soul,
Breathed in our Father's ear.

O, glad the notes of love and mirth,
That greet us, 'midst life's throngs,
The prattling tones of infancy,
And youth's rich alto songs;
The gladsome symphonics of hope
And joy's ecstatic key,
The guileless strains of innocence,
And love's home harmony.

But sweetest far, if called apart
From active scenes of life,
The eager purpose, earnest toil,
And anxious feverish strife,
To watch one little hour with Him
Who wrath's deep wine-press trod;
Alone, yet never lone with Him,
Our great Immanuel God.

Harriet Julia Evans.

TRACT UNION FOR PRAYER AND WORK.

The third annual meeting of this Union was held recently at the Religious Tract Society's House. Rev. S. G. Green, D.D., expressed the hope that owing to its successful work the Union would soon be able to add the words "and praise" to its title.

The report was read by Rev. J. P. Hobson, M.A., editor of Light in the Home. He reported that the members of the Union had nearly doubled during the last year, 556 members having been enrolled. The contributions had amounted to £24 10s. 8d. To encourage the reading together of the same portion of Scripture by members, a Tract Union Bible-class had been set on foot.

Rev. E. W. Moore, M.A., gave an earnest address upon 1 John i. 7, pointing out that the great privilege of fellowship with Father and Son and so with one another was here set forth, and that faithfulness and faith in the blood of Christ were the conditions of attaining to it. Rev. W. F. Clarkson, B.A., pointed out that work for God was only done efficiently when all his people united in doing it, and that God often tried his workers by permitting absence of results for a time. Rev. A. Mercer, B.A., urged people to join the Tract Union because it banded them together, it was definite, and it helped to produce realisation of individual responsibility.

IN THE HOMES OF THE POOR.

The following sketches, supplied by the Mildmay Deaconesses, will take our readers "behind the scenes," and show them something of the distressing poverty that is hidden away in London streets and courts. Many of the suffering ones are "of the household of faith," and need timely help.

TWO "LITTLES" SHARED TOGETHER

A clean, tidy, happy-looking little woman whom we visit (in her seventy-eighth year) has supported herself entirely since her husband's death, some years now, by selling penny toys in the street. If the weather is wet she cannot sell her goods—there are no purchasers for such things as hers. On one such day quite recently, when she had spent her last halfpenny in buying toys, not being able to go out to sell them, she had not a farthing in the world wherewith to buy food for that day. She said to a woman, who is also a Christian, and whose room is near hers, "I've got a little tea for to-day, and that is all." The other said, "I havn't got any tea, but I have got a few cold potatoes." So these two sisters in adversity shared their tea and potatoes, and were content and thankful to Him, "who," she says, "has fed me all these years"; sometimes it is only dry bread, but she adds, "when I have paid the rent of my little room [a back attic] and have paid for my toys, I am quite happy and thankful."

POOR LITTLE ANNIE.

Thirteen years of weakness and suffering, thirteen years of privation and poverty, and only eighteen years old! Poor little Annie has had a sad life so far as this world is concerned. A fall when a little child caused serious injury to the spine, and prevented her further growth. For months together she has had to lie in bed in the little living room occupied by the family, where meals have to be prepared and eaten, and all the household work performed. Weary months of headache and the pain of spinal abscesses, when she is "so tired of lying down," and no change of posture gives her any rest. We are so glad when we are able to take her a little milk or fruit, as her father is often out of work, and she has to go without the necessary nourishment. And yet she is happy, for the peace of God fills her heart, and she knows that all that He does is good.

NEEDS NOURISHMENT, NOT MEDICINE.

"Oh, she's very ill, Miss; the doctor says I ought to be thankful it didn't kill her, taking her out," and the mother's eyes filled with tears as she looked down at the little wan face of the two-year-old baby in her lap. "Acute bronchitis and pneumonia," he says, "but I hadn't the money to pay him for coming to see her, and so I wrapped her up and brought her to the surgery." This is the youngest of seven children, the eldest of whom is not yet thirteen. The father suffers much from asthma, and is scarcely able to earn sufficient for the rent. The mother works hard at washing and odd bits of work, though often ill herself, in order to provide even bread for the seven hungry mouths. What wonder, then, that one after another has been ill? And the verdict at the Medical Mission has been: "Needs nourishment, not medicine." Such white faces and large eyes—"I can't get enough for them," says the mother.

LONG HOURS AND LITTLE FOOD.

We visited a young widow a few days ago, and found her, as usual, almost hidden behind a pile of cardboard boxes, at which she was working busily. Four years ago her husband died, leaving with her two little girls to support, and she has had to work hard to do this. "I have often worked for sixteen hours in the day, Miss, and have not tasted food all the time—but then, I don't mind as long as I can bring up the children properly," and she stops in her work for a minute to kiss the children as they start for school, and to return their accustomed salutations, "Good-bye, mother, God bless you."

Contributions towards special winter relief may be sent to Mrs. Codner, Conference Hall Office, Mild may Park, N. London.

THEATRICAL TEA MEETING.—Mr. William Forbes gave one of his tea meetings on Tuesday, November 27, at the Buckingham Temperance Hotel. The guests were dressers and ladies of the ballet and chorus. After tea a short Gospel service was held. Each guest was presented with a Christmas card from the Religious Tract Society, and a scented sachet, with text attached, from the Bible Flower Mission.

THE OUTLOOK IN IRELAND.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

It has been often said that the spirit of Romanism is not now what it was in the Middle Ages, when heretics, so-called, were burned at the stake. Apropos of this, an interesting and significant admission has just been made by Rev. Nicholas Murphy, P.P., of Kilmanagh, co. Kilkenny. They had recently a bazaar in Kilkenny for the purpose of renovating the Romish Cathedral, and Mr. Murphy contributed to the local papers what he termed "A Short History of Kilkenny" for the use of the visitors to the bazaar. Mr. Connellan twitted Father Murphy with having omitted all reference to the burning in the streets of the town of a poor woman named Petronilla, by the Romish Bishop Ledred, A.D. 1324. This woman and some others were convicted of riding upon broomsticks, holding communication with the devil, etc., so the bishop, by name Ledred, had them consumed to ashes in an auto da fé.

Father Murphy replied in The Kilkenny Journal of November 14, and we clip the following extract from his contribution:—

> The bishops and clergy in other parts of Europe allowed the Albigenses to spread and take root, by their remissness to oppose and combat them in time. Bishop Ledred deserves immortal credit for his action in such a critical period. He made the Irish Church his debtor, and his name should never be published or spoken of in Kilkenny, except with the greatest respect and veneration.

It seems, therefore, that in her persecuting spirit, if not in her doctrine, Rome is semper eadem. Bishop Nulty, of Meath, has made an addition to the Decalogue as follows: "Thou shalt not read The Westmeath Examiner." The Examiner is a newspaper, published in Mullingar, and the editor, Mr. Hayden, opposed Bishop Nulty in the matter of some waterworks scheme, and also in politics. The bishop forbade his flock to read The Examiner, under pain of mortal sin. Mr. Hayden, being a Roman Catholic, appealed to Rome. After a delay of seven months, during which time Mr. Hayden was not summoned as a witness, or even told if his appeal had been received, a Latin document was read from the pulpit in Mullingar Chapel. This bore the signature of the Cardinal Secretary of the Propaganda, and approved of Bishop Nulty's action. It is likely to open the eyes of many Roman Catholics to the real nature of Romanism.

In a recent communication I stated that the Birds' Nest at Kingstown owed its origin to Mrs. Smyly. What I should have stated was that its success is largely owing to herself and her daughters. The founder of the Kingstown Birds' Nest was Mrs. Wale, daughter of the great Archbishop Whately, a lady who had the deepest and tenderest love for Ireland and Irish Roman Catholics. Her sojourn here was, alas! humanly speaking, far too brief, but her Divine spouse knew what was best.

MISS SHARMAN'S ORPHANAGE.

Miss Sharman is able to render a very encouraging report of the work of the Orphans' Home, Austral-street, West Square, S.E. The last year was begun with 314 children in the homes, and closed with 320. Of the children who left during the year, six were adopted, 14 returned to their relatives, who were in improved circumstances and able to maintain them, four were apprenticed, 18 were sent out to service, and two died. Some of the details of the report are deeply interesting. For instance, two of the little inmates—a boy and a girl—have been devoted to the Lord by their foster parents, and are being brought up for service in the mission field, holy influences surrounding them, in the hope that the earnest prayers of many on their behalf will in due time be answered. A pressing need is a seaside branch of the work for children requiring change of air and scene.

Rev. W. Evans Hurndall presided over the annual meeting held on Wednesday last at Westminster Chapel, when it was shown that during twenty-seven years since the Orphanage was established 1158 children have been received. There is no begging for money; no debt has been incurred; the institution has neither funded property nor exalted patronage. The income for the year was £4792. The chairman spoke very highly of the good work Miss Sharman is doing, and expressed himself glad that she has dispensed with the system of voting. Another thing which called forth his cordial sympathy was that Christianity was taught in its proper order, not only by precept, but by practice. Two former inmates of the Orphanage who had been seven years in their first situation were each presented with a silver watch. Addresses were also delivered by Rev. J. B. Barraclough (vicar of St. Thomas, Lambeth), Mr. J. A. Smith, Mr. D. Welby, and Dr. Matcham.

[We hope that many of our readers will procure and peruse Miss Sharman's little report of work for the past year. Our sister has been feeling severely the pressure of sickness among the children, and greatly needs the sympathy and help of fellow-Christians. She is not an adept at proclaiming on the housetops the trial of her faith; we recommend friends to visit the Southwark Home and cheer its devoted foundress by word and gift.—Ed.]

THE FAITH MISSION.

The eighth annual report of the Faith Mission appears in its own magazine, Bright Words. This Mission was started for evangelisation in the villages and country districts of Scotland; and within the last two years the work has extended to Ireland. In the latter country there has been great blessing during the past year, and quite a revival spirit in many places in co. Antrim. Crowds of people have attended the meetings, which on Sunday evenings have often been required to be held in the open air because of the numbers. There has been much eagerness to hear the truth, and many have professed faith in Christ, changed lives testifying to the reality of the work.

In Scotland, besides work in the Lowland counties, many needy places in the Highlands, quite unaccustomed to evangelistic effort, have been visited. Five or six of the workers speak the Gaelic language, and are thus better able to get at the hearts of the people, as in some of these places English is little understood. Though the work is much slower than in Ireland, here also there have been many conversions. A number of the ministers have co-operated in the services held, and the Mission establishes branches of its prayer union, with unsectarian weekly fellowship meetings, where such are considered necessary and helpful. The large centres of population are mostly avoided, and the good news of the Gospel carried to necessitous country places that have been seldom, if ever, visited by evangelists.

There are now about fifty workers, whose whole time is given to the work. The total expenditure for the past year amounted to £1850. This last year's work seems to have been the most successful in spiritual results in the history of the Mission. The organisation appears to be closely connected with foreign mission work, and to prove a suitable field of training for missionaries. Several have gone forth from its ranks to various foreign fields, and accepted candidates of the China Inland Mission and South Africa General Mission have been among the list of workers. Members of the prayer union, who require to join annually, and are expected to pray for the work, are now scattered in all parts of the world, though the majority of them are in Scotland and Ireland. During this past year the headquarters and publication offices have been removed to India-buildings, Edinburgh.

COUNTRY CHURCHES.

Many country churches, both of the Congregational and Baptist order, are weakened by loneliness, notwithstanding the co-operation of the Denominational Union with County Associations in the direction of unifying. An attempt to relieve the isolation that depresses some pastors and churches has just been made on a limited scale. Certain Baptist ministers, who labour in Bucks, were invited with their wives to Abbey-road Church, St. John's Wood, on November 26 last.

Morning and afternoon conferences with Rev. H. E. Stone and helpers were succeeded by a public meeting. Six of the country ministers spoke upon rural Nonconformity, and told the story of the cost at which the poor among their people often maintain their principles. The large audience were thoroughly aroused, and possibly some tangible issue may accrue from the experiment at Abbey-road. J. Wilkins, Baptist Minister.

Wendover, November 29.

AT A CONFERENCE IN GATESHEAD, Dr. Spence Watson declared that the Local Veto and the Gothenburg system were not rivals but friends, and the one might be put in operation where the other failed.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9.—MARK VII.

The Traditions of the Elders (1-23).—The washing before meals is a cleanly habit, but directly it is elevated to the level of a religious duty it becomes lawful to protest against it as having no power to justify or sanctify. The perpetual tendency of the ritualist is to level up external observances to moral obligations, thus obscuring the standard of right and wrong. (10) Those that lay stress on minute outward rites are in danger, like the Pharisees, of minimising high moral duty. They permitted a man to dedicate his property to God under the term Corban, which would absolve him from maintaining his parents, though he might live out of it himself. (20) Every evil thing that comes from the heart leaves it defiled, and in need of the cleansing blood. Note that pride and foolishness are classed with murder and theft.

The Gentile Mother (26-30).—As well hide the sun as Christ. The ills of our children often drive us to Christ. His feet are the place for the sinner's cries and the saint's crowns. Better be a dog under his table than a child that refuses its bread. Let us learn to say "Yea" to all that He says to us, and to find a loving interpretation of every apparently harsh word. Delays are not denials. Faith makes difficulty its stepping-stone for reaching greater blessing.

Deaf and Dumb (31-37).—Mark often speaks of the Saviour's sighs. Couple your sighs for men with the upward look to God. The finger and spittle were intended to awaken man's interest and faith. The Lord often takes his children aside privately, and works miracles on them which make others cry, "He does all things well." Is not this a compensation for thy suffering?

MONDAY DECEMBER 10.—MARK VIII.

The Seven Loaves (1-10).—The compassions of Christ are not less tender. He will never allow us to faint. Arduous as our path may be, it has been carefully proportioned to our strength. He giveth power to the faint. How often we cry, "Whence?" when He is near who holds the keys of earth's granaries. Place your loaves in his hand; it is wonderful how much He will make of them. The addition of fish sets forth the Lord's desire to add to the necessaries of life all that is needed to make it pleasant and happy; or it may set forth those high times which visit the Christian soul. Mark the perpetual introduction of human instrumentality so far as it will go. But how short a distance it will carry until He make it his own.

The Demand for a Sign (11-21).—The Saviour Himself was the greatest sign—not what He did, but what He was. The generation around Him could have no other till they had mastered and accepted the beauty and wonder of his marvellous life. (14) What short memories we have! How easy it is for us to worry about questions which have been settled more than once for us, and our minds are so full of our earthly wants that we miss those greater thoughts which reach out their hands to pluck our garments and stay us to listen.

The Gradual Healing of the Blind (22-26).—Again He spat with the same object of arousing attention and faith. How many are healed in stages, where they might have all God's salvation at once. At the best in this world we see darkly, but presently face to face.

Christ's Prediction of His Death (27-38).—It was time to bring matters to a point, which He did by the question. They were prepared to recognise Him as Messiah, but they had yet to learn that the way to the throne was by the cross. We must daily follow the Lord without the camp, bearing his cross. To go with Him will inevitably cross the purposes of our self-life, and the drift of the world of men around us.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 11.—MARK IX.

Transfigured (1-13).—The Kingdom of God came with power at Pentecost and at Jerusalem's fall. All holy souls must have their mountain heights. When the Shekinah breaks from within, the curtains of the temple glow. Peter in his own mind was sure that the disciples would share Christ's tabernacle. We may always count on participating with all that is Christ's. Great manifestations of the Father's love always precede hours of darkness and storm. Evidently John the Baptist was the predicted Elijah. Christ knew that every step down the mountain side bore Him nearer his suffering many things, but he flinched not.

If Thou Canst Believe (14-29).—Whenever we fail to cast out the devil that torments men, we should inquire the cause. Lord, why? It never lies with Him, but with ourselves, and with our faith. The "if" is never with Christ. Ponder his great word. All things are possible to faith, and remember also that Christ is willing to help unbelief. He teaches moreover that prayer is the main condition of the increased faith which the strongest devils cannot withstand.

Christ's Humility and Modesty (30-37).—The Transfiguration was private (2); the miracle was to prevent a crowd (25); his passage through Galilee was hidden (30); and now he takes a little child and identifies Himself with it.

The Cost of Life (38-50).—The real life is of such value as to compensate for the putting away of what is innocent and natural in itself, if it causes stumbling. On such points each man must judge for himself. We must never lose our antiseptic power. All that diminishes this must be put away. You cannot salt savourless salt.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12.—MARK X.

The Primal Law of Marriage (1-16).—The home rests on foundations which God laid in Paradise. Infidelity to the marriage tie can alone cut the knot which God ties in every true marriage. On the whole, each must make the best of the unalterable step, not allowing life to be marred, but ascending by the very difficulties which may seem to block progress towards perfect manhood or womanhood. Let no one undervalue marriage. God made male and female, and in the person of Jesus welcomes children to his side.

Impulsive Youth (17-31).—We think we keep the commandments, until tested in the supreme court of love to our neighbours as to ourself. How ignorant we are as to ourselves. Christ is too good to permit us to live in a misconception of our true state. It is not wrong to have riches, but to trust in them. God is never in our debt. Whatever we give up with a single eye for his glory we receive a hundredfold.

The Cup (32-45).—The teaching about the death-scene was gradually extended, as they were able to bear it. The Lord could not give proximity in the glory unless there had been proximity in suffering and pain. We may drink of his cup by sharp and sudden martyrdom, as James; or by long and patient waiting, as John. He gave his life in ministry, his death as a ransom.

Bartimæus (46-53).—Those who rebuke will be the first to cheer, if only you show a resolute will. It is easy to cast away the impeding garment when Christ is near. As he went he received sight. The act of going proved his faith. Let us learn to receive, to reckon, and to act faith.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13.—MARK XI.

Hosanna in the Highest (1-11).—It is enough to know that Christ needs. This is the master-motive. It is delightful when Christ has no hesitation in counting on the response of discipleship. The ages of the patriarchs went before; those of the Church follow after; their voices blend in Hosannas. He looks around, preparatory to cleansing.

The Barren Fig-tree (12-25).—He hungers for fruit from thee and me. Unfruitfulness leads to sterility. If you will not bear fruit, presently you will not be able. With all her promises Jerusalem bore no fruit, or it bore the rotten fruit of temple defilement. We must reckon on God if we would see mountains moved. Our faith cannot stir them, but He can in answer to faith. Wait on Him for faith. It is the test of what He will do. Forgiveness is a prime condition of faith. "Believe that ye have received." This is one of Christ's deepest maxims. When we have definitely asked God to fulfil some gracious promise, we must as definitely believe that the answer has been bestowed, though it may not at once appear.

Christ's Authority (27-33).—They knew well the answer, but would not admit it; hence Christ threw them back on themselves. From those that have not is taken away that which they appear to have. Answer a fool according to his folly. Christ replied to a question that was couched in folly by asking another which put them on the horns of a dilemma. All of us have recognised the authority of Christ. His voice has pardoned our sins, given us peace, and hushed our fears.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 14.—MARK XII.

The Vineyard (1-12).—We should read this parable in connection with Isa. v. The time of Christ's incarnation was that of Israel's vintage. Note Christ's consciousness of being the Beloved Son. The vineyard with its precious fruit has passed for the time at least into the hands of the Gentiles, they are the others of the parable. Men cannot do without Christ. Reject Him they may, but ultimately He will be found as the corner-stone of every permanent building. You must build on this stone, or be crushed under it.

Cæsar's and God's (13-17).—Beware of men who flatter. Beneath the specious words the trap lies concealed. Yet it was a glorious confession that Christ spoke God's truth without respect of person. The service of God includes the rights of Cæsar. Submit to the ordinances of man for God's sake. By patience and virtues-bearing bring Cæsar's realm under the influence of the principles of the Kingdom of Heaven, in the meanwhile render to Cæsar his dues. Oh, to be as earnest towards God as men in politics!

Questionings (18-34).—There is an answer to every question about life or conduct in the word of God. How aptly Jesus handled it! What depths He saw in it! A man may be not far from the kingdom, and yet for ever without it. Let us not be content with correct theories and statements, but pass to childlike obedience.

The Common People (35-44).—The truest form of religion is found among the poor. To them the mysteries of the kingdom are clear. Downtrodden by the religious leaders, their humble offerings are dear to God, who reckons a gift not by its value, but according to its proportion to our possessions.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15.—MARK XIII.

Earthquakes and Wars (1-8).—The beginning of travail means life, not death. Out of the anguish of the world the new heavens and earth are being born. The evident strain of our times portends the approach of the King. The collision of kingdoms points to the setting up of his Kingdom that shall never be moved. Turmoil and strife shall be the conditions into which He shall come.

Hated (9-13).—The world cannot love those whose life is one long protest against its evil. The stakes of the martyrs have been their points of world-wide influence; their flames have lit inextinguishable fires. To every retort and taunt the Holy Ghost is prepared to suggest a fitting reply. Look for it. We may doubt whether we resemble Christ if the men that hated Him love us. Patient endurance is the supreme test of the genuineness of our faith.

Forewarned (14-27).—The world has witnessed the climax of horror, our Lord says, in the fall of Jerusalem. Mark his care of the elect. Their presence in the midst of the world's sufferings restrains their duration and intensity. We need to dread the flatterer even more than Apollyon. Test every seeming angel before you follow his lead, lest it be Satan in disguise. Prayer is the touchstone of trial, and it will mitigate hardship and deliver from the winter's flight.

Watch (28-37).—The most stable things around are transient compared with the words of Christ. Let us feed on them till we gain steadfastness. Uncertainty as to the Lord's return has been an incentive to the diligence and purity of the Church. Each has his peculiar work. What is yours? If midnight were the Dark Ages and cock-crowing the time of the Reformation, the morning must be breaking.

---

PLATELAYERS' MISSION.—Miss E. G. Ballard, of Walton-on-Thames, Surrey, hon. sec. of the Midland Platelayers' Mission, writes that a request has come from Anglesey on behalf of the men employed on the L. and N.-W. Railway there. About fifty men have been working on the line in the neighbourhood of Amlwch. It is desired to send them some mittens (large size) and mufflers fer Christmas. If any lady readers would send parcels of these articles to Miss Ballard, she would gladly forward them to the men.

MADAGASCAR, the problem of so much political controversy, appears in a pleasanter and more peaceful form in the record of the Bible Society. Mr. Stowell Ashwell, writing from Antananarivo on August 13, forwarded a unanimous request from the northern committee for a reference Bible in Malagasy, suggesting that 5000 copies should be printed, to be sold at 2s. 6d. each. He asked also for 10,000 copies of the Gospel of St. Luke. These were ordered to be sent forward, and the question of the reference edition was referred to the proper sub-committee of the Society on October 29; 5000 copies of the same Gospel were voted to Mr. Huckett on behalf of the southern committee.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 16.
THE TWELVE SENT FORTH.—Matt. x. 5-16.
GOLDEN TEXT (verse 7).

THERE were, at least, two special reasons for this sending forth of the twelve. (1) It was a period of training for them in view of the time when they would be left by our Lord as his witnesses. And (2) it was an expression of our Lord's compassion for the multitude (ix 36). The prayer the disciples were urged to offer was answered in this way (ix. 37, 38; x. 1). Before being sent they were empowered (x. 1). Nothing was required of them in their work for which they were not first qualified. And they obtained their power, where we must obtain ours, in fellowship with Jesus. He called them "unto Him" before He bade them "go." They went by two and two (Mark vi. 7), that their witness might have greater weight, and that one might encourage the other in time of difficulty and danger. The example is a good one. James Gilmour said in one of his periods of awful loneliness, "I wonder if I am telling the truth when I say that I felt drawn towards suicide? I take this opportunity of declaring strongly that on all occasions two missionaries should go together." Apostles and missionaries are but men.

The sphere of their work was restricted. Why neither to Gentiles nor Samaritans? For several reasons:—First, the apostles themselves were not prepared for such a work (see Luke ix. 54-56). Next, such a course would have intensified Jewish prejudices, and have closed their hearts against the Gospel. And, lastly, the time had not yet come. Until the rejection of Jesus by his nation the wall of partition remained. God had conferred upon the nation special privileges, and He would not take them away until they filled up the cup of their iniquity. Through their fall "salvation is come to the Gentiles" (Rom. xi. 11).

The character of their work was twofold. Preaching occupies the first place (7), because it aims at remedying what is wrong within. This was our Lord's method with the paralytic—first the forgiveness of sin, then the healing of the body (ix. 2-6). All the ills from which men suffer result from man having got wrong with God. The theme of their preaching was "the kingdom of heaven," the restoration of the heavenly rule within. Repentance is the first condition of entering that kingdom (Mark vi. 12). Miracles of mercy come next (8), for our Lord takes account of the body as well as the soul. Works of philanthropy and beneficence have always accompanied the preaching of the Gospel. Witness hospitals and orphanages in our own land, and medical missions abroad. The whole man is benefited by the Gospel of Christ. And as these miracles were the apostles' credentials, which secured their readier access to the souls of men, so have the works of healing abroad disposed the heathen to hear more readily the word of salvation. A woman who had received help for the body through the work of a medical missionary brought back the paper in which the medicine had been wrapped, and, pointing to the words "God is love," printed on the paper, she asked eagerly, "Will your God love me?"

Their instructions were very definite and detailed (9-15). (1) As to their journey. "Purses" (9) mean girdles, an indispensable article of dress when loose robes are worn. They are made often of leather, either plain or ornamented. "Scrip" (10), a wallet or small bag, made from the skin of kids stripped off whole and tanned, and used for carrying food on a journey. "Staves" were not to be specially provided, yet he who had a staff was not to throw it away (Mark vi. 8). The meaning of these instructions is, Go just as you are. "The open hospitality of the East would be ample for their maintenance."—Farrar. (2) As to their method (11-13).—They were to exercise discretion as to the house in which they entered, but, having entered, they were not to leave in search of greater convenience and comfort, and were to make that the centre of their operations in the district. The ordinary Hebrew salutation (12) was to be no mere formality in their case. They were messengers of peace. (3) As to their opposers (14, 15).—The symbolical action of shaking the dust off the feet signified that their rejectors were regarded as unclean, and that the Apostles renounced all responsibility for their uncleanness. "The day of judgment" was before the mind of Jesus. It would be well for his servants to work, and for all men to hear, with that day in view. The measure of guilt then will be determined by the measure of light that has been rejected. (4) As to the character they were to manifest (16).—They were to be as distinct as sheep are from wolves. "Wise" as opposed to imprudent rushing into danger. Persecutions may sometimes result, not from righteousness, but from foolhardiness and imprudence. "Harmless" means innocent, simple, and free from the spirit of retaliation. Let none of us forget that the value of our work depends upon the character we manifest.

[1237]

For the Young.

CRIPPLE JIMMIE.

MANY years ago during the early days of service in the East of London, our missionary came in to the Home of Industry, exclaiming, "I've got the poor little cripple at last," and he carried him in, crutch and all. When we accosted the wee chappie he gazed up into our face with his large dark eyes full of enquiry, wondering what next was going to be done with him. Only a moment, with a swift upward look to our Father in heaven, and we decided that it was his will we should care for this neglected child, living such a lonely life of complete isolation in an odd little garret in one of the lowest lodging-houses in Flower and Dean-street.

Jimmie was afflicted with hip disease, and had been an inmate of several hospitals, but again and again was sent back to his father and mother as incurable. They were costermongers, getting their living in the streets from early morning till late at night, selling fish, fruits, or vegetables. Poor little Jimmie was thus left in the solitary garret day by day, no one to give him a word of comfort. To his parents he was a heavy burden, and it is scarcely to be wondered at that they should at times wish he might die. The other children were all older than this little crippled ten-year-old, who was in such constant pain that he could scarce drag himself up and down the street by the help of his crutch, and cater among the thieves who haunted the lodging-houses for a bit of bread for himself. At our first meeting speech forsook his lips, but we saw those large wistful eyes pleading eloquently, though silently, and we were quite sure that the Saviour was bidding us care for this apparently dying laddie for his sake.

Jimmie never returned to that lonely garret again. He was speedily "at home" amongst us all. What a wondrous change! Loving, gentle hands caring for him, dressing the painful wounds, and tenderly soothing the aching weary limbs. Through the care he received, and nourishing food, he lived for five years in our Training Home, becoming the pet of the family. His softening influence settled many a quarrel, and helped in subduing many a wild lad gathered from the streets.

Often the children would vie with each other who should be favoured to carry up Jimmie's breakfast at times when he could not leave his bed. Wild and careless ones would sit beside him, pouring into his ear the story of their troubles, and in the midst of agonising pain he would sympathise with them and advise them for their good; while, when they forgot their difficulties, and wept for his suffering, they would be rewarded with one of the sweetest smiles that ever illumined the face of one reared in the school of mysterious suffering.

THE GREAT CHANGE.

On returning from one of our voyages from Canada, great was our joy to observe a look of settled peace upon Cripple Jimmie's pale face. At times this look of restful peace and assurance broke into a radiance, as he realised that the Lord Jesus had suffered for him, and that all his sins were forgiven, and that he was just waiting till the time when he would be taken to dwell with his Saviour for ever, and all his pain and weakness would be gone. But the Lord had work for Jimmie to do yet, and for a time he rallied wonderfully. The perfect peace that enwrapped his soul, seems to have a soothing effect on the poor body, and again he became able to rise, and, by the aid of his crutch, get into the playground, to watch the boys and girls at play.

NEARING HOME.

As Jimmie grew older his weakness increased. The sores in the hip and leg sapped away his remaining strength, and he longed for the rest of the home above. He lingered several months, ever patient and sweet. Sometimes he inquired for his father and mother, and heard of them as still living in the same lodging-house; probably they were satisfied he was well cared for, but the cruel curse of drink had hardened their hearts, and they never troubled to pay him a visit all those years.

It was a lovely Sabbath, about mid-day, when the last message from our Jimmie was given in haste by the girl who delighted most to wait on him. "Come quickly, Jimmie wants you." Soon we were by him, and found some half-dozen of his companions standing around. Nothing could be done. The Master had come to take home to Himself his suffering child. The lips moved, but our ear failed to understand the words he strove to say. Putting her ear close to his mouth, gentle Emmie interpreted the message: "Jesus! Jesus! Jesus!" and his spirit passed within the veil, to know no more of sorrow and pain.

The evening of the day of our dear Jimmie's release, we were going in and out of the lodging-houses, as was our wont, with a little band of fellow-workers, seeking to win back to the fold poor forsaken men and women. Whilst telling out the story of redeeming love we referred to the touching scene of Jimmie's departure. Tears fell from many a hardened man's eyes, and at length one crept out and found near by in the public-house called the "Blacking Bottle" the parents of the dear lad. They were, however, too stupefied with alcohol fully to comprehend that their son had departed this life, so we saw neither of them until the next day, when the mother came, smelling of gin. Poor woman! drink had done its deadly work all too surely. She had no feeling, nor did she gaze at his sweet peaceful face, but, fingering aimlessly the nails in his coffin, exclaimed, "What pretty nails you've put in!" We were glad to help her safely downstairs, weeping as we did so at the sad sight. Another one held fast in the coils of the deadly enemy which destroys its tens of thousands in this favoured land of ours. The young people for whom we have laboured all our life have learned to hate the drink with a bitter hatred.

Now, who will give unto their Lord a special thankoffering for us to use as He opens the way to comfort and soothe such as the dear wee cripple Jimmie? There is much to be done both for old and young, who are laid heavily upon our hearts in connection with the Home of Industry, 29, Bethnal Green-road, London, E.

There are lonely hearts to cherish,
While the days are going by;
There are weary souls who perish,
While the days are going by.
If a smile we can renew,
As our journey we pursue,
Oh! the good we all may do
While the days are going by.

ANNIE MACPHERSON.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, Allerton, near Bradford, to Dec. 9; Liverpool, Dec. 10; Bolton le Moors, Dec. 11, 12; Stackstead Dec. 13; Altrincham, Dec. 14; Bristol, Dec. 15—17; Needham Market, Dec. 19; Stowmarket, Dec. 20; W. Kensington, Dec. 28; Sydenham. Dec. 29; Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Norwich, Dec. 7—10; Buckingham, Dec. 11; Aylsham, Dec. 12; South Creake, Dec. 13, 15, 16; Holkham, Dec. 14; Thetford, Dec. 17; Southwold, Dec. 29-30; Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Gloucester, to Dec. 10; Horton, Dec. 12-19; Mr. J. S. Tyler, Worthing, to Dec. 10; Nottingham, Dec. 15—22; Mr. Goodman, Baxter-road, Islington, to Dec. 7; Mr. H. Falkner, Little Munsden' Dec. 6; Woburn, Dec. 7; Tolmers St. Mary, Dec. 10; Sarratt' Dec. 11; Latimer, Dec. 13; Chesham Bois, Dec. 14; Much Hadham, Dec. 18; Therfield, Dec. 19; Sidcup, Dec. 20; Mr. A. C. Jewell, St. Michael's, Chester-square, Dec. 7; Kentish Town, Dec. 13.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending Dec. 15.—Sun., Dec. 9, Revelation v. 1-14; Mon., 10, vi. 1-17; Tues., 11, vii. 9-17; Wed,. 12, xix, 6-16; Thurs., 13, xx. 1-15; Fri., 14, xxi. 1-14; Sat., 15, xxi. 15-27.

MARGATE.—It will interest many, and especially those who during holidays at Margate attended the noon-day prayer-meetings, to hear that these gatherings are still carried on at No. 4, Cecil-square. It was thought at first that they would have to be relinquished at the close of the season, but so good have been the attendances, and so manifest has been the blessing testified to by both visitors and residents of every denomination, that the ministers under whose auspices they were inaugurated have determined to carry them on. F. G.

THONON MISSION, HAUTE SAVOIE.— Misses Larritt and Wilson, in the new report of their work, say: "Our little cottage hospital might have been full all last winter, but, having no nurse, we were unable to have more than two people at a time. At the end of June, on our return from England, a lady, who has been fully trained for nursing, came with us; so that, in this department, our start for the coming winter's work is more promising than ever before. With a fully-qualified medical man, or, better still, a lady, there would be no limit to the spiritual work that might be done. The people have so little confidence in their priests that it is useless for them to forbid their coming to us. They come just the same, and the power of a medical mission is illimitable. We are most anxious to welcome at least two more missionaries out here before the winter sets in. We say missionaries rather than workers, for we need helpers with a true missionary spirit. Communications regarding the work should be addressed to Mesdemoiselles Larritt and Wilson, Mission Evangélique, Thonon, Haute Savoie, France.

Some London Missions.

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN INSTITUTIONS.

While profoundly thankful for the earnest endeavours being made to check open vice, one cannot but reflect that there are thousands of unhappy victims, keenly sensible, many of them, of their ruin, for whose rescue the most strenuous efforts are demanded. Moreover, as every practical worker knows, rescue must be accompanied by preventive measures on behalf of the hapless and hopeless, trembling on the verge of sin, and apparently, if left to themselves, impelled by circumstances to the fatal plunge. So the devoted Mr. E. W. Thomas discovered long ago in organising his famous Homes. Preventive work must go hand in hand with rescue. Thus the Friendless and Fallen Institutions, which grew up under his care, have not only saved thousands of the lost, but have also prevented many thousands from treading the same sad downward course.

While the beloved leader has been called to his rest, the work to which he gave his life continues in full operation. There are now open four Rescue Homes, in which those who seek to flee an evil life are received, trained, and brought under loving Christian care. Then there are three Preventive Homes for friendless girls of good moral character, imperilled by reason of want, homelessness or contaminating surroundings. Many of these are country girls, who have come to London to "better themselves," or who having had a place have lost it and are found

WANDERING HOPELESSLY IN THE STREETS.

Besides these seven Homes, which form the solid basis of operations, there is the Open-All-Night-Shelter, 37, Manchester Square, W.C., which stands ever ready for the immediate reception of all who approach its doors, whatever the past may have been. Nor is this a mere shelter, from which, after a night's lodging, they may go their own way. Each morning every fresh inmate is interviewed, her confidence won and help proffered. Thousands of interviews of the most pathetic kind take place in the course of a year; and for the most part these lead to definite results. Looking into the histories of the cases thus discovered, learning how sad many of them are, and how happily many have been saved just in time, one is overwhelmed with a sense of gratitude that such a house of refuge is to be found in this CITY OF PERILS AND PITFALLS.

These Homes accommodate 240 girls, and they are now full. From twelve to thirteen hundred applicants come before the secretary every year. Many of these need only advice, help to return to friends, or to find work. Thus hundreds are aided and saved who never enter the Homes, but who, without such friendly aid, would be apt to sink.

All in the Homes, fallen or unfallen, are brought under Christian influence; the first grand effort being to win them to the Saviour. This work continues right through the year. As the secretary remarks, "All the summer long, when friends seem to forget us, these girls press to our doors, and we go on seeking to save them. But this means money. We have 960 meals to serve every day; whilst a plain simple outfit must be provided for those sent out to service. To maintain the work, and pay our way, we require, with the strictest economy, £900 before Dec. 31. Unless this be provided, these beneficent operations will be hampered; but we feel sure that God's people have only to know the need to supply it. He whose work it is, will provide, as He has ever done."

It may be added that while the limits of this article preclude incidents, the records of the carefully-kept books show that in every part of the world there are those who owe restoration to respectability and newness of life to these Homes. God is greatly blessing the work. The present secretary, Mr. W. J. Taylor, has spent his life in this service, being brought up in it since youth by the late Mr. Thomas. He seems a man of one idea; and that is to save the lost. The address is, as of old, 200, Euston-road, N.W.

GROVE-ROAD MISSION, WOODFORD.

Woodford is well known as an extensive semi-rural suburb, but it has, like many other suburbs, its needy corners, and in one of these this good mission is at work. There are few gipsies there now, but the mission originally grew out of efforts made to evangelise a band of gipsies, for whom a tent was erected, and then a little hall opened. This grew, the working people of the district began to press in, the place became too small, much prayer was made, and, through a chance conversation in a railway carriage, God touched the heart of a gentleman to start a building fund with a gift of £200. Eventually, in 1883, a new hall was opened, accommodating 550, and this has often proved too small. Thus a visit to a gipsies' tent led (viâ a tent, a cottage, and a hayloft) to a fine mission hall.

In this hall earnest work is carried on by voluntary helpers. The Sunday morning and evening services are well attended and fruitful. The Sunday-school, started with four children, has now 250. The Bible-classes have been much blessed, while the various weekday services, temperance, and other meetings are full of interest. Both the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. have branches meeting in rooms connected with the hall.

Moreover, from this centre earnest aggressive work goes on. Mr. E. Hobbs, the founder and hon. superintendent, devotes his whole time to such service in the poor homes around, while he has an active band of willing helpers in sick visiting, tract work, personal dealing, and open-air preaching.

Attached, there is a crêche for the infants of mothers who must go out to daily work. On the day of my visit I found eleven little ones, merry and content—sometimes there are many more. Poor mothers know the boon of such a nursery, where they may leave their little ones with an easy mind.

An interesting additional effort has also grown up in the setting apart of one adjoining house as a Home for Aged Women, who have a room free, and are helped in various ways by kindly ladies. The whole of this work is in a thriving condition, and even now in rear of the hall, Mr. Hobbs is building a much-needed addition—class-rooms, reading-room, and new day nursery. Eventually he hopes to complete the block by adding two more houses for aged women.

To a very large extent the Mission has been, and is, self-supporting; but for these new and necessary additions at least £500 more is needed, and for this the committee look to the Lord's people who may be led to consider the claims of such a useful Mission in a poor corner of Woodford. It is doing, in fact, pioneer service for all the churches, and many, born to God within its walls, are now united to and working with various denominations. The hon. superintendent is Mr. E. Hobbs, Chelmsford-road, South Woodford.

Pearl Fisher.

CRIPPLES IN EAST LONDON.

The Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, was the scene of much excitement on Tuesday last week, when the anniversary of Mr. C. L. Boyer's Home Cripples' Band was celebrated. During the morning many willing helpers were arranging, in one part of the building, for a jumble sale, while others were preparing for tea in the large hall.

Shortly after two o'clock the cripples began to arrive, being conveyed in vehicles of every description, vans being provided for those coming from the more distant parts of Hackney and Homerton. By 4.30 the greater part of the 500 children forming the "Band" had assembled, and, with 500 parents or guardians, prepared to enjoy their tea. What a sight it was! Crooked limbs and distorted bodies, yet happy faces withal!

Tea being over, an hour was passed pleasantly by the children entertaining their parents with choruses, recitations, and solos. During the evening one little lad, with his body and head encased in an instrument, reached the hearts of many present by his clear treble singing of a temperance melody. A public meeting was afterwards held, Miss Charlotte Mason in the chair. Several addresses were delivered, interspersed with solos by Madame Jessie Strathearn and Mrs. G. Day Winter, also choruses by the "Cripples Choir."

Several friends bore testimony to the Christ-like work carried on in East London by Mr. Boyer, and the sympathy and co-operation of all present was solicited.

The secretary of the mission is Mr. Charles H. T. Archer, 29, Cottage-grove, Bow, E.

PEW RENTS.—A correspondent, referring to Dr. Cuyler's recent article on "The Model Church" lodges a complaint against the pew-rent system. In most of our Evangelical churches, says the writer, the best seats are let to those who can pay most. He believes that many poor people are driven by this system into ritualistic churches, where all are welcome, and rich and poor sit side by side.

TREASURE UPON EARTH.

We have received a number of letters on "Laying up Treasure upon Earth," the question recently raised by correspondents in our pages. Fred Kent, writing from York, says: "To his disciples our Lord said, 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you.' Is this teaching to be taken literally? If so, why not this, 'Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth'? Christ's immediate followers obeyed Him literally; why are not we to do the same?" A lady writing from Stockport, says: "One thing seems very plain: we are required to lay all we have, as well as ourselves, at the Saviour's feet. Therefore, our money is no longer our own. Every penny we spend or give away should be laid out as Christ's stewards, and under his direction. Were it so, would not Christians generally be more simple in their style of living?"

Lieut.-Colonel Alves, on the other hand, contends that Christians are justified in laying up, and in many cases it is their duty to do so. After showing that "An Inquirer" quoted Scripture without due regard to the context, and the circumstances of the counsels specified, he maintains that parents should at least provide for the instruction of their children, and starting them in life, and those who are called to high places must sustain their proper positions. Among other Scriptures he quotes: 1 Cor. vii. 18-24; Eph. vi. 5-9; Col. iii. 22 to iv. 1; 1 Tim. v. 8; vi. 1. In conclusion, he points out that if Christians were more discreet concerning money in prosperous years, Christian agencies would not, in bad seasons, be left to struggle with grave difficulties.

Yet another correspondent, "J. C. T.," writing from Ardahan Rectory, Ireland, calls for a practical interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount, not only as regards "laying up treasures," but as regards lending, giving, and enduring wrong at the hands of others (Matt. v. 40-42; vi. 19-21). He says:—"Had those women who ministered to our Lord not had 'substance,' they could not have aided Him; had Mary not had a little store by her she could not have purchased the ointment wherewith to anoint Him; and had Joseph of Arimathea not had wealth, he could not have provided a costly burial and tomb for his newly-found Master. I venture to suggest that what is really needed nowadays, and what I humbly believe would meet the spirit of our Lord's demands on the subject of property, is proportionate giving to his cause on the part of all Christians. 'As the Lord has prospered us' should ever be the standard. Rev. E. A. Watkins, Vicar of Ubbeston, Yoxford, Suffolk, the founder of the Proportionate-Giving Union, would, I am sure, be only too glad to supply any of your readers with literature on the subject."

GIPSIES IN EPPING FOREST.

A ten days' mission has been held in Epping Forest, at Lambourne End, by Mr. J. Mercer, of the London City Mission. Being driven outside the Metropolitan area, the gipsies congregate in large numbers just over the border. They welcome Mr. Mercer, who has followed them, and gather round him and the other missionaries and friends in their open-air meetings in the encampment.

Now that the winter has set in Mr. Mercer was induced to borrow a tent, but on the third night of the mission, November 12, it was blown to pieces. Mr. Taylor, of the "Bee Hive," then generously placed one of his tea rooms at their disposal, so with renewed vigour and success the missioner and his helpers carried on their meetings. The news of the tent disaster and of the workers travelling sixteen miles by road (there and back) night after night, through the storm, roused the gipsies and the scattered inhabitants of the village, and on the remaining seven nights the big room was packed, the windows being thrown up, so that the congregation in the yard might also hear.

Nearly a hundred sons and daughters of the desert availed themselves of a free tea, kindly given by friends in the neighbourhood. The blessing of the Lord came down on the assembly every night, and to almost every one of the willing workers was it said, by the gipsies, "We thank you for coming; we can understand what you say, and we like your bright singing. We know we are great sinners, but we will love Jesus."

Six addresses were given by gipsies, one of the speakers being Mrs. Smith, widow of Bartholomew, one of the brothers Smith, converted gipsies.

L. C. M.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW BOOKS.

In foolscap 8vo, antique cloth, price 2s. 6d.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS AS JOHN BUNYAN WROTE IT:

Being a Facsimile Reproduction of the first edition published in 1678. With a New Introduction by Dr. JOHN BROWN, Author of "Bunyan and Times."

"A facsimile of John Bunyan's own Pilgrim does something to bring us closer to John Bunyan. With this book in our hands we seem to be admitted to his familiarity, and allowed to admire his genius and his goodness more than we did before."—Expository Times.

New and Revised Edition. In demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

THE GOVERNMENT OF GOD.

Embracing AGNOSTICISM, EVOLUTION, AND CHRISTIANITY. By WILLIAM WOODS SMYTH. This Work presents a connected outline of Evolution in Nature and Religion, National and Social Life.

In foolscap 8vo, tastefully printed and bound, price 4s. 6d.

THE VISION AND THE CALL AND OTHER SERMONS.

By Rev. J. M. GIBBON, Author of "In the Days of Youth," "The Disciples' Prayer," &c.

"Mr. Gibbon is a fine preacher. His sermons are full of life, point, power. Delightful preaching which cannot weary you, and which at every turn gives you something to think of, and that something so expressed that it is easy to think of it, and hard to forget it."—Preacher's Magazine.

In crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

THE REVELATION.

A BOOK FOR TO-DAY. BY A. DICE.
WITH PREFACE BY REV. J. W. DAVIES.

In crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

HEREAFTER AND JUDGMENT.

THE SATAN OF THE OLD TESTAMENT. THE SATAN OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. By the Rev. W. H. TUCKER, formerly Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

Second Edition, enlarged. Crown 8vo, 420 pp., price 5s.

THE GREAT DAY OF THE LORD:

A Survey of New Testament Teaching on Christ's Second Coming, the Resurrection, and the Judgment of the Living and the Dead. By the Rev. ALEXANDER BROWN, Aberdeen.

"Exceedingly able and deeply interesting."
Expository Times.

"Learned and acute, stimulating and suggestive."
The Scotsman.

"A brilliant book on a great theme."
The Clergyman's Magazine.

In crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

TALKS WITH YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE PSALMS.

By C. H. PERRY.

"The author has succeeded admirably in this good purpose. The talks are shrewd and pointed. They suggest rather than exhaust. They will be found therefore all the more helpful to parents, teachers, and preachers."
Presbyterian.

In tasteful crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

MAX REICHNER, PASTOR.

A Story of the Bohemian Persecution. By H. O. WARD.

"Teaches a lesson of masterly devotion and self-sacrifice. An impressive little story which can hardly fail to awaken the interests of adherents of the Protestant faith."
Public Opinion.

Now ready, in handsome crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s. With frontispiece portrait.

THE SUCCESSFUL SOUL WINNER.

Incidents in the life of Rev. EDWARD ARMSTRONG TELFER, Wesleyan Minister: A Memorial and a tribute by his Widow. With an introduction by Rev. JOHN POTTS, D.D., Toronto, Canada.

"One of the most interesting pieces of biographical literature we have ever read has just come from the press. A career that was singularly chequered, but in its general features most blessed and inspiring."—The Christian.

In crown 8vo, price 5s.

ENGLAND HEIR OF THE WORLD.

By J. E. HENDLEY.

"Mr. Hendley has addressed himself to the task with an industry quite amazing and with a simple faith which anyone might envy. He has produced, at least, a thoughtful book, and the publisher has clothed it in a most attractive garb."—Aberdeen Free Press.

Crown 8vo, price 1s.

THE SECRET OF ALL SUCCESS.

THE POWER OF THE WILL IN THE BATTLE OF LIFE. By H. RISBOROUGH SHARMAN, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-law, Editor of The Insurance Guardian.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, PATERNOSTER-ROW, LONDON.

Keswick Christmas and New Year Cards.

GLAD MESSAGES. Six Floral threefold Cards, with Verses. Very pretty. Price 1s. per packet. (A B C)

GREAT PEACE. Twelve Floral and Landscape Cards, with Texts. Price 1s. (A B)

EASTERN VIEWS. Twelve Cards, with beautiful Scenes of Palestine and the East. Price 1s. (A B D)

PEARLS. Twelve small Folding Cards, with Floral Designs and Verses. Price 1s. (A B C)

SEA VIEWS. Twelve Cards, with Sea Scenes. Price 6d. (A B D)

GREAT JOY. Twelve Cards, with Cliff and Sea Scenes. Price 6d. (A B D)

Keswick Motto Cards for 1895.

Size 9⅛ by 4⅝ inches. Price 1d. each.

1. SEA VIEW, WITH PROMINENT TEXT.—"Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it."
2. SEA VIEW, WITH PROMINENT TEXT.—"Ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."
3. FLORAL INITIAL, WITH PROMINENT TEXT.—"He is faithful that promised."
4. FLORAL INITIAL, WITH PROMINENT TEXT.—"The Lord knoweth."

Motto Cards,— Oriental Series.

Four different designs, beautifully designed and coloured. Size, 9⅛ by 4⅝ inches.

Price One Penny each.

1. EASTERN CITY AND BAY SCENE, with Camels. Prominent Text.—"He careth for you."
2. SEA VIEW, with Date Palms. Prominent Text.—"He faileth not."
3. SEA VIEW, with Rest House on Cliff. Prominent Text.—"Ebenezer, hitherto hath the Lord helped us."
4. LAKE BANK VIEW, with Travellers. Prominent Text.—"As thy days so shall thy strength be."

All with another appropriate Text and well-selected Verse of Hymn on each.

LONDON:
J. E. HAWKINS & Co., Ltd.,
17, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.; AND 36, BAKER ST., W.
MARSHALL BROTHERS, KESWICK HOUSE, PATERNOSTER ROW.

JAMES NISBET & CO., PUBLISHERS.

Just Published.

Great Principles of Divine Truth. By the Rev. the late Canon HOARE, M.A. With Portrait. Extra crown 8vo, 6s.

Just Published.

Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By the Rev. G. S. BOWES, B.A., Author of "Illustrative Gatherings," etc., etc. Extra crown 8vo, 6s.

Just Published.

Youth's Ideals. By the Rev. J. REID HOWATT. Small crown 8vo.

CONTENTS.—1. The Athlete. 2. The Merchant. 3. The Scholar. 4. The Artist. 5. The Rover. 6. The Christian.

Just Published.

Prayers for Heart and Home. Being Morning and Evening Devotions for One Month for Family and Private Use. By the Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A. Pott 4to, 2s. 6d.

Just Published.

The Holiest of All. An Exposition of the Hebrews. By the Rev. ANDREW MURRAY. Gilt top, pott 4to, 7s. 6d.

Just Published.

Why Do You Not Believe? By the Rev. ANDREW MURRAY. Cloth extra, pott 8vo, 1s.; roan, gilt edges, 2s.

ALSO BY THE REV. ANDREW MURRAY.

Abide in Christ: Thoughts on the Blessed Life of Fellowship with the Son of God. 68th thousand, small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

Like Christ: Thoughts on the Blessed Life of Conformity to the Son of God. A sequel to "Abide in Christ." 32nd thousand, small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

With Christ in the School of Prayer: Thoughts on our Training for the Ministry of Intercession. 31st thousand, small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

Holy in Christ: Thoughts on the calling of God's Children to be Holy as He is Holy. 12th thousand, small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

The Spirit of Christ: Thoughts on the Indwelling of the Holy Spirit in the Believer and the Church. 14th thousand, small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

The Children for Christ: Thoughts for Christian Parents on the Consecration of the Home Life. 8th thousand, small crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

The New Life: Words of God for Disciples of Christ. 9th thousand, small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

Be Perfect: A Message from the Father in Heaven to His Children on Earth. Meditations for a Month. Second Edition, cloth extra, pott 8vo, 1s.; roan, gilt edges, 2s.

Wholly for God: The True Christian Life. A series of extracts from the writings of William Law. Selected, and with an introduction by the Rev. ANDREW MURRAY. Crown 8vo, gilt top, 5s.

JAMES NISBET & CO., 21, Berners-street, W.

RECENT "R.T.S." BOOKS.

Any Bookseller will supply these Books, or they will be sent direct from the Publishing Office on receipt of Cash.

LETTERS OF SAMUEL RUTHERFORD. With a Sketch of his Life, and Biographical Notices of his Correspondents. By the Rev. ANDREW A. BONAR, D.D. With Engravings. Demy 8vo. 5s.

ROBERT MURRAY M'CHEYNE, Memoir and Remains of. By the Rev. ANDREW A. BONAR. New Edition, with Appendices, Facsimiles of Writings, and Portrait. Demy 8vo. 5s.

EXCELLENT WOMEN. Containing the Lives of Elizabeth Fry, Countess of Huntingdon, Lady Russell, Frances Ridley Havergal, Hannah More, Susanna Wesley, Mrs. Hemans, Madame Guyon, Ann Judson, Mary Louisa Whately, Agnes Jones; Elizabeth, Duchess of Gordon. Portraits and Autographs. 1s. 6d.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. Illustrated with Pen and Pencil. Comprising English Pictures, Scottish Pictures, Irish Pictures, and Welsh Pictures. 28s., in bevelled cloth boards, gilt edges.

WALKS IN PALESTINE. By HENRY A. HARPER. Illustrated by 16 Photogravures from Photographs. New Edition. Cloth, gilt edges. 10s. 6d.

PICTURES FROM BOHEMIA. Drawn with Pen and Pencil. By JAMES BAKER, F.R.G.S. Handsome cloth, gilt edges. 8s.

HENRY MARTYN: Saint and Scholar. By GEORGE SMITH, C.I.E., L.L.D. 10s. 6d.

THE CHRONICLES OF THE SID; or, the Life and Travels of Adela Gates. By ADELA E. ORPEN. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE HANDWRITING OF THE KINGS AND QUEENS OF ENGLAND. By W. J. HARDY, F.S.A. With reproductions of the Autographs and many Letters of all the Sovereigns from Edward the Black Prince to the Present Time. Imperial 8vo. 10s. 6d. Cloth boards, gilt edges.

THE MIDNIGHT SKY. Familiar Notes on the Stars and Planets. By EDWARD DUNKIN, F.R.S., F.R.A.S. With 32 Star-Maps and numerous other Illustrations. New and thoroughly revised Edition. 8s. Cloth, gilt top.

GEOLOGY AND HISTORY, THE MEETING PLACE OF. By Sir J. W. DAWSON, LL.D., F.R.S. 5s.

THE DAISIES OF NAZARETH. By HUGH MACMILLAN, D.D. 3s. 6d.

AMONG THE TIBETANS. By ISABELLA BIRD BISHOP, F.R.G.S. 2s. 6d.

THE HOUSEHOLDERS' TREASURE; or, Things New and Old. A Plain Book on Serious Subjects, for Occasional Reading. By the Rev. F. BOURDILLON, M.A. 2s. 6d.

HEROES OF THE GOODWIN SANDS. By the Rev. THOMAS STANLEY TREANOR, M.A. With Illustrations. Fourth Edition, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE LOG OF A SKY PILOT; or, Work and Adventure around the Goodwin Sands. By THOMAS STANLEY TREANOR, M.A. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FROM DARKNESS TO LIGHT IN POLYNESIA. By the Rev. W. WYATT GILL, LL.D. 6s.

A FORGOTTEN GREAT ENGLISHMAN. The Life and Work of Peter Payne, the Wycliffite. By JAMES BAKER. 5s.

SANITARY CODE OF THE PENTATEUCH. By the Rev. C. G. K. GILLESPIE. 2s.

EARLY CHURCH HISTORY. By J. VERNON BARTLET, M.A. 1s.

THE PRINTED ENGLISH BIBLE. By the Rev. RICHARD LOVETT, M.A. 1s.

HOW TO STUDY THE ENGLISH BIBLE. By Canon GIRDLESTONE, M.A. New Edition. 1s.

NEW TESTAMENT GREEK, An Introduction to. By the Rev. S. G. GREEN, D.D. 1s.

A PRIMER OF ASSYRIOLOGY. By A. H. SAYCE, LL.D. 1s.

LEISURE HOUR ANNUAL. 812 pages. Profusely Illustrated. Handsome cloth. 7s. 6d.

SUNDAY AT HOME ANNUAL. 828 pages. Coloured and other Pictures. Handsome cloth. 7s. 6d.

BOY'S OWN ANNUAL. 832 pages. Profusely Illustrated with Coloured and other Pictures. Handsome cloth. 8s.

GIRL'S OWN ANNUAL. 832 pages. Profusely Illustrated. Handsome cloth, 8s.

Published by THE RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY
56, Paternoster-row, London.

48 ILLUSTRATED TALES for Young People and Adults have just been published by the Religious Tract Society. They are all well-written, graphically illustrated, prettily bound in the newest and most attractive styles. The Shilling Enlarged Series is especially cheap. Please ask your Bookseller to show you these volumes if you are needing books for Presents or Prizes. All Booksellers keep them in stock, or will get them if ordered. For libraries these books are supplied in extra strong binding at the same prices as for the attractive cloth.

LIBRARIES.

PUBLISHED BY MORGAN AND SCOTT.

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF

Scripture Biography.

Consisting of the undermentioned SEVEN VOLUMES, each containing Nine Full-page Illustrations, and attractively Bound in Library Style, in a handsome Case,

PRICE 14/6 NET.

If sent by Post 1s. extra.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

ABRAHAM: or, the Obedience of Faith.
ISRAEL: A Prince with God.
JOSEPH: Beloved—Hated—Exalted.
MOSES: The Servant of God.
JOSHUA: And the Land of Promise.
ELIJAH: And the Secret of His Power.
JEREMIAH: Priest and Prophet.

Any of the above Volumes may be had separately—
In Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF

Scripture Exposition.

Consisting of the undermentioned THREE VOLUMES, attractively Bound in Library Style, and enclosed in a handsome Case,

PRICE 6/6 NET.

If sent by post, 6d. extra.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

THE WAY INTO THE HOLIEST: Expositions of the Epistle to the Hebrews.
THE LIFE AND LIGHT OF MEN: Expositions of John I.—XII.
TRIED BY FIRE: Expositions of the First Epistle of Peter.

Any of the above Volumes may be had separately—
In Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF

Devotional Volumes.

FORMING

The Christian Life Series.

Consisting of the undermentioncd FIVE VOLUMES, attractively bound in Library Style, in a handsome Case.

PRICES—NET

In Cloth Boards, Library Style, in Case, 5/- In Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, in Case, 7/6

Postage 6d. extra in each case.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

CHRISTIAN LIVING
THE PRESENT TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE
THE FUTURE TENSES OF THE BLESSED LIFE
THE SHEPHERD PSALM
THE PSALMS: Notes and Readings.—Separately, at 1s. 6d. and 2s.

Any of these Volumes may be had separately—
Cloth Bds., 1s.
Cloth Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

THE "D. L. Moody" Library.

TEN of Mr. MOODY'S most Popular Works, bound in Roxburgh Style, and enclosed in an Oak Case.

PRICE 12/6 NET.

If sent by post 1s. 3d. extra.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

ADDRESSES.
TO THE WORK.
THE WAY TO GOD.
BIBLE CHARACTERS.
THE OLD GOSPEL.
SOVEREIGN GRACE.
THE FAITHFUL SAYING.
PREVAILING PRAYER.
POWER FROM ON HIGH.
HEAVEN.

The above TEN WORKS can also be had bound in Five Volumes and enclosed in a neat Box,

PRICE 10/6 NET.

Postage 1s. extra.

Any of the above volumes may be had separately.
In Tinted Covers, 1s. Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.
Cloth Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

THE "Anna Shipton" Library.

Comprising Eleven of ANNA SHIPTON'S Favourite Works, bound in SIX VOLUMES, in handsome Roxburgh style, and enclosed in a Neat Box,

PRICE 10/6 NET.

If sent by post, 1s. extra.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Vol. I. | Tell Jesus. | Vol. IV. | Waymarks of my Pilgrimage. |
| | Footsteps of the Flock. | | The Promise and the Promiser. |
| Vol. II. | The Brook in the Way. | Vol. V. | The Sure Mercies of David. |
| | God's Messenger. | | Whispers in the Palms. |
| Vol. III. | Precious Gems. | Vol. VI. | The Watchtower in the Wilderness. |
| | Gathered Herbs. | | |

Any of the above Volumes may be had separately. A complete list sent post free on application.

THE LIBRARY OF

Christian Biography.

Consisting of the undermentioned SIX VOLUMES, each with Portrait, and tastefully bound in Library Style, in a handsome Case.

PRICE 12/6 NET.

If sent by Post, 1s. extra.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

C. H. SPURGEON: The Prince of Preachers.
DUNCAN MATHESON: The Scottish Evangelist.
HENRY MOORHOUSE: The English Evangelist.
GAWIN KIRKHAM: The Open-Air Evangelist.
ISABELLA MACPHERSON: A Devoted Life.
WESLEY AND WHITEFIELD: The two Great Evangelists of the last Century.

Any of the above Volumes may be had separately.
A complete List sent post free on application.

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

GREAT DISTRESS in WHITECHAPEL.

Bread for Poor Jews.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED

To provide free meals, coal, and clothing to destitute Hebrew Christian Women and Children.

A CHRISTMAS TREAT

Will also be given to about 600 of our Band of Hope.

Clothing, etc., directed to H. EHRLICH, Hebrew Conference Hall, Old Montague-street, Whitechapel, E.; and Donations to J. A. CRUICKSHANK, Esq., Treasurer, 114, High-street, Whitechapel, E.

HOMEWARD BOUND!

THE UNLOADING OF THE

CHRISTMAS BOAT,

Laden with Gifts for Sailors of various nations, will (God willing), take place SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29th, at the

SAILORS' WELCOME HOME,

173, St. George's-street (Corner of Prince's-street), Ratcliff Highway, London, E. All friends are welcome.

TEA AT SIX. UNLOADING OF BOAT AT SEVEN.

Meetings in different languages before and after.

☞ Will Friends sending CARGO for Boat kindly forward as soon as possible to MISS CHILD, at the above Home.

BREAD FOR STARVING JEWS.

Distress terrible: no food, no fire, illness and starvation. Kindly help us, as in former years, to alleviate the acute suffering by giving FREE MEALS, BREAD, SHELTER, COAL, SICK RELIEF, etc., also

XMAS TREATS TO HUNGRY CHILDREN.

Garments, please direct D. OPPENHEIM, City Mission to Jews, 119, Leman-street, E.

Donations, GEORGE WADE, Esq., Treasurer, 30, Schubert road, Putney, or may be sent to the office of THE CHRISTIAN.

TO · SAVE · TO · THE · UTTERMOST

H & H

Estd. 1857.

FRIENDLESS & FALLEN.

Homes for 240 Young Women & Girls.

I am truly thankful to those readers who have responded to my appeal on behalf of this Mission of Mercy. There is, however, great need of further help to discharge liabilities incurred in giving prompt succour to young women and girls.

The following extracts are from letters recently received :—

"If you could do something for me I should be very thankful."

"Will you give me another chance? I will make the best use of it."

A Father, whose daughter had been helped recently, wrote :—

"It is only those who have had occasion to make use of the Institutions can fully appreciate their value."

Reader! Please help us. Contributions may be sent to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, or to Office :—200, EUSTON ROAD, LONDON, N.W. WILLIAM J. TAYLOR.

Bankers, Lloyd's Bank, Ltd., 54, St. James's-street, S.W., on whom all remittances should be crossed.

RED, WHITE, AND BLUE CHRISTIAN INSTITUTE FOR LADS,

CUMMING STREET AND COLLIER STREET, PENTONVILLE.

President - - - Lord Kinnaird.

Our Institute in this rough and densely populated district aims at getting hold of the lads to bring them under Christian influence. Besides Bible Classes, Gospel and Temperance Meetings, etc., we have Libraries, Gymnasium, Penny Bank, Athletic Clubs, Summer Seaside Homes, etc. For the Mothers there is a Bible Class, with Coal and Clothing Clubs, etc.; the girls also have a Bible Class and Musical Drill. We are doing too, what we can to alleviate the sickness and need which abounds. For all this we ask the help of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN. Full particulars gladly sent by the Hon. Secs. The Editor will kindly receive contributions.

"Ye shall be a delightsome land."

BIBLE LANDS MISSIONS' AID SOCIETY

FOUNDED 1854.

President, Rt. Hon. EARL OF ABERDEEN. Treasurer, LORD KINNAIRD.

Our object: to regain the lost Bible Lands for Christ.

50 MISSION WORKS AIDED LAST YEAR in Macedonia, Asia Minor, Armenia Persia, Arabia, Egypt, Syria, Palestine; ORPHANAGES, Training Homes, HOSPITALS Dispensaries, SCHOOLS, Native Protestant Churches, GOSPEL PREACHING, &c., &c

VERY SPECIAL APPEAL IS MADE FOR INCREASED HELP

which will be thankfully received by Rev. W. A. ESSERY, Hon. Sec., Alliance House, 7, Adam-street, Strand, London, W.C. Pictorial Pamphlets free.

PUBLISHED BY MORGAN AND SCOTT.

NEW WORKS BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

A NEW VOLUME OF

SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY.

Jeremiah:

Priest and Prophet.

With Nine Full-page Illustrations, Specially Prepared and Artistically Printed on Antique Paper.

PRICES.

Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Top .. .. .. 3/6

A Review from Word and Work.

"Another of those choice, tender studies in Scripture Biography that Mr. Meyer has made peculiarly his own. There is no struggle to be startlingly original; but there is everywhere an earnest endeavour to be practically helpful to God's people. Mr. Meyer's new volume will be heartily received, and will be found to be one of the best in a fine series. The illustrations, too, add considerably to the attractiveness and value of the book. Both author and publishers have done their work well."

A CHARMING PIECE OF AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

The Bells of Js.:

Or, Voices of Human Need & Sorrow.

LARGE OCTAVO SIZE:

Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

With Life-like Portrait of Rev. F. B. Meyer and Seven other Full-Page Engravings, Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

PRICES.

Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6

Presentation Edition, – Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Top 3/6

From the Methodist Times.

"A book of real and charming melody; a book in prose and yet of poetry; a book of work and yet of rest; a book that will refresh while it entertains, and which once read will want to be read again. It is a book to soften the heart and moisten the eyes, and to quicken all the holy impulses of souls yearning for the welfare of their fellows."

"It would be difficult to present anything more attractive and readable." —DIVINE LIFE.

THE NEW YEARLY VOLUME OF

The Herald of Mercy.

Profusely Illustrated. Containing Stirring Appeals, Striking Narratives, Choice Extracts, Biographical Sketches, Children's Pages, &c.

"FULL OF THE GOSPEL IN STORY AND SONG."

Attractively Bound in Pictorial Boards, Price 1s.

"Its varied contents, profuse illustrations, and attractive binding combine to make it a most acceptable present."—The Bookseller.

"It is bright without and within. It is full of good pictures. It is well printed, and every line is laden with the good old story of Jesus and His love."—Baptist Messenger.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK ON PROPHECY. JUST READY.

After the Thousand Years:

THE GLORIOUS REIGN OF CHRIST AS SON OF MAN IN THE DISPENSATION OF THE FULNESS OF TIMES.

By GEORGE F. TRENCH, B.A.

"No book has ever appeared in print giving so magnificent a conception of the Gospel of the glory of the blessed God in its relation to the Sovereignty of the Son of Man over things in heaven, and earth, and under the earth. Numerous passages of Scripture become luminous which were otherwise obscure the plan of the ages becomes intelligible, and the path of the devout student of prophecy shines more and more unto the perfect day, as the light of the Age of Ages is reflected upon it—the Age in which in the name of Jesus every knee shall bow."

Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

ALFRED HOLNESS,

14, PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON,

LONDON BIBLE AND BOOK SALOON.

NEW PUBLICATIONS, ALMANACKS, &c.

SEASON 1894-5.

NOW READY. A very Beautiful and Select Assortment of MILDMAY and other CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR'S Packets of SCRIPTURE CARDS, also MOTTOES and BOOKS suitable for the season, in great variety. The assortment of general Christmas and New Year's Cards comprises fully 2000 different subjects, the productions of the best Publishers and Artists, and very special care has been taken to secure suitable words. Friends are invited to inspect the very CHOICE SELECTION now on view at the BIBLE AND BOOK SALOON, 14, Paternoster Row, E.C.

The Saloon is open from 9 to 8, and on Saturdays from 9 to 5 during the season.

A Special Selection of Framed Texts and Hand-Painted Designs, and Texts for Walls.

ILLUSTRATED LISTS UPON APPLICATION.

THE M. S. H. GOLDEN TEXT BLOCK CALENDAR.

Price 1s.; post free 1s. 3d. Kindly order this at once, as the supply is limited.

The "Faithful Words" Sheet Almanack, 1d.; post free 1s. 3d. per dozen. Beautifully Illustrated.

The "Day by Day" Book Almanac for Christmas, 1d.; post free, 1s. 3d. per dozen.

The "Search and See" Book Almanack, for Children, 24 copies, post free, 1s. PRIZES are offered with this Almanac.

The "Faithful Words" Volume, 1894. Price 1s. 6d., post free; cloth gilt, 2s.

London: ALFRED HOLNESS, 14, Paternoster-row, E.C.
Glasgow: R. L. ALLAN & SON, 143, Sauchiehall-street.

CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR.

Christmas Cards.

The Best Shilling Packets ever Offered.

"Messrs. Thridgould and Co.'s Packets are Marvels of Cheapness. Beauty, and Variety, and they deserve the highest praise, being as perfect as it is possible to imagine or produce.—Ladies' Journal of Fashion."

1s. No. 1. Santa Claus Packet. Fifty Cards. Eclipses all previous Value, well Assorted with Seasonable Verses and Greetings. The best Shilling Packet when quantity is required. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. No. 2. Goodwill Packet. Twenty-five very pretty 1d., 2d., and 3d. Cards, including several very good Novelties, also Folding shaped and Autograph. A very welcome packet where Quantity and Quality are required. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. No. 3. Christmas Chimes. A Prize Packet of Twelve very handsome Cards, including Jewelled, Folding Autograph Cards, Relief Edge, Embossed and "Ideal" shaped Cards. Also many Novelties which alone are worth more than the price charged for the whole. All will be delighted with this selection. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. No. 7. Mizpah Messages. A choice Packet. Six most Beautiful Floral Cards, with carefully chosen Religious Verses by Frances Ridley Havergal, including a very pretty booklet by Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Son. Appropriate for the Season. Sent, post paid, 1/1.

1s. No. 8. Three 1s. Autograph Booklets. Elaborate Designs and Jewelled, Highly Finished, with Silk Cord and Tassels, Gold and Silver blocked. "FAITH," by Frances Ridley Havergal. "PROMISES," by Charlotte Murray. "GOD BLESS YOU," by same Author. Published by Raphael Tuck, and are well worth 1s. each. The three sent, post paid, 1/1.

THE FINE ART HALF-GUINEA BOX.

10/6 Worth of Cards for HALF-A-CROWN.

A Combination of Good Taste, Artistic Merit, and Unequalled Value (vide Press).

Our Superb Selection of Best Cards contains a splendid variety of Twenty-five Rich Designs, most graceful and charming Cards. This Season's Selection is certainly the best we have ever had the pleasure of offering, comprising Cards from the value of Twopence to Ninepence each, including Jewelled, Frosted, Novel Shaped and Cut-out Cards, Elegant Folding and Model Cards, Ideal, Irradiant, and Tabletine Cards, all of the very best description, with carefully selected verses and quotations from celebrated Authors. Sent, Parcels Post paid, 2/9, or Two Differently Assorted, 5/-. 2/6

Special Parcels and Orders as hitherto will receive our best and prompt attention.

Shopkeepers should send for Wholesale Catalogue and Samples of Christmas Cards, Novelties, &c., post free, Three Stamps.

JOHN THRIDGOULD & CO.,

18 and 20, Sidney street, Commercial-road, London, E.

(ESTABLISHED 1851.)

THE ART RUBY CARDS.

NEATH EASTERN SKIES. A Packet of Twelve very choice Cards, with Eastern Scenes, and appropriate Texts. Price Sixpence. Christmas 237, New Year 237½.

THANKSGIVING, and The Voice of Melody. Twelve Cards with Flowers and Landscapes. With Texts. Price Sixpence. Christmas 230. Also Texts only.

STREAM AND SONG. Mottoes for the Homeward Journey. Twelve Cards, with Motto Texts. Price Sixpence. 236.

THE DESERT PATHWAY. A Packet of Twelve Mottoes for 1895. With Eastern Sketches. Price Sixpence. 238.

ART VERSE CARDS for 1895. Beautifully Printed in Gold and Colours. With Cord to hang. Deckled edges 10 by 8½ ins. Price Twopence. 14s. per 100.

No. 3.—Lean Hard. No. 4.—All for Jesus (Consecration Hymn).

 No. 4 can also be had with blank space for Parish Notices.

JOHN GEORGE WHEELER, 88, Mildmay Park, London, N.

JUST PUBLISHED.

CONSOLING THOUGHTS.

By M. AUGUSTA BREWSTER.

With original Frontispiece and Floral Designs on each page. Pott 4to, elegant cloth gilt, 3s.

"A tasteful book of holy thoughts designed to comfort the suffering and the sick."—Sword and Trowel.

"A treasury of comforting thoughts which will be very precious to the sick and suffering. The arrangement of topics is comprehensive and striking."—The News.

"We recommend this volume most heartily."—English Churchman.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR,

Recently published, with 12 original illustrations, crown 8vo. 5s.

Three Months Travel in Egypt and Palestine, &c.

"Much information is given on points not always noted by travellers, and the illustrations of the Gospel narrative are many. . . . We hope it will be given widely as a New Year's Gift."—The News

"A valuable addition to the library of every student of Biblical history."—The Record.

London: JAMES NISBET & Co., 21, Berners-street, W.

WHEN THE SUN RISETH;

Twelve chapters on

"WHAT IS BELIEVING?" "SERVICE," "CHARITY," Etc.;

Interpaged with Bible verses.

Word and Work says: "For a thoughtful man or woman, beset with mental and spiritual difficulties, this will form a splendid help, and give, we believe, to many such, the clue of the maze."

THE CHRISTIAN: "We believe the book will be of real service to many."

English Churchman: "The scheme worked out is a remarkably telling one."

Published at 5s.; can be had at reduced prices for circulation from (Miss) HARRIET E. COLVILE, c.o. the publishers, Messrs. J. NISBET, 21, Berners-street, W.

S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.'s BOOK SALOONS,

8 & 9, PATERNOSTER ROW

(No. 9, up the Passage),

Contain the largest and most varied collections of

NEW BOOKS FOR THE SEASON, ANNUALS, CHRISTMAS CARDS, &c.

Conveniently arranged for inspection.

New Illustrated Catalogue Post Free.

CHEPSTOW CHIPS;

OR, O'ER TRUE TALES.

Specially adapted for distribution amongst Working Men.

2s. per 100. Packets 1 to 7, each containing 25 Booklets, assorted, 6d. per packet.

PACKET 6. 41.—Number 17 Ward. 42.—You all know Me. 43.—A Sprint Runner. 44.—A Changed Man. 45.—How a Farrier was Won. 46.—R.H.A. 47.—A Flare-up. 48.—A Sunday Hunt.

PACKET 7. 49.—How the Answer Came. 50.—Can't Find Old England. 51.—A Deserter's Story. 52.—That's Worth While. 53.—The Last Glass. 54.—Find the Winner. 55.—Hell-fire Jack. 56.—An Italian Brigand's Story.

DRUMMOND'S TRACT DEPOT, Stirling.
S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co., London.

VOLUME I. FOR 1894

OF

The Morning Star

WILL BE PUBLISHED ON OR ABOUT

DECEMBER 10th.

Cloth, plain, 2s. Cloth, gilt, 3s.

We ask those friends who would like the volume to kindly order it AT ONCE. It will be sent post free to all who do so. It will contain a splendid chromo-lithographed

CHART OF THE DISPENSATIONS.

London: ALFRED HOLNESS, 14, Paternoster Row.
R. L. ALLAN, 143, Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow.

A LIST OF THE

REV. DR. BULLINGER'S WORKS,

PUBLISHED BY

EYRE & SPOTTISWOODE

Post free on application to the publishers,

GREAT NEW STREET, FETTER LANE, LONDON, E.C.

BIBLES. BIBLES. BIBLES.

Wonderful Value. Catalogues Gratis.

THREE SPECIAL TEACHER'S BIBLES—

Pearl, 24mo, Refs. Persian Morocco, kid-lined, red gold edges, silk sewn. Usual price, 8s. 6d.; for 4s. 6d.

Minion, 16mo, Refs. French Morocco, yapp, red gold edges, round corners. Usual price, 11s. 6d.; for 6s. 9d.

Bourgeois, 16mo, Refs. Persian Morocco, yapp, silk sewn, kid-lined, round corners, red under gold edges, magnificent print. Usual price, 21s.; for 11s. 3d.

All post free from the BIBLE AND BOOK SALOON, 57, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

THE NEW COMPLETE COOKERY BOOK,

Now ready, price 6s.

CASSELL'S NEW UNIVERSAL COOKERY BOOK

By LIZZIE HERITAGE.

With Preface by LEONARD GRÜNENFELDER, Chef, Grand Hotel, London.

12 Coloured Plates and numerous Illustrations.

Extra crown 8vo, 1344 pages.

"The book is so large, so comprehensive, so well-ordered, and so exhaustively instructive as to form a little library of its subject."—Scotsman.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Ltd., Ludgate Hill, LONDON.

LONDON CABMAN'S MISSION.

EST. 1871.] KING'S CROSS, W.C. [EST. 1871.

Owing to the decease of many of our old supporters, we find it a difficult task to get new subscribers for this much-needed work amongst cabmen. Only those who have to do with these men know the difficulties in getting them under the sound of the Gospel. Yet hundreds have been brought to the Saviour. We implore Christian friends to help us, that the work may not flag. Particulars of the mission and its agencies may be had of the founder, JOHN DUPEE, 165, Hemingford Road, Barnsbury, N.

Donations may be sent to the Office of THE CHRISTIAN.

HOME MISSION WORK.

CHURCH PAROCHIAL MISSION SOCIETY,

7, ADAM STREET, ADELPHI, W.C.

General Superintendent—Rev. W. Hay Aitken. Treasurer Edward M. Denny, Esq. Bankers—Barclay, Ransom, and Co. Secretary (to whom all communications should be addressed)—Rev. Herbert Muir, M.A.

The object of this Society is to promote Mission-work in the Church of England by supplying a staff of experienced Mission Preachers, who possess true Evangelistic gifts and real spiritual power. Evidential Missions have been made a special department of the work. Their aim is to counteract the spread of Agnosticism. Missions have been held in over 3000 parishes.

£400 are urgently NEEDED for pressing needs. SUBSCRIPTIONS and DONATIONS will be gratefully acknowledged.

THE # MISSIONS TO SEAMEN.

Patron:—

Admiral of the Fleet H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, K.G.

AN additional £2000 a year is much needed to cope with the terrible evils afflicting sailors of various nations in the Port of London, and to meet the deficiency and increased liability arising from various urgent extensions in the last two years of religious operations amongst Sailors of numerous nationalities, afloat and ashore, in many seaports, including the Port of London, the Manchester Ship Canal, and San Francisco Harbour.

INCOME, £33,586.

Contributions, Offertories, Drawing-room Meetings, &c., are solicited. They should be sent to COMMANDER W. DAWSON, R.N., The Missions to Seamen, 11, Buckingham-st., Strand, London, W.C.

DEAN MACARTNEY, MELBOURNE.

At the Mildmay Conference and Keswick Convention of 1893, and at the annual meetings of the Bible Society, the Church Missionary Society, and other institutions in that year, few speakers created a deeper impression, or seemed to bring a more direct message from God, than Rev. H. B. Macartney, junior, a visitor from Melbourne, remembered by the older habitués for his addresses at similar gatherings fifteen years before.

But we have now to speak of Mr. Macartney's honoured father, the Dean of Melbourne, who entered into rest on October 8, in his ninety-sixth year, and who was for nearly half a century a standard-bearer for the truth of God in the colony of Victoria.

Hussey Burgh Macartney, senior, was the youngest son of Sir John Macartney, Bart., a member of the old Irish House of Commons before the Union. His maternal grandfather was the Right Hon. Walter Hussey Burgh, Lord Chief Baron of Ireland, and M.P. for Dublin University. The late Dean was born in Dublin on April 10, 1799, and it was a favourite remark of his that he was two days older than the Church Missionary Society, which was established by sixteen Evangelical clergymen and laymen on April 12, 1799. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and was ordained to the ministry of the Church in 1822. For twenty-six years he laboured faithfully in his native land, first as curate, and then as rector. The great cholera visitation of 1832, and the terrible potato famine of 1846, were occasions which brought out all the energy, devotion, and unselfishness of his character, as he went in and out among his people tending the sick and feeding the hungry. His self-sacrificing exertions during the cholera plague resulted in his being himself attacked by the disease; but he was graciously raised up to live for sixty years more.

In 1847, the Bishopric of Melbourne was established, and a remarkable Cambridge man, Charles Perry, who had been Senior Wrangler, and was a tower of strength to the Evangelical cause in the University, was appointed the first bishop. Naturally, Bishop Perry sought for true and able men to accompany him to Australia, and one of the party that sailed with him was Hussey Burgh Macartney. What is now the great city of Melbourne, with its half-million inhabitants, was then a small and straggling settlement, only eleven years old; for it was in the year that Queen Victoria ascended the throne of Great Britain that the first few shanties were put up on the banks of the great inlet of Port Phillip. The interior of the country was entirely wild, but a few settlers were gradually establishing themselves here and there, and Mr. Macartney rode long distances in the bush, and was content with the roughest fare, in order to preach Christ, gather the people into little congregations, and start Sunday-schools. Very soon he was appointed Archdeacon of Geelong, despite the objection raised by some residents that he was too old for the post, being nearly fifty years of age. He lived and laboured forty-five years after that!

The extraordinary development of the Colony of Victoria and its capital dates from 1851, when the discovery of gold brought a tremendous rush of immigrants. For a time Melbourne was almost deserted, and Ballarat and Bendigo arose as the "golden cities." The latter town, in which the shafts of the gold mines stand in the principal streets alongside fine public buildings, has given the world in forty years sixty-four million pounds sterling of pure gold! But Melbourne profited by the precious metal, and grew apace; and its population is now nearly one-half of the whole colony. In the year of the discoveries Dr. Macartney (for his old University had conferred on him the degree of D.D.) was appointed by Bishop Perry to be the first Dean of Melbourne, and from that time he was a prominent figure in the great capital. He only once left Australia to visit Europe, just thirty years ago. He served the cause of true Evangelical religion throughout the episcopates of Bishop Perry and Bishop Moorhouse (now of Manchester), and he rejoiced in the appointment of Bishop Goe, who now presides over the diocese, as a faithful preacher of the Gospel as well as an able and kindly administrator.

Dean Macartney was a man of very decided views. He was an uncompromising Protestant, and maintained with all his heart the doctrines of grace as revealed in the Word of God, and the simplicity of Evangelical worship, and he was also a firm upholder of the inspiration and authority of Scripture. Naturally, therefore, he was the vehement antagonist of all that was either Romanising on the one side or "down grade" on the other. He followed modern controversies with the keenest interest, bringing every question that arose to the touchstone of the Bible. Of course he was often denounced as a bigot, but that did not trouble him at all; and his most strenuous opponents respected him for his consistency of character, his old-world courtesy to all men, and his loyalty to Christ. On his eightieth birthday, fifteen years ago, an extraordinary demonstration took place in the magnificent Town Hall of Melbourne—a building as large as the Free Trade Hall at Manchester, when all denominations of Christians joined in their congratulations, and a purse of a thousand guineas was presented to him. Similarly, on April 10 last, his ninety-fifth birthday, letters and telegrams rained upon him from all parts of Australia, and from members of all branches of the visible Church of Christ.

The present writer had the privilege of staying at the Deanery in 1892, when the grand old veteran was ninety-three years of age. Only by thus dwelling in the house could one get a true idea of his wonderful activity. He conducted family prayers at eight o'clock sharp every morning, and he kept constantly occupied, reading, writing, conversing, teaching, presiding at meetings, till past ten at night. He presided and carved at his own table, with all the stately courtliness of a past generation. He received, on regular days, lay evangelists, hospital nurses, missionary candidates, etc., and gave them systematic instruction in the Bible and in the Evangelical doctrines of the Prayer-book. Committees of societies and gatherings of clergymen and others were held in his house, and he took a keen and active part in all the discussions. He read the best English books and reviews; and only a few weeks ago copies of a new volume of lectures on the Book of Revelation by him reached some of his friends in England.

(From a Photograph by Messrs. Foster and Martin, 252 Collins-street, Melbourne.)

The Dean was not only, by his office, the chief minister of Melbourne Cathedral, in which he regularly took his turn to preach, but he was also minister of the parish in which the Cathedral stands, and preached more frequently in the old St. James's Church, a little way off, where the form of worship is of the simplest kind. He was ill and confined to the house for some weeks in July and August last (the Melbourne winter), but on September 23 and 30 he actually preached in St. James's. The following day he was seized with severe illness, and after a week's suffering entered into the joy of his Lord. His beloved son, Rev. H. B. Macartney, sends the following to the writer of this sketch:—

"I know how you will sympathise—with me—with us—with the Church of God. In the drawing-room he is lying in an oak coffin, 'like a warrior taking his rest.' O Death! O Death! How terrible to get only that far! How glorious to follow the soul in its flight, and to see the two lightning brightnesses—the gleam on his face when he sees the Saviour—the gleam on the Saviour's face when He welcomes him in! Is it not an answer to his prayer, 'Father, I will that they also whom Thou hast given me be with me where I am?'"

His funeral was the occasion of a remarkable demonstration of respect and affection. Representatives of all denominations crowded the handsome cathedral. Among the wreaths sent was one from the Chinese Christians in Melbourne, and another from the Jews, with the following inscription:—"To a great pillar of his Church, a fervent Christian, steadfast in faith, but, above all, a friend of all mankind, this tribute of respect is from some of his Jewish fellow-citizens, who sincerely mourn his loss." But at the grave, his great friend, Archdeacon Langley, a devoted clergyman who presides at the annual "Convention" at Melbourne, spoke to the crowds, not of the Dean's earthly fame, but of his glorious hope. "The great hope of our beloved Dean," he said, "was the glorious coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. What a comfort to think that it may be only a little while, and He that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. We that are alive shall not sleep, for that same day we shall be taken up into the air to be for ever with the Lord." "Have we," continued the Archdeacon, "the same faith and hope and love to our blessed Lord? Have we the same personal saving knowledge of Jesus Christ and his grace? Lord, help us to understand that the great purpose of God in his revelation is to make us like the Lord Himself. Oh, blessed prospect of future glory! Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

The Dean had the sorrow of losing his wife in 1885. Of their eight children, two daughters and three sons survive. Our Mildmay and Keswick friend, the Incumbent of St. Mary's, Caulfield, in the vast suburbs of Melbourne, is the youngest.

E. S.

SOHO AND ST. GILES.

On Wednesday, November 28, the forty-sixth anniversary of the Soho and St. Giles' Mission was held in Bloomsbury Hall, Meard-street, Soho. Mr. Robert Williams presided, and excellent addresses were given by several gentlemen interested in the mission, testifying to the good work done.

The report of the hon. secretary, Mr. Walter J. Benham, was full of interest. Regular evangelistic services were held several times a week. About 140 open services had been held during the summer, and preaching and singing the Gospel had been entered upon earnestly in the marches round the district and in the Park. Special work had been done amongst poor sandwich men, etc. Many other valued branches of work were referred to.

The mission is in great need of help to carry on its important work. Mr. William Harrison, 20, Merrick-square, Newington, S.E., is superintending conductor.

JAPAN IN WAR TIME.

A Yokohama missionary correspondent of The New York Independent writes thus about the effects of the Chinese war on the work of missions:—

"Mission work must suffer, since the attention of the people is so fixed upon the seat of war. Though outwardly quiet there is a deep interest in the conflict everywhere. Preachers cannot resist the temptation, and many a sermon, so-called, has quite as much of the war in it as of the Gospel. It will be a hard year for missionary work. Converts are few. On the part of the churches there is earnest prayer for the country and for the many Christians, especially, who are engaged in the conflict. If they are faithful much good may be done by them amidst their new surroundings. Schools will suffer. The expense of living is increased, and many students of the higher schools have been drawn for service. May all the warfare result in the advance of Christ's kingdom!"

THE ANTI-OPIUM CRUSADE.—Bishop Thorburn, of Calcutta, has extended leave of absence from his work in India to Rev. A. W. Prautch from the end of December to March next. Those desirous of obtaining the services of Mr. Prautch or of any other members of the Indian deputation should communicate at once with the Hon. Sec., Urgency Committee, 31, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.

The Penniless Poor.

In one of the grimiest streets of that most grimy quarter of London, Stepney, stands Medland Hall. I had heard of the good work being done there by a few earnest men and women connected with the London Congregational Union, and, being asked to attend one of the Sunday meetings, set off one Sunday evening to go there. I was accompanied by a friend who has a keen feeling of sympathy with the struggling poor.

Arriving at the door, we found an orderly crowd passing in, in single file. Outside, all was dark and damp and miserable, inside were light and warmth and the refreshing smell of hot coffee. We stood for a little time just within the door, and watched the poor starving victims of our civilisation pass in and receive each a large piece of wholesome white bread and a full and generous cup of coffee, with which they passed to their seats either in the hall or in the gallery. Shortly after our arrival every seat was occupied, and I ascertained that there were over six hundred in the place.

At a quarter-past seven, after all had disposed of their provisions, a little body of ladies and gentlemen went on the platform, and a bright hymn was heartily joined in by most present.

What a sight it was! There, before us, were all nationalities and all types of humanity except the criminal. Seated on one chair was a cripple, totally unable to fight the battle of life with any hope of success, and who looked as though he had had nothing to live upon for weeks but the little bread given him in the hall, singing most heartily and apparently enjoying himself thoroughly. In front, with a look of intense sorrow, sat a man whose finely-cut features and intellectual countenance showed that he had once occupied a position immeasurably above that into which he had now fallen. A little further back sat a bluff, honest, farmer-like man who had the hunted, haggard look which extreme poverty in London always brings. To the right was a Lascar shivering in his rags, despite the warmth of the room, and up in the gallery a negro. On the left there sat a stalwart-looking, blue-eyed Scandinavian, whose face bore traces of illness and of terrible privation.

How inexpressibly sad was the whole scene. Oh! that I had a pen to show the world of wealth and ease exactly what this small portion of the world of poverty and misery looked like.

A second hymn was sung, and then the audience stood while the Beatitudes and several other portions of Scripture, together with the general confession, were recited. Mr. E. Wilson Gates briefly addressed those present on the recent troubles with the authorities for overcrowding the Hall. Then followed the story of the Prodigal Son, told in modern English, and in such a way as to bring that wonderful story more home to the hearts of outcasts. Songs followed, which were greatly appreciated; at 8.30 the Doxology was sung and the Benediction pronounced.

Seeing a number of people going up stairs, my friend and I went in that direction, and were shown up by one of the attendants. On reaching the top, we found ourselves in a roomy, well ventilated attic, extending the whole length of the building. There already a number of men were stretching themselves out to sleep away their misery. A large vessel filled with pure water was provided for drinking purposes. Those unable to lie down here, had to sit up all night on the chairs.

What a picture of destitution! What terrible suffering there must be in wealthy London! To think that a great number will come from a distance for the sake of half-a-pound of bread, a cup of coffee, and the chance of a seat on a chair. Think of it, you who recline in your easy chairs, with a glowing fire before you, and luxury and comfort as your daily companions! You who day by day partake of delicate dishes, think of those to whom the half-a-pound of bread is a banquet to be looked forward to with joy! Remember the most golden precept ever given to man: "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you."

Mr. E. Wilson Gates will be glad to receive contributions for this and kindred work at the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, E.C. J. P.

MR. JUSTICE GRANTHAM, commenting on a case at the Winchester Assizes, said some public-houses were a fertile source of crime, and he should like to see the landlords of such establishments where a crime was committed responsible for the expense of the prosecution.

A MISSION AT STROUD GREEN, N.

Mr. W. R. Lane has been holding some memorable services at Mount View Congregational Church, Stroud Green, N. Beginning as a perfect stranger in the locality, he gradually won his way into the sympathies of his audience, and ere he finished his visit had evidently made a profound impression on the neighbourhood, and the inquiry room was filled with earnest seekers after salvation.

The services commenced on Sunday, Nov. 25, when the pastor, Rev. E. Griffith-Jones, preached an introductory sermon in the morning, and Mr. Lane gave his opening address at night. A favourable impression was created by the speaker from the outset. During the following week he gave Bible-readings on matters of practical importance to Christian people in the afternoons, and evangelistic addresses in the evenings. At the close of the latter gatherings, after-meetings were held, and those in anxiety about their souls, or who felt their way clear to take a public stand, were dealt with in the inquiry-room by Mr. Lane and an earnest band of helpers from the church. Over a hundred inquirers came forward during the eight days, and many of these before the week was out made a hearty public confession of the Lord Jesus Christ. Mr. Lane followed no set rule in the conduct of these after-meetings, being guided by the influence of the Spirit. His insight was clearly shown in the management of individual inquirers, whose confidence he commanded by the unmistakeable sympathy which he felt for them in their anxieties and difficulties, especially where these were of a distinctly moral and spiritual kind. Never at a loss how to deal with those who came to him for help, he showed a subtle knowledge of human nature and a marvellous mastery of the Word of God in its adaptation to men's needs.

The grounds of appeal put forward by Mr. Lane were varied, and well adapted to the circumstances and habits of thought of his hearers. He delivered a full and clear statement of his views on matters of doctrine so skilfully as to disarm antagonism where he could not command assent, at the same time captivating everyone by his manly and earnest presentation of central truths.

During the mission, a series of addresses on the Ruin, the Redemption, and the Regeneration of Man was given on successive nights, special stress being laid on the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ as the only possible ground of acceptance with God. A powerful appeal, based on the sin of Herod, his treatment of John the Baptist, and the trial scene in which our Lord was silent to him, with no word of hope at the last, made a deep impression at another service. The addresses last Sunday were on the Final Judgment and Pilate's question, "What shall I do with this man that is called Christ?" The evening service was in every respect most memorable, and many striking cases of self-surrender took place at the close, whilst prayers were asked by others on behalf of some one dear to them, and for whose salvation they were anxious.

This mission, in many instances, has served much like the developing solution in the photographer's laboratory. Impressions had been previously made on these hearts by a thousand holy influences—at home, in the Sunday-school, under the ministry of the Word, and through the reading of the Bible. But they had not taken any clear or final form till these meetings brought them into definite, and, we hope, permanent shape. We believe that Mr. Lane's visit to Stroud Green will bear eternal fruit!

E. T. J.

MRS. BAEYERTZ IN AYR.

This lady evangelist has concluded a fifteen days' Mission in the town of Ayr, in connection with which the manifestation of the Divine presence and power has been very remarkable. A deep and widespread interest in spiritual things has been awakened in the town and district, and the influence of the work has been felt by all sections of the community. Even by those who did not attend the meetings they were the subject of interested conversation.

The three Sunday-evening meetings were in the Town Hall, which was crammed each night half an hour before the time of meeting, and many had to leave, unable to get in. The week-evening meetings, which were in Newton Free Church, one of the largest in the town, were crowded every night, and on several occasions the passages and pulpit stairs were filled. The numbers which every night found their way to the inquiry-room were such as to call for the most heartfelt thanksgiving. Many of these left glad in the assurance of salvation.

Mrs. Baeyertz holds by the old-fashioned Gospel, many of the truths of which she is enabled, through her early training and marked evangelistic gift, to set forth in a very striking light. Her addresses on the "Passover" and "Day of Atonement" are specially powerful in this respect. If there is any class for whom Mrs. Baeyertz has a special message, it is for those who are simply professors of religion. From such she sweeps away every "refuge of lies" with convincing power. At one of the evening meetings, which was crowded by a great audience, when she spoke on "The Lord's Coming," a special request was made that she should conduct the inquiry meeting in the church, instead of in the adjoining room, as usual. This was done, and a most solemn second meeting, to which about 1200 remained, was conducted. The truth was so presented that much blessing resulted. On the day preceding the close of the mission three meetings for Christians were held, which were notable for the searching power and influence of the Holy Spirit. The evening address on "Holiness" was followed by a prayer-meeting for consecration, in which a number took part, the whole audience remaining in solemn stillness and definite dealing with God.

In addition to the Gospel meetings a very important feature of the work was the Bible-reading for Christians conducted each afternoon. Hitherto such meetings in Ayr have, as a rule, been very meagrely attended; during this Mission numbers came from the beginning and steadily increased til the whole area of the church was filled. Many ar full of thankfulness that Mrs. Baeyertz has been sent to Ayr, and we doubt not that the influence of her work will abide for many a day. Her next mission is at Springburn, Glasgow. W. C. G.

GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL, MILE END.

Mr. Walter Notman, of the Evangelisation Society, has finished a month's successful mission in Mr. Charrington's Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road. This young evangelist is one of the most promising preachers of the day. It was his first visit to the great hall, and the best proof of his acceptability as a soul winner is that he has already been secured for another month's mission in the same hall for next October. Mr. Notman possesses more than ordinary natural abilities as a speaker, and as he warms to his subject becomes quite eloquent. Many were brought to the Saviour through his preaching. His addresses to believers were most stimulating.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLERS of Vermont are much disturbed by a recent decision of the Supreme Court, holding that a man convicted for selling is also convicted for a second offence—the keeping for sale. The penalty for a second offence is imprisonment as well as a fine—hence the uneasiness.

THE SHEFFIELD RESCUE AND EVANGELISATION MISSION, carried on by Mr. and Mrs. Corbridge, continues in full activity. During the year eighty-one cases have been dealt with, and many appear to be turning out satisfactorily. Not a few of these have been rescued from the deepest depths and others have been prevented from entering on a sinful life. These earnest workers are anxious to secure a Preventive Home for orphans and girls with drunken parents, and an Inebriates' Home for girls discharged from prison and for confirmed drunkards. The address of the Mission is, Mr. William Corbridge, 250, Duke-street, Sheffield.

THE ANTI-OPIUM CAMPAIGN.

THE blessing of God is manifestly with the labours of the two heroic ladies, Mrs. Andrew and Dr. Kate Bushnell, and upon the campaign they are conducting in this country. Each successive meeting has been, if possible, better than its predecessors, not merely in point of numbers, but of tone, spirit, interest, and influence.

Great meetings have now been held at Manchester, Birmingham, Liverpool, Leicester, Hull, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Middlesbrough, and Leeds. Except in two cases, when excessively wet days reduced the numbers attending, the audiences gathered have completely filled the largest buildings available. In every case a strong resolution of protest has been passed by unanimous vote, and expressions of interest in the cause, and of abhorrence of the iniquitous state of things exposed, expressed by local speakers have met with hearty responses. Lasting good must result from the campaign, through awakened public opinion, and the widespread dissemination of facts hitherto known to few, and usually spoken of with bated breath. Among these are the awful facts revealed as to the intimate connection between opium and immorality. Singular courage and devotion have been needed to enable these two ladies to utter before great audiences the statements they have felt compelled to make.

Mrs. Andrew and Dr. Bushnell are to speak in continuation of the series of special meetings at the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, on Thursday, December 6; at Grosvenor Hall, Belfast, on Tuesday, December 11, and at the Metropolitan Hall, Dublin, on Thursday, December 13.

SEAMEN'S REST, MARSEILLES.

MR. C. E. FAITHFUL writes from 38, Quai du Port, Marseilles:—Whilst deploring the delay in realising our desire for suitable premises, we have nothing but praise to record otherwise. The Lord has granted us unmistakable proofs of his presence amongst us; souls have been manifestly saved, Christians helped and encouraged, and a large number, and that of many nations, brought under the influence of the truth, either by the meetings or personal dealing, in the Rest, on the quays, on board ship—in fact, anywhere and everywhere we meet with them. With respect to a building specially for the French sailors, about £400 has come in, either as promises or gifts, the latter being invested as a nest-egg, and waiting the remainder. Experience has assured us that we shall never get beyond our present limits of influence until we have premises more commodious, more public, and more in the heart of the larger port."

FOR SOME YEARS BOLTON has enjoyed the distinction of having more children enrolled in Bands of Hope than any other district in Methodism. Special efforts are being organised to push temperance work among adults into a more satisfactory position.

A MORAL CAMPAIGN is about to be begun, dealing with the flaunting vice of the West-end streets in London. The Vigilance Record for December says, in making the announcement:—"Our action will be alike against the roué and the profligate man, and against the much-abused and misunderstood erring sister. Our inspiration for this work is a firm conviction that there is no necessity for the existence, of the social evil; that its very existence is a menace to the proper adjustmentof our social economics, and a libel upon God and our common humanity."

WOOTTON MISSION HALL.—At Wootton, near Canterbury, a neat brick building has been erected with the following inscription: "Opened for Christian worship. In thanksgiving to God for a free Bible." This, it is hoped, will be a centre of Christian and Protestant work among the people of the surrounding villages; that they may love and read their Bibles always. The cost of the hall has been raised by Christians of all denominations. The Sabbath-school and the services, since they were started six months ago, have steadily increased in the numbers attending.

SUNDAY CARGO WORK AT HONG KONG.—The Lord's Day Observance Society have called the attention of the Colonial Office to the facilities given to the English, French, and German mail steamers to handle cargo on Sunday at Hong Kong, while other steamers have to pay a considerable sum for a licence to do the same. The Society, in view of a movement to redress this anomaly, urged that no solution should be sought which would tend to increase the amount of Sunday labour in the port. The committee have been assured by the Colonial Secretary that no further exemptions would be granted, and that the privileges now extended to the mail steamers would cease on the termination of their present time contracts.

MRS. HENRY COOK'S WORK.

THE annual meeting of the Portsmouth and Gosport Seamen's and English and French Coasting Missionwas held on Thursday, in the Bethel, Gosport. Mr. W. Scott, who presided, said that all rejoiced when, after the death of Mr. Henry Cook, who had so long carried on this work, it was to be continued by his devoted wife. He considered it to be a glorious work.

Mrs. Henry Cook, speaking of the work of the past sixteen months, said that the Mission is entirely free from debt. A good work has been done in the French Mission House at Deauville, up to September of this year, but since then difficulties and lack of funds have compelled her to close the house, until someone is found to take over this important branch. The S.S. Good News was working from April to September, seventeen places in Cornwall and Devon being visited, services held every night, and three on Sundays. The home work at the Bethel, the free infant day school, boys' meetings, and night school, mothers' meetings, Band of Hope, harbour work, visiting the ships, and distributing books, were being owned of God.

Rev. C. Tanner maintained that the need is great for agencies which would reach those outside, and this work is one that carries the Gospel to those who will not go to places of worship. Miss Fuller Gooch gave details of the work during the summer on the coast. Mr. Whiting said he had known Mr. Henry Cook in the first days of his work, when it began with a few ragged boys. Pastor Sidey told of a visit made the day before to the Warner Lightship and some of the forts, taking books, comforters, and steering gloves to the men, as well as the Gospel message. Miss Kendrick Drury gave further details of the home and French work.

DOWN LODGE, WANDSWORTH.

IT is now more than ten years ago since Down Lodge Hall was erected as a memorial of the mission held by Messrs. Moody and Sankey at Wandsworth in 1884. Sunday and week-day, all the year round, a very useful work is carried on in Gospel preaching and philanthropic endeavour.

The hand of death has sadly depleted the force of workers in the removal of Mr. W. M. Seaman, and more recently of Mr. Clement F. Davis, both of whom had been invaluable alike in their counsel and co-operation. As trustees they had long desired an extension of the premises in the shape of a kitchen, to be used in connection with the social gatherings held in the hall, and to provide comforts for the sick, who are visited by a Biblewoman and other Christian workers.

The present trustees have resolved to adopt this suggestion, and to raise the structure as a memorial to their deceased and beloved colleagues. For this about £200 will be required, in which the co-operation of friends is solicited. Communications may be directed to Miss Davis, 52, Park-road, Wandsworth, S.W.

TIBETAN PRAYER UNION.

THIS Union, hitherto small in numbers, has become enlarged in its scope by the increasing attention that has of late been drawn to Tibet, notably by the enterprise associated with the name of Miss Annie Taylor. After much prayer and conference it has been decided that Ashton-under-Lyne shall in future be the headquarters of the Union. The Misses E. and R. Stirling, of Tarduff, Linlithgow, N.B., have taken charge of arrangements for Scotland.

Membership of the Union obliges each (1) To pray definitely and at stated times for the success and extension of missions in Central Asia. (2) To read regularly what is published about this field, as material for supplication and thanksgiving. (3) To plead for the opening of the door into Chinese Tibet, the great stronghold of Buddhism. Cards of membership and T.P.U. literature may be had on receipt of 1s., from the hon. secs., Messrs. Thomas Ashton and J. A. Ford, Warrington-street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

BOURNEMOUTH. — The success which has attended the Convention held last week in Boscombe must have gratified and encouraged Rev. S. A. Selwyn. The speakers were Revs. J. J. Luce, W. Brown, W. S. Standen, and Dr. White. Very large companies gathered, and Dr. White's Bible reading on Thursday, on the Second Coming, was a solemn time. It was a surprise to many to find that Dr. White has accepted the theory that part only—not all believers—will be caught up to meet our Lord at his appearing. The Scripture, with which he sought to prove this, did not seem satisfactory to all, though it is evident that many are of Dr. White's opinion.

W.

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.]

OXFORD.

A missionary breakfast was held at the Y.M.C.A. last Sunday week in connection with foreign missions, with the view of stirring up more interest in the work among the members. The experiment is an admirable one, though it may be questioned whether Sunday morning is the most suitable time.

A local Peace Association for Oxford and neighbourhood has just been formed by those champions of international and social amity, the Society of Friends. May it prosper and grow abundantly.

The Greek Testament readings by Mr. Chavasse have been splendidly attended in the term now closing and have proved most helpful to the men, the subject being Romans iii. and iv.

Rev. C. J. Casher gave an admirable lecture last Thursday on Curioni, the Piedmontese Reformer; his life and work. Mr. Casher also conducts a weekly meeting, in connection with the Protestant Reformation Society, which is of service to Gospel truths.

The Day of Intercession for Foreign Missions was observed last week in all the Oxford churches, when not only prayer was offered for, but testimony given to, the work of God in far-off lands.

CAMBRIDGE.

On Tuesday, November 27, the United Evangelistic Nonconformist Mission, which has been carried on with much apparent blessing throughout Cambridge for the last ten days, was brought to a close by a mass meeting held in the Guildhall.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Hind Smith, of London, addressed a meeting, at the Alexandra Hall, on the past, present, and future of the Y.M.C.A.

The weekly meeting of the C.M.U. was held on Friday last, the address being given by Mr. Watson, assistant-secretary of the C.M.S. The speaker, who has quite recently been a tour through China and Japan, dealt at some length with the work being carried on among the lepers in Japan, and also with various difficulties a missionary has to encounter in the far East.

On Saturday evening a meeting in connection with the Universities' Camps for Boys took place in the rooms of Mr. Dodderidge, of Trinity. About 50 old campers and others interested in the camps were present.

SUNDAY TRAVELLING.

THE custom of using trains, omnibuses, cabs, etc., on the Lord's Day, which is keeping in our own country alone over four hundred thousand men at work on Sunday, and shutting them out from the sound of the Gospel, and the means of grace, is being earnestly opposed by the Anti-Sunday Travelling Union. One of the methods adopted by the Society is the distribution of leaflets on the subject, each Sunday, by voluntary helpers at railway stations, omnibus and tram halting places, and other centres of traffic. Large and frequent reprints of leaflets are needed to keep these distributors supplied; but for some time the Society's funds have been so low that it has not been able to keep its most useful leaflets in print at all, and the workers have only just been kept going by supplies of one leaflet, which is cheaper to print than the others without any variety. The funds are now unable to meet a reprint of this cheaper leaflet, without which the Sunday distribution must stop entirely.

I shall be pleased to communicate with any friends who are desirous of promoting the enjoyment by all of the God-given Rest Day, by assisting this work. (Miss) J. CHASE, Secretary.

18, Christchurch Avenue, Brondesbury, N.W.

PASTEURISM IN INDIA.—The timely opposition to the proposed Pasteur Institute in India is producing the desired effect in certain quarters. A Madras paper mentions a District Board in the South which has cancelled by a large majority its former resolution of making a contribution of Rs1000 towards the Pasteur Institute. No municipality in the land should help an institution of such doubtful usefulness as the proposed Pasteur Institute.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on a week's mission to children at Earlham Hall, Dalston, to be conducted by Mr. C. D. Smith.—That souls recently saved in Preston may be confirmed in the faith.—For an ingathering of souls in a Lancashire town.—For a mission in Everton, Liverpool, commencing on the 9th, conducted by Mr. James Wharton.—For mission by Mr. William Forbes at Ramsgate, to begin on the 10th.—For a ten days' mission at St. Matthew's, Birmingham, to be conducted by Mr. G. Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society.—For a special mission being held this week in Hyde Park Hall, W.

THE Y.M.C.A.

The Week of Prayer for Young Men was systematically and widely taken up at the Cape, and many clergymen and ministers preached specially to young men.

The St. Austell Association has opened new buildings, on a site formerly occupied by a public-house. Dr. Hingston, Mr. R. Souttar, and other well-known speakers took part.

Mr. Wm. Burnside held lately in connection with the Y.M.C.A., a successful mission in Bathgate. The meetings on the Sabbaths, which were crowded, were held in the U.P. and Free Churches respectively, and during the week they were held in the Y.M.C.A. hall.

The annual reception took place on Tuesday at the Association rooms, West Hartlepool. There was a large attendance. Mr. W. J. Hewitt, the general secretary, read the report, stating that the number of associates on the roll is 201, members 64, a total of 265, or 33 less than last year.

The South Midland District Union, of which Reading and Oxford are the principal centres, has just held its annual meeting, which was attended by forty delegates. Mr. Collier read a valuable paper on foreign missions, and a liberal offering was made in aid of the National Council's fund for foreign work.

The Anglo-American Y.M.C.A., 160, rue Montmartre, Paris, were able to arrange for a special sermon by Rev. H. Bramley Hart in his church (Wesleyan), to commence the week of prayer. Public meetings held every evening during the week were most encouraging. The work in all its branches is flourishing. Special arrangements for the annual public meeting are being made.

At Exeter Hall, the substitution of a men's meeting for the mixed evangelistic service on Sunday evenings has been a marked success. The average attendance during the past six weeks has been upwards of two hundred and fifty, and a number of young men have professed conversion. The Conversational Bible-class, which is held on Sunday afternoons under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Mills, Secretary of the National Council, has been well sustained since the opening of the new session. Week by week the attendance has steadily risen, and now there is an average muster of upwards of eighty young men.

A few years ago a Young Men's Christian Union was formed at Cambridge, meeting in the Y.M.C.A. premises, and working harmoniously with this institution, whose efforts had been directed mainly along social and educational lines. The object of the Union was that definite spiritual work might be done for the vast numbers of young men in this university city. Much progress is now reported in the weekly meetings, and a vigorous missionary work is being done by the members. On November 26, Mr. Hind Smith delivered his lecture on behalf of the Union in the Alexandra Hall, entitled, "The Past, Present, and Future of the Y.M.C.A."

A public meeting to inaugurate the Canning Town and Plaistow Y.M.C.A. was held in the new Town Hall, Canning Town, on Wednesday last. The building, which seats 1700 persons, was crowded to its utmost capacity. The chair was occupied by Alderman H. Worland, Mayor of West Ham. Amongst those taking part in the meeting were the Revs. John Gritton, D.D., F. C. Stuart, T. G. Pollard, W. Wray, and F. W. Newland. Musical selections were rendered by the Stratford Mizpah Male Choir. A gymnastic display was given by members of the Hackney Association. Dissolving views, illustrating the history of the Y.M.C.A., were described by Mr. F. L. Porter.

Representatives of the various churches near Wandsworth Common and Clapham Junction met on the 26th ult. at the Battersea Town Hall to consider steps for enlarging the operations of the Wandsworth Common Association so as to render these more adequate to the growing needs of the neighbourhood. Mr. Harry Swift, as convener of the meeting, made a statement, and the meeting having been thrown open, and many having taken part in the discussion, it was ultimately agreed, on the motion of Rev. G. Claris, of St. Matthew's, seconded by Mr. J. T. Corbin, that "This conference recognises the urgent need for a forward movement of the Y.M.C.A. in this increasingly popular and important neighbourhood, and hereby pledges itself to support any effort that may be made by them for the spiritual, mental, and physical needs of young men." Subsequently a provisional committee was appointed, with Mr. Harry Swift as honorary secretary.

---

COREA.—Bishop Corfe, of Corea, writes home that he has never felt so hopeful about the missionary work there as he does now. The war has not interfered with the mission, although he finds the work a very uphill one. The English missionaries are well received by the Coreans, but the growth of religious feeling is slow.

THE Y.W.C.A.

The Crouch-end and Hornsey branch, meeting at 65, Ferme Park-road, has issued a new programme. On Sundays a Bible-class is held from 3 to 5, and a "bright hour" from 8 to 9. On alternate Mondays there is a health lecture, temperance meeting, and missionary working meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Penge branch Rev. W. Smyly presided. The report stated that there are 14 honorary associates, 24 working members, 73 prayer-union members, and 54 associates, making a total of 165. The Bible-classes have been well attended. A large parcel of warm clothing made at the missionary working party was sent out for the use of the Moravian missionaries in Labrador. An address by Miss A. R. Habershon was much appreciated.

The annual meeting of the Uxbridge branch has been held, presided over by Rev. S. Hebert. The report stated that the devotional meetings have proved helpful to many. A working party, singing class, and monthly meeting are held. £7 a year is raised for the support of an Indian girl in a school at Poona. The chairman said he sometimes wondered how many branches the Association had, but on looking through the directory he was surprised to find that the total was not given. He had, therefore, counted them up, section by section, and found that in the United Kingdom there were 1675 branches, and on the Continent 205, of which 122 were in France. There were 211 more branches in other parts of the world. Revs. J. Reid Howatt, H. E. Bennett, and R. Sewell also took part in the meeting. Mrs. Arthur Shepherd and Miss C. Gumbrell have recently undertaken the duties of hon. secretaries.

A meeting was held on Thursday last at the Finsbury Institute for the purpose of presenting a congratulatory address to Sir George Williams. The address, which was read by the Hon. E. Kinnaird at the Jubilee Conference of the Y.M.C.A., has since been engrossed on vellum, and signed by members of the seven divisional Y.W.C.A. councils. Lord Kinnaird presided. Mr. Watts briefly explained the work of the Finsbury Institute, and Mr. W. T. Paton spoke of the general work. Lord Kinnaird read a letter from Sir George Williams, who was prevented by illness from attending. He was sure they all felt the immense value of the great work which Sir George Williams had done, and they rejoiced exceedingly in this jubilee year of the Y.M.C.A. Their thanks were due to Sir George for the warm interest which he had always taken in the Y.W.C.A. The address, bound in red morocco, was then presented to Lady Williams, and Mr. Albert Williams acknowledged the presentation on behalf of his father. An address by Archdeacon Sinclair followed, and the meeting closed with the Benediction.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

A C.E. Society has been commenced in connection with the Congregational Church at Longton.

Mr. A. E. Hutton, M.P., gave an address the other evening in Ripon Chapel, in connection with the Endeavour Movement.

Endeavour conventions have been held at Stepney (Hull) and Dewsbury-road (Leeds). At the former thirteen societies were represented.

The C.E. movement has taken root in Aberdeen. There are already four regularly-constituted societies who have formed a union for the further spreading of the movement.

The United Society of Christian Endeavour has decided to act as a bureau of information and to publish such literature and give such advice as shall enable State Unions to push the Missionary Extension Course. This change involves the transfer of headquarters from Chicago to Boston.

A meeting was held at Dalston Junction Baptist Church on Wednesday week to form a branch of the Society of Christian Endeavour. The meeting was well attended, and a very interesting paper, showing the responsibility and privileges of membership was read by Mr. Fred. Beale, South Norwood.

The Connecticut Endeavour Societies convened in New Haven, November 8. About two thousand delegates were present. According to the report there were sixteen organisations at the first convention, with a membership of 800. Now there are 514 societies in the State, with a total membership of 35,000, and nearly 200 junior societies.

---

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, speaking at Croydon, dwelt on the necessity for legislation that would enable various experiments, the Gothenburg system amongst others, to be tried, dipsomaniacs to be more firmly dealt with, and public-houses to be improved and diminished in number.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

The Dundee Gospel Temperance Union is planning for extended work during the winter.

The late Mr. J. P. Kidston, of Northam, Herts, has left £10,000 for Glasgow charities.

Dr. Frew, of St. Ninian's U.P. Church, Stirling, has filled the pastorate there for the long period of sixty years.

The Edinburgh Sunday Morning Fellowship Union embraces eighty-two associations belonging to different denominations, with a membership of 3300.

Dr. Norman L. Walker, of The Free Church Monthly, has delivered in Edinburgh, under the "Chalmers" Trust, a series of lectures on the history of the Free Church.

Special meetings have been conducted by Messrs. McFarlane and MacKendrick during November in Topping's Hall, Peterhead. There was a hearty and prayerful interest amongst Christians to begin with, and large audiences assembled. The Word preached has been with power, and a number have professed faith in Christ. The evangelists are now at work in the villages on the Moray Firth.

In reopening the Y.W.C.A. work in Paisley for the winter, a largely attended social meeting was held on November 29. Mrs. Arthur, of Barshaw, hon. president, occupied the chair. The speakers were Rev. Mr. Walton, Rev. Hugh Black, Miss Hay (president for Scotland), and Mrs. W. M. Oatts (Glasgow). The heartiness and earnest attention of the meeting augured well for the work of the coming months.

Some interesting items of church news, culled from local supplements, are given in the Free Church Monthly for December. We note that St. Matthew's, Glasgow, Free East, Aberdeen, West Port Church, Edinburgh, Willison Church, Dundee, and other congregations report increased attendances at the Lord's supper. Two crowded courses of lectures are being given on Sunday evenings in Edinburgh, by Dr. Alex. Whyte at Free St. George's, and by Mr. Davidson at St. Mary's.

Under the auspices of the Dumfries Y.M. and Y.W.C. Associations, meetings have been held by Mr. Galletly, from the Scottish branch of the Evangelisation Society. Bible-readings were given on three days of each of the second and third weeks, and were largely attended. Each night evangelistic meetings were held, and there was a steady growth in the attendance. The closing meeting was held in Free St. George's Hall. The Associations have added largely to their membership as a direct outcome of the mission.

The Glasgow Sick Poor and Private Nursing Association is doing a valuable and much-needed work among the poor of the city. There are eighteen trained nurses visiting daily among the poor, with nine assistant nurses. The cases treated during this year number 1929, all of these being gratuitous, except a few instances in which a small sum was paid for extra attendance at night. Clergymen and district visitors bear cordial testimony to the efficient help of the district nurses. To furnish the necessary sum for the support of a nurse in a poor district, would be an admirable investment in philanthropy.

A mass missionary meeting in connection with the Free Presbytery of Glasgow was held last week in St. Andrew's Hall. In the regretted absence of Lord Overtoun through illness, the chair was taken by Professor Lindsay, who dwelt on the triumphs of the Gospel in Central Africa. Dr. Gunn, of the New Hebrides, told something of the power of the cross in subduing savagery on the islands of the South Seas. Rev. John Small, Poona, capably represented the claims of India. Dr. J. H. Wilson spoke of Women's Work in the Free Church. Addresses were also given by Professor Robertson, of Aberdeen, Dr. Torrance, Tiberias, and Rev. A. Tomory, Calcutta. Over £60 was realised by the collection.

---

BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—Letters have recently been received in England from missionaries of this Society in Shanghai, Shansi, Shensi, and Shantung, from which it is gathered that the brethren in these places considered there was no cause for any special anxiety with regard to their safety, in consequence of the war with Japan.

POLICE-COURT MISSION.—A drawing-room meeting was held last week at the residence of Miss Solomon, in King Henry's-road, Hampstead, in aid of the London Police-court Mission of the Church of England Temperance Society. Rev. J. H. A. Law appealed for increased subscriptions, stating that the mission needs £500 to clear off liabilities. A friend had offered to give £250 towards the amount, provided that the other £250 was raised by Christmas Day. In one year the mission had helped 16,000 persons; 2,827 men, women, boys, and girls were found situations, restored to friends, sent to homes, and put in the way of living honestly.

The Christian.

☞ To avoid delay it is requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and not to its individual members. Communications for THE CHRISTIAN should be addressed to the Editor, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for THE CHRISTIAN should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 1 of cover.)

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

☞ The Publishers request that all orders for THE CHRISTIAN by post, and remittances for same, be addressed to "THE CHRISTIAN" POSTAL DEPARTMENT, BOUVERIE HOUSE, SALISBURY SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

Cheques and Post Orders to be made payable to Messrs. John Haddon and Co. at that address.

The subscription for one year, including Postage and Coloured Almanack, is as under:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| For Great Britain and Ireland .. | 6s. 7d. | per annum |
| For India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, France, Germany, and other European Countries .. .. .. .. | 8s. 10d. | „ „ |
| For United States and Canada .. Or including Monthly Copy of HERALD OF MERCY .. .. | 2½ dols. | „ „ |

Subscriptions for THE HERALD OF MERCY.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 4 Copies monthly .. .. .. .. | 2s. | per annum |
| 8 „ „ .. .. .. .. | 4s. | „ „ |
| 12 „ „ .. .. .. .. | 6s. | „ „ |
| 24 „ „ .. .. .. .. | 12s. | „ „ |

Post free to any address at home or abroad.

Remittances to be sent as above. Postcard should be enclosed for receipt or extra stamp to cover postage of same.

Notes and Comments.

☞ We beg to call attention to the Special Announcement made above with reference to Subscriptions for the ensuing year. It will greatly facilitate our work at this season if friends will kindly note the particulars.

☞ Will those of our readers who receive THE CHRISTIAN direct from the Office by post, and who have not recently communicated with us, kindly send their present full postal address—specially Missionaries and others in foreign countries?

We specially request our readers' attention to a brief article on the Tibetan Pioneer Mission, on page 18.

The pendulum of time and thought is always swinging; and from a vague and excessive spiritualising of Scripture, it has threatened to pass to a bare and barren literalism. We therefore welcome Dr. Alexander Whyte's JACOB BEHMEN: AN APPRECIATION. (1s. 3d. Oliphant, Anderson, & Ferrier). This sketch of an old writer will be a profitable study to many; suggesting views of Scripture truth which will have, to the general reader, the interest of novelty, and conveying instruction on deeper themes than those to which most Christians are accustomed. An excellent article on this subject appeared in the last issue of The British Weekly.

Evil spirits appear to be fenced off from mankind by bounds which can only be passed from the human side. Thus the people of Israel were warned.

Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither SEEK AFTER wizards to be defiled by them (Lev. xix. 31).

The soul that TURNETH AFTER such as have familiar spirits TO GO A-WHORING AFTER THEM, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people (Lev. xx. 6).

When Balaam saw that it pleased the Lord to bless Israel, he went not as at other times TO SEEK FOR ENCHANTMENTS (Num. xxiv. 1).

Then said Saul unto his servant, "SEEK me a woman that hath a familiar spirit" (1 Sam. xxviii. 7).

Hecate says to the witches in Macbeth,

> Your vessels and your spells provide,
> Your charms, and everything beside.

And the chorus of the weird sisters' incantation is

> Double, double, toil and trouble,
> Fire burn and caldron bubble.

Macbeth says, "Call, let me see them." And they call to the demons:—

> Come, high, or low;
> Thyself and office deftly show.
> Show! show! show!
> Show his eyes and grieve his heart!
> Come like shadows, so depart.

Then the apparitions come. And as Macbeth suffered, so will others who consult the spirits of the lost world.

We find the following definitions in Bailey's Dictionary:—To conjure, to adjure, to charge upon oath; to conspire or plot together; to raise or lay spirits. Conjuration—a plot or conspiracy to do any public harm; also a personal dealing with the devil or evil spirits, to know any secrets, or compass any design. The original idea of a conjurer (a con-jurer), therefore, is one who plots together with the devil.

In these modern days, table-turning, hat-turning, crystal-gazing, holding the pen for automatic writing, etc., are equivalent to incantation. They express to the evil spirits by whom we are surrounded the desire to hold communication with them. Therefore we regard with detestation the encouragement, incitement, and direct appeal to inquisitive minds to study all kinds of occult arts, and the instruction given to this end in the various spiritualistic publications. If all this demoralizing and God-dishonouring literature had existed at Ephesus in the time of the Apostle, it would have been burnt with the rest of the books of them that practised magical arts. We earnestly warn all who may be tampering with unclean spirits that the judgment of God will surely fall upon them.

Dr. Gordon, of Boston, contributes a very thoughtful article on the "Ministry of Women" to the current issue of the Missionary Review of the World (1s. Funk & Wagnalls Co.). He examines in detail those passages of Scripture which are generally quoted as forbidding women to teach, dealing at length with 1 Cor. xi. 4, 5, in which the praying and prophesying of females is spoken of alongside that of men; and showing that 1 Cor. xiv. 34, 35 has reference not to the public ministry of instructed women, but to remarks and questions of an interrupting character on the part of such as needed the advice, "If they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home." Summing up the salient points of his study, Dr. Gordon says:—

> We may, without over-confidence, conclude that there is no Scripture which prohibits women from praying or prophesying in the public assemblies of the Church; that, on the contrary, they seem to be exhorted to the first exercise by the word of the apostle (1 Tim. ii. 9); while for prophesying they have the three-fold warrant of inspired prediction (Acts ii. 17), of primitive practice (Acts xxi. 9), and of apostolic provision (1 Cor. xi. 4).

Those who are interested in the subject would do well to read Dr. Gordon's article, which meets at length the objections commonly raised to the ministry of women.

Dr. Kennedy gives a good paper in The Thinker on "The Results of Jonah's Mission to Nineveh," in which he shows that the moral difficulty of believing that the vast population of a heathen city was temporarily reformed by the preaching of an unknown prophet, is by no means an insuperable difficulty. He points out the parallelism between the change in the Ninevites, and many of the reforms among the children of Israel themselves. He shows how the then-weakened condition of Assyria would predispose the people to hear Jonah. "The first thought of heathen men and nations in the time of disaster is that the gods are angry with them." Stress is laid also upon the fact that the prophet, by his miraculous deliverance from the fish, was "a sign to the Ninevites, that the news of his strange experiences would spread rapidly, and that his appearance in the city would be sure to make a great impression on the people."

Professor Cave, who is giving on Tuesdays at the Memorial Hall a series of lectures on Evolution in its relation to Theology, pointed out, in his first lecture, that Evolution is "development with continuity." The world of one moment is the outcome of the moment immediately preceding it. Wholly new causes are never introduced. Old causes produce old effects in growing complexity. He warned theologians that definitions should define facts, not opinions. "And what particularly must not be lost sight of is the fact that Evolution is not a cause, but a mode; not God, but God's method." This counsel is greatly needed; we hear so much about the method and so little about the Cause, that people somehow begin to imagine that creative and upholding power is in the method, and that the method is the power.

Fresh tidings as to the murders and outrages committed by Turks in Armenia come by almost every day's paper. The worst was not known at the beginning; but the truth is gradually leaking out. The barbarities of the Turkish soldiers have sent a thrill of horror through the country. England has influence at Constantinople, and she must use it in the name of our common humanity, and in the name of our religion. Turkey has in years past given pledges of good government to Europe, and she must be called upon to fulfil them. From six to eight years ago, she began to repress the work of American missionaries in every way, and now she decorates with medals and gratifies with rewards the soldiers who have slain helpless women and children.

The Turkish Government, never believed by the Western nations, is evidently dubious of its own officials. It is believed that the truth was hidden from the Sultan. He is said to have requested the American Minister to send a representative to accompany his commission of inquiry; but with what result no one knows. He also asked General Blunt Pasha to go to Bitlis on a similar errand, but the General's health prevented him from going. These may be blinds, and pressure must be put upon the Porte to bring the outrages to an end, and also the system of which they are the outcome. Lord Kimberley says that Her Majesty's Government is fully alive to the seriousness of this matter, and will not fail to perform its duty to the country. The country looks for action.

Those friends who object to the Boys' Brigade, because they believe that its military dress and drill and associations tend to give the boys a love for soldiering, have long had a desire to substitute a better thing for the Brigade. At the Industrial School, Cambridge, Massachusetts, there is a Fire Brigade drill, which is said to be as good for purposes of discipline, both moral and physical. To throw ladders, to connect and run lines of hose, to work hand-engines, and to respond promptly to the alarm bell, is admirable practice for boys, besides having the advantage of a noble object behind it, viz., to save life. We imagine we have heard also of a similar experiment in England. It is on the right line. Our boys want organising to serve in good work as citizens, to be fired with an honourable attachment to their place of abode.

---

The Sheffield Board of Guardians, led by their chairman, Mr. Wycliffe Wilson, have decided upon giving poor children as good a chance as they can for preparing for the battle of life. No child above the age of three is to go into the workhouse. Cottage homes with "mothers" at the head of them, are to receive the children who are above three. The inmates are to wear no uniform; they are to go to the Board School like other children; they are to attend the Sunday-school or some church or chapel. The mark of pauper is never to be put upon them, but they are to have a fair start in the race of life. Their cottage homes are placed in different suburbs of the town, so that it will be easy for the children to become absorbed into the ordinary ranks, and assimilated by the body politic. The idea is an eminently Christian one, and deserves to succeed.

---

This enterprising Board is not content with its good work for the children, but is anxious to make a classification of adult paupers, by strict and careful inquiries discriminating between the unfortunate and the vicious; between those who have been brought to poverty through circumstances over which they had no control, and those who, by idleness and vice, have thrown away their chances in the world. They wish to deal tenderly with the unfortunate, and severely with the unworthy. "It is a disgrace," says one of the guardians—"that in a Christian country, honest and industrious men, when they become unable to work, should prefer suicide to parochial relief." Only one more touch has to be added to this pleasant picture of social reform, which will give such hope to the young, and impart such comfort to the aged. Both political parties have joined hands in the work, and are avoiding a contested election.

---

Max O'Rell has a serious side. It is painfully serious to read his account of the intemperance of Australian society. It makes us ashamed to read that "drunkenness does not make the Australian ashamed, no matter to what grade of society he belongs." He testifies that in a town in Victoria he had occasion to go and see the Mayor, and found him tipsy. A visit was next paid to the town clerk, who also was tipsy. The lecturer's manager and he went to call upon the director of the principal bank. He was tipsy. The proprietor of the hotel where he was staying was in bed, suffering from delirium tremens. And so forth. The evil is wide as our empire, and unless we honestly assail it to destroy it, it will destroy us. The temptations of colonial life are something terrible. It seems easier for a struggling docker to enter the Kingdom than for a miner, whose blood burns with gold-thirst, and who has no idea beyond gratifying himself with drink when the gold is won.

---

Very suggestive is a certain formula repeatedly used by the Apostle Paul in the 16th of Romans—"In the Lord." Some of his friends he salutes simply as being in the Lord; some labour in the Lord; some labour much in the Lord; some are chosen in the Lord. The one condition which affected all other conditions was that of being in the Lord.

A Call to Praise and Prayer

ON THE

FIRST DAY OF THE NEW YEAR.

Throughout the course of 1894 there have been many signs of the increase of a spirit of prayer, especially in view of the gigantic evils that jeopardise the well-being of our country; and in many quarters there has been an evident drawing together of earnest men and women, irrespective of ecclesiastical distinctions and divisions. It is greatly to be desired that this tendency should be fostered and strengthened.

With the view of giving expression to the desire which is in many hearts, the undersigned have ventured to issue this appeal, that as much as possible of the first day in the year 1895 should be devoted to praise, confession, consecration, and intercessory prayer, that God would graciously revive his work in the hearts of his own people, cement them in holy unity, and shed forth his Spirit to convict the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. They therefore invite Christians to meet for prayer at St. Martin's Hall, Charing-cross, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., with an interval from 1 to 3, the exercises of the day concluding with a public meeting (at which addresses will be given), from 7 to 9.

It is not intended that there should be much exhortation at these gatherings, but praise, thanksgiving, confession, humiliation, and supplication.

It is sincerely hoped that this All-day of Prayer may also be a gracious preparation for the hallowed observance of the first week in the New Year, in harmony with the appeal of the Evangelical Alliance.

It is earnestly desired that ministers of Christ's Gospel, together with workers in all departments of Christian activity, may be able to spend part of the day, at least, in these services, either at St. Martin's Hall, or in gatherings specially convened in various parts of Great Britain, or in retirement.

| | |
|---|---|
| Kinnaird. | James E. Mathieson. |
| William Sinclair, Archdeacon of London, and Canon of St. Paul's. | F. B. Meyer. |
| | R. C. Morgan. |
| | Reginald Radcliffe. |
| | Martin Hope Sutton. |
| | George Williams. |

Extracts from New Books.

HAGAR AND SARAH.*

"What aileth thee, Hagar?" Oh, the tenderness of this question asked by God of a woman, a deserted woman! If these words should meet the eyes of some sorrowing mother of an erring or ill-treated daughter, or of some seeker of souls in the vast mazes of Satan's infernal machinery for tracking and holding those whose footsteps have once slipped, I beg them to read again this story, in the light of God's presence, and to take to their hearts the comfort it is meant by Him, I believe, to bring to us women in these latter days; for He knows our hearts are worn with sorrow in the contemplation of that world of woeful womanhood which the well-to-do, which even those who teach and preach in Christ's name, are still, in general, so content to leave where it is.

"Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thy hand," so spoke the angel, and at the same moment God opened Hagar's eyes, and she saw, close by, a well of water in the thirsty desert, which was life to her and to her son.

And so the God who had twice in these thirteen years spoken to her words of sweet and holy comfort, and twice granted to her just what she needed at the moment, guidance and substance, continued to support and to lead her; and the wilderness which became their home was no longer a wilderness to them, and Ishmael prospered, for God had given him his blessing.

Such is not, except in rare cases, the close of the career of Hagar's successors, the outcast women of the ages. Nevertheless, the record stands here for evermore of the undying pity and love of the eternal Father for the myriads of those who, leaning on the stronger judgments of others, or trusting in human promises, have been brought into misfortune and misery, whose footsteps have slipped, and who have become the despised and rejected of men.

In the dawn of the new era the Sarahs are beginning to repent and to stretch forth their hands to the Hagars, and to bridge over the gulf which has so long separated them; and they will do so more and more, and in the doing it they have, and will have to the end, the powers of hell against them, together with the solid, passive opposition of the egotism of a portion of mankind, and even of the Church of Christ. But as they learn more and more of the truth, and of the mind of God in all these matters, less and less will their hearts fail them in regard to the end of all, though present seed sown may seem to yield scant harvest.

* From The Lady of Shunem, by Josephine E. Butler. (2s. 6d. nett. Horace Marshall & Son.)

---

A DREAM OF A GARDEN.*

DAVID LIVINGSTONE.

For thou went'st forth to loose the iron fetters,
The spoiler's deeds of darkness to unveil,
And in the spirit of thy Heavenly Master,
The broken-hearted and oppressed to hail.

So ages hence, when from her shores enlightened,
Glad voices peace and liberty proclaim,
Shall Africa thy blessed memory cherish,
And teach all soon this noble white man's name.

And worthy sepulture she, too, had found thee,
Beside the long-sought fountains of her Nile,
Within the shadow of her ancient mountains,
Or where Marava's silver waters smile.

But fitter that with us thy dust should slumber,
And since two lands must mourn their fallen brave,
That Afric's hut should be thy funeral chamber,
While Britain gives her long lost son a grave.

Yet wherefore reck where Livingstone is lying?
For long before our portals opened wide,
With pomp and state to give those ashes burial,
And lay the dust its kindred dust beside,

Straight from that lonely hut of pain ascending,
A soul had touched the everlasting shore,
And joyful at the heavenly city's gateway,
A spirit entered to go out no more.

* From A Dream of a Garden, and Other Poems. By E. C. Pearson. (See "Book World," p. 24.)

---

TEMPERANCE AND THE GOSPEL.—A writer in L'Eglise Libre (Montpellier) says:—"Experience has demonstrated that if men are at the present day to be led to the Gospel, they must first be induced to leave the tavern and drinking-bar. This latter end attained, they are three-parts won for Christ. In Switzerland, a large number of churches have been transformed by the temperance movement. The churches of France in like manner may obtain a like result, as the work of the Blue Cross Society in Lyons affords every reason to expect. Men who will not attend a religious meeting, however much they may be invited, attend in crowds gatherings held to discuss the temperance question."

The Origin of Evil.

This has generally been regarded as an unfathomable mystery. But the revelation made to man in the Scriptures of truth leaves us in no doubt as to how evil came into our world.

Isaiah apostrophises the King of Babylon thus: How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning. And Ezekiel addresses the King of Tyre as the anointed covering cherub, wiser than Daniel, and who had been in Eden, the garden of God. Each prophet charges the monarch whom he addresses with a proud and overweening ambition to be like the Most High, with setting his heart as the heart of God, and saying, "I am God." But we perceive another personality beyond the one immediately addressed, and whether it be the King of Babylon or of Tyre—in either case the mightiest monarch of his time—we perceive that Satan, the prince of this world, is the one to whom the words are ultimately addressed; just as a Greater than David or Solomon is in the Messianic Psalms, and as Jesus rebuked the spiritual adversary when He said to Peter, "Get thee behind me, Satan." The Apostle Paul implies the fall of Satan and its cause when he says, "Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil."

From these and other Scriptures it has been inferred, we think rightly, that Satan was originally one of the angels of God, perhaps the highest in position and in authority of all the angelic host; and as it is usually the one next the throne, by birth, by position, by influence, or by might, who seeks to usurp the supreme authority, so this chief of the ways of God sought to set his throne above the other principalities and powers, to be like the Most High, and in the deliriousness of pride to say, "I am God."

This usurpation could have only one result. The rebel was deposed, and Nebuchadnezzar, one of his earthly representatives, was degraded to assume the form of a beast, and a beast's heart was given to him, because he arrogated to himself the honour due to God, so the bright archangel became the Old Serpent, the Devil, and Satan, and was cast as profane out of the mountain of God.

It may be asked, why did not God at once stamp the rebel and rebellion out of being. Many reasons beyond our conception may have existed in the wisdom of God, but one is obvious. The question thus raised must be exhaustively discussed and settled on its merits, the question whether the Creator or the creature shall rule the universe. For God acts upon his own command, "Prove all things." Had the fallen angels been annihilated on the spot the others might have thought, that was almightiness, autocracy, despotism, but not grace, or patience, or love.

Subsequently to the fall of the angels God created man upon the renovated earth. An arena was thus supplied for a conflict between the Creator and his apostate angelic creatures. And with all his subtlety the serpent tempted the human creature to revolt, as he himself had done, against the government of God.

Now, an evil being, when he tempts another, always incites to the same form of sin as that to which he has subjected himself. Gambler, drunkard, liar, thief, debauchee, murderer—his own ruling passion is that to which he tempts another. And as Satan's ruling passion was to be as God, so his temptation was, "God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof ye shall be as God."

This was the lie which slandered God, which deceived and poisoned our first parents' and has come down through all the generations of mankind. This is the result from the last analysis of evil. This is the irreducible minimum of sin. This is the inmost essence of disobedience. God is the ruling will of the universe, and every expression of self-will, from infancy to age, means, being interpreted, "I am God."

When human iniquity has reached its consummation in the Man of Sin, this is its extreme conclusion, he "sits in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God," and on those who receive not the love of the truth, God will send strong delusion that they should believe the lie—the primeval lie—"Ye shall be as God," and thus accept as true the assumption of the Son of Perdition, that he is God. M.

Indecision.

Uncertainty in anything is bad; vacillating people are not attractive. But hesitation in religion is not only perilous, it is absolutely ruinous. The gift of God may not be gambled for or speculated about; it must not be criticised, and should never be the subject of bitter controversy, for it is eternal life. This subject admits of no opinion but one, "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."

Indecision has a larger following than we have any idea of. Are there not many who hold fast the form of godliness, but in works deny God? These are they who at times make our hearts rejoice, and at other times cause us to weep.

Uncertain persons are the bane of the world. They are no help, rather a terrible hindrance to the wavering disciples. Their questioning hesitation drags hundreds down. What need now for our Lord's caution to Peter, "When thou art converted strengthen thy brethren." It is delightful to discover people, like the Apostle Paul, who can proclaim, "I know whom I have believed." Their boldness is exhilarating. They savour of another world, and it is of heaven, for they "are born of God."

The thread on which hangs our little existence we call life is so easily snapped and broken that we wonder how any thoughtful man can for a second doubt what should be his aim in life. To-morrow we die—to-day how can we harden our hearts? To-morrow is not ours to reckon with; to-day is God's salvation day.

But is there any need to speak thus to God's children? I fear there is, and an ever increasing need. How many are giving uncertain sounds; living uncertain lives; harbouring unholy thoughts; consenting to unchristian actions; patronising unlawful places. The test is applied, the search-light of the eye of God, that thorough penetration of the Holy Spirit, and the verdict is "Not on our side." Were the door shut now they would stand outside. The smooth currents of life are pleasing to most of us, the minority is distasteful, and the sound of God's instrument uncertain.

This being so, no wonder the battle is weak, and the standard soon lowered. If the professor is easily cast down, how about the ungodly? If the footmen weary us, what about the horsemen Jeremiah speaks of? If the little river lifts us off our balance, how when the great Jordan rushes down? The path to glory is not all paved with smooth pebbles; there are rocks to be hewn down, stones to be cast out, rivers to be crossed. We must not expect to live Enoch or Elijah lives, being carried up to heaven; rather those of David or John the Baptist.

Oh the power of a certain sound! Oh the curse and misery of the life of cowardice, the life which hides from men, which shrinks from an open confession. It will not do to live thus in these days. Those virgins who slumbered and slept were "foolish." They meant well; they got on well up to a certain point; but that point was the climax for which they were unprepared "and the door was shut."

Consider the tremendous revolution which might be effected if all God's children gave forth a determined sound. Oh that with one grand note they declared: "The truth of the Lord will we proclaim; with the sword of the Lord will we fight; with the love of the Lord will we conquer." At the trumpet call we ought to stand with our lamps burning and our loins girt about with truth. The timid must be left behind, the hesitating cannot be our comrades; unless we mean to rally around the banner of our King, and thus by our zeal bring them up to the flag which never lowers. There is no excuse, we possess such an armoury in the Word of God; such promises—exceeding great and precious; such a God—terrible, yet all-loving; such a prospect—the land of Beulah.

Everyone is intended to make some sound. Our lives should be felt somewhere. Our God should be visible in each one of us. None should have the chance of asking, or the least excuse for inquiry, "On whose side are you?" Rather let it be confessed as they watch us: "They are the seed which the Lord hath blessed." There is but one uncertainty allowable in the Scriptures, namely, that spoken of by St. Paul in Phil. i. 23:—"For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and to be with Christ; which is far better." Such we will tolerate, may such be our ambition, that whether we live or die, Christ may be glorified.

Geo. C. Williamson.

HOME MISSION WORK.

From the "annual report of the City and East-end Poor Districts Auxiliary of the London City Mission," we find that there are 116 missionaries at work in this part of our great metropolis. There are eight local committees, whose business it is to try and raise part support for these servants of Jesus Christ, the remaining part being provided by the parent society from its general fund.

In this work, says the report, the Society gives the Scriptures the paramount place, recognising them as the oracles of God, and the chief means in his hands of enlightening the ignorant, converting the wayward, and reforming the ungodly. Last year these oracles were read in the course of visitation no less than 718,666 times. Thus it will be seen that the Society has an unswerving faith in the Holy Scriptures as a revelation from God; it places a copy in the hands of every missionary when he is called and set apart for this work.

The report proceeds to give some thrilling instances of battles fought and victories won in the name of the Lord as the "man with the Book" prosecutes his work in the family, the factory and workshop, the public-house, the hospital, the workhouse, among the homeless poor, in the open air, and the mission room. We are sorry to see that last year there was a deficit on the guarantees from this auxiliary to the parent society of £1115. Five districts were reluctantly given up for lack of funds, while nineteen districts are named as having no guaranteed support. There is an earnest appeal for help that this much-needed work may be sustained and extended. The district secretary is Mr. Jas. Dunn, London City Mission House, Bridewell-place, E.C.

"THE HIGHER LOOK."

By MRS. HARVEY-JELLIE.

There was a wonderful fascination about that rustic little home which made Henden Forsaith frequently turn his steps thither, difficult as the walk was on a windy day. The path lay up a steep hillside, and, exposed to the sea on one hand and the open country on the other, there was no shelter either from sun, or rain, or wind. Still he never allowed a week to go without seeing Muriel Greene. She had lived there all alone for ten years, suspecting, fearing everyone, but whenever she heard Henden's foot-fall on the stones outside, like a dart she approached the door, and bade him welcome.

A cushioned chair was placed for him near a tiny fire, that sent its flickering light over their faces while they talked, and tried to give a touch of comfort to the otherwise uncomfortable room. Two short dark curtains hid a picture, safely guarded from dust and light, and on the table underneath, some books and a hat were covered up. Henden glanced toward them, as she chanced to turn her eyes away from his. He knew the romance of it all, and understood her as no one else did.

Twenty years had fulfilled their course, since one of her heart's treasures went down out of her sight for ever. Muriel and Myrtle Greene, two sisters, had lived together, loving and caring for one another as few can do. Left orphans very young, they clung together, and knew no shadow of division, in word, or deed, or thought. But every Eden has its tempter subtly waiting to destroy, and Myrtle heard the whisper, saw the offered charm and yielded, and from her sister became estranged for years. The fortune that allured her took wings and vanished; the promises of the man she married were broken; the home that opened to her became a prison which shut her from a sister's love. Three years passed of lonely sorrow, when one evening, pacing the coast, Muriel heard a shout—now faint, now loud. She was far away from house or call, but in the fading streaks of light she dimly saw a boat, and heard it grounding on the stones; then (how, she never plainly knew or tried to tell), into her arms she gathered a bonnie child—her sister's boy—and heard how Myrtle had watched her chance to get round by boat to the old home to tell her tale of woe.

"I dare not stay; I am afraid of the dark and the waves; only take him, love him for my sake, Muriel, and never let his wicked father have him!" Thus they parted after one mute embrace; and Muriel clutched the sleeping child and bore it up the hill, and Myrtle went down, down beneath the chill water. Sadly Muriel's heart beat the funeral knell; she could not cry but only moan, and fondle the boy who looked at her with his mother's eyes, whose name she had not heard.

Lovingly she nursed and reared the laughing happy boy, whom she called "Louis," her father's name; he called her "Mother," and his life lay buried in her love. Then, came a blank, when to her all ceased to be—for he, the pride, the sun that gave her only light, was gone. She knew large ships came near, she often saw stray vessels skirt the shore, but never dreamed of losing her treasure.

Days and months of wailing grief passed over her, but, whether she lost all power to tell, or memory failed, could not be said, for only by conjecture from her plaintive hints have facts been learned, and it was to Henden Forsaith alone she entrusted even that spare information. He was constantly crossing those hills on his way to carry the Gospel message to the neglected villagers out in the farlying districts, and came upon this weird-looking woman as she crouched by the hillside weeping.

Thinking her in trouble, he spoke kindly, and asked where she lived. She gazed long and sullenly at him, and then, seeming to forget herself, she said, "You may come and see."

She heard what his business out there was, and listened as he spoke of Christ's salvation, and promised him a welcome when he passed again. Sometimes she would show him Myrtle's portrait on the wall, and then the books and hat, covered on the table, and talk about her prattling boy, but always ended by saying, "They're all there; my hopes and joys are down there, and I only want to look down there," pointing to the sea.

He read to her of higher hopes and heavenly joys, but no gleam of satisfaction seemed to enter her cold heart. For a year she had been thus, and Henden grew discouraged, for the light was slow to break in.

"Muriel, you'll find it better to read this blessed Word, and take a higher look from all your sins and troubles and disappointments, God says, 'Look unto Me and be ye saved.'"

"Nay, but it's all black and cold," she said, "I hear the waves, the cruel waves, and I must watch them. I'll go to-morrow, but I'll read to-day."

Henden left her with prayer for God's light to stream into the strange and gloomy abode, and reach the woebegone soul.

He had sick ones to visit far off, and wanderers to recall, and another busy week elapsed before, with slow and tired steps, he approached the low doorway again. No quick response that day, and as he opened the door he saw her ghastly face and withered look, and heard she had not been out to her favourite haunt since he was there. He drew out the facts that she had grown weaker, and could not walk. "I didn't want much," she said, "and I hailed the shepherd's lad, but I wanted you to come. I was keeping waking all the night for fear I'd forget to tell you—the higher look has done it—and why were you so calm about it if you knew it all? I read it, 'Look unto Me,' and I prayed as you told me, for I couldn't go out to look down. Then I read again, and waited, and I felt it, like a big hand of love put out to reach me; and I heard a voice say, 'Be ye saved,' and it drew me up out of that lonely coldness, and kept saying, 'Look up, look unto Me.'"

She seemed relieved and rested while he talked of God's vast love, but he saw she was dying, and promised to send a Christian woman to take care of her.

The next day Henden softly knocked at the door, and was admitted by the one in charge. He found Muriel quite willing and thankful to have an attendant, and in her sunken eyes he quickly detected the unmistakable light of peace in Christ. Her bony hand was lifted, and with her finger pointing overhead, she said: "Sure it's the higher look that did it. But hearken to me now, and promise you will take my poor little cot and the few things, and use them to help some others to take the higher look that saves." Henden promised, and took courage in his glorious work as he saw Muriel fall asleep.

'Tis but a fragmentary sketch of a stricken life, and its strange outline seems to show only the rough angles of disappointment, sorrow, and earthbound hopes; but yet it speaks a message to other hearts that tells, if there is to be any compensation, any comfort, and any soul-rejoicing outlook, it must come from the higher look, which lifts us out of sin, discouragement, and grief, and fixes our soul's eyes upon Him who said, "Look unto Me and be ye saved."

O, ye who seek the Saviour, look up in faith and love,
Come up into the sunshine, so bright and warm above;
No longer tread the valley, but, clinging to his hand,
Ascend the shining summits and view the glorious land.

REGENT-STREET POLYTECHNIC.

The evangelistic services conducted at the Polytechnic by Mr. Quintin Hogg and Dr. Lunn having been so largely attended, Mr. Hogg decided to rent the Princess's Theatre in Oxford-street for the purpose of holding auxiliary services to those at the Polytechnic for the working classes. Mr. Josiah Nix took charge of the theatre services, and has been giving a series of Gospel addresses illustrated by the oxy-hydrogen lantern. The theatre holds over 3,000 persons, and every Sunday the place is packed in every part. On Sunday week from 4000 to 5000 persons were turned away.

God has wonderfully owned the work, and large numbers have resolved henceforth to live for Christ. So great has the work been blessed that it has been decided to renew the tenancy of the theatre, as it is felt such an opportunity of reaching the working classes ought not to be allowed to stop. The expenses, however, of rent, hymn sheets, etc., are very great, and have to be borne entirely apart from the ordinary funds of the Institution. Mr. Quintin Hogg has generously undertaken to be responsible for any deficit that may occur; but Mr. Nix would like to feel that those who are interested in the salvation of the masses are ready to help in the work. Contributions should be addressed, the Secretary, the Polytechnic, Regent-street, London, and marked "Theatre Services."

The services at the theatre have in no way diminished the attendance at the Polytechnic Hall itself, where hundreds are every Sunday unable to gain admittance. Any subscriber desirous of obtaining admission to the theatre services should write the Secretary of the Polytechnic, who would forward a special ticket.

RECLAMATION OF CRIMINALS.

For seventeen years it has been the custom of the St. Giles' Christian Mission to entertain, at this season, a company of men and boys of the class dealt with. Year by year, however, those of us who have attended have observed a change—the change of true progress. The ragged and forlorn have become fewer, the wholesome and honest-looking have increased in number. At length, this year, the idea of a "thieves' supper" has been frankly abandoned. The men and boys invited were representative of those who have been saved through the Mission's operations, and thus the gathering has really become the annual meeting of the St. Giles' Christian Mission.

Mr. F. A. Bevan, as treasurer, read a weighty letter from Justice Hawkins, attesting the success of the Mission's labours. Mr. Bevan then made a statement regarding the work. During the past twelve months 28,163 prisoners had been discharged from the metropolitan jails, and of these 21,436 had received their first meal after their liberation in the breakfast-rooms of the Mission near the prison gates. He submitted, therefore, that the Mission, which was continually working for the benefit of the community at large, had a very real and definite claim upon its sympathy and financial support. During the year also they had aided 6151 discharged prisoners with food, clothing, tools, or employment. But besides those who had been released from the local prisons, the Mission had received and assisted 285 convicts on their discharge. Turning from adults to boys, about 500 of whom were received into the four Homes annually, he might say that the work in this department had been carried on with the utmost success. The lads were clothed, fed, and in every way cared for, and most of those present had for some time past been giving satisfaction in the employment which the Mission had found for them. The results which have attended these labours in this direction have been most encouraging; quite a number of the boys are now living consistent Christian lives, and are a power for good amongst the other lads in the Homes. The dark side of the whole matter is that "the contributions are less than last year, and that a large amount of work cannot be done for lack of funds."

Col. Howard Vincent, M.P., who presided, said that he knew from personal experience at Scotland Yard how valuable the work was. He held in his hand a letter from Sir Edmund Du Cane, the highest authority in the country on criminal matters, who said: "Mr. Wheatley, by his work in reclaiming adult criminals and preventing juveniles from falling into crime, is rendering most valuable service to the country. I am confident that the First Offenders' Act was on the right lines." To this the chairman added strong testimony, and a telling plea for liberal help. Mr. Wheatley came next, outlining in brief some recent experiences.

Mr. John Dickinson, LL.M. (metropolitan police magistrate), stated in the strongest possible terms his sense—and that of all the police magistrates—of the help this Mission is rendering in the prevention of crime, the salvation of boys, and the enrichment of the nation. Dr. Robert Anderson followed with a clear and cogent statement of the reasons, based upon an official knowledge of the facts, which lead him and others in authority, to support the St. Giles' Christian Mission. Amongst the succeeding speakers were Alderman Treloar, Mr. James Judd, J.P., and Lieut.-Colonel Wilbraham Taylor.

Much interest was awakened by the presentation, by Mrs. Bevan, of prizes to some forty boys who have for varying periods conducted themselves with credit to the homes. It should be noted en passant that no public funds are spent on these prizes, which are personally borne by a few private friends.

THE GIPSY GOSPEL WAGON is now in the New Forest, Hants, having previously been located among the gipsies at Blackpool and Liverpool, where good work was done amongst this people. As many know, the Forest is not easy to cover, extending as it does twenty-four miles one way and twelve miles the other. The various gipsy encampments are scattered over this wide area. Thus it is impossible to preach the Gospel to them all, and see to the education of their children under present circumstances. But as the workers are anxious to reach all, they hope to secure a donkey and vehicle to aid in reaching the camps. The address is Messrs. J. Wesley Baker and I. Partington, Ashurst, Lyndhurst-road, Totton, Hants.

Some London Missions.

THE MARYLEBONE MEDICAL MISSION.

What Hoxton or Bethnal Green are in the East, the quarter around Lisson-grove is on the West. Here, lying at the very doors of Belgravia, and within hail almost of the splendour of wealth and fashion, may be found whole colonies of poverty and neglect. Amongst these for nearly twenty years Dr. Chambers has been labouring, seeking out the sick and suffering, in order that in treating such he may find opportunities of telling the glad news.

Here, as elsewhere, the efficacy of the Medical Missions in winning an entrance for the Gospel has been abundantly proved. This double ministry reaches those who, by misfortune or folly, have sunk into the lowest depths of despair, and have become outcasts, in the saddest sense of the word. The medical missionary finds his way into the darkest rooms, is welcomed as a friend and helper, wins confidence by the ministry of Christian love, is soon regarded as a reliable friend, and is enabled to bear the burden of the poor as few others have the opportunity to do. Tales of sorrow, and even of hardness of heart, reach his ears, revealing an abyss of misery and despair pitiful to contemplate. For the stricken body he gives his best medical aid; for the sin-darkened soul he brings the light of the Gospel of Divine grace.

THE SUBSTRATUM OF SOCIETY—

To this Mission I am no stranger. Well I know the forlorn, patient throngs who gather around the doctor at his mid-day Gospel services. With him, and with his devoted nurse, I have gone into many of the dull homes, and have marked how these visitors are welcomed, and how well their message is received. Besides, I have conversed with many —now living to the glory of God—who confessed that they first came to the Medical Mission strangers to God and his mercy. One evening last week I found the hall well filled by the poorest class, who listened attentively while Mr. W. H. Seagram declared the way of salvation and the readiness of Christ to save. A week's mission has been held with good results, bringing to decision some who had been already convicted of sin.

Apart from this special effort, the Medical Mission operations go on steadily, and the poor from all round flock for healing and help. But the superintendent finds himself pressed by reason of destitution and need. He is at present specially in want of aid in his relief fund, and would thankfully welcome gifts of old clothing, etc., for the shivering poor, sick, and painstricken, with scarce a rag to cover them or blanket to keep them warm in illness. While aiding other good missions further afield, care should surely be taken to keep this work in the West End in full activity and helpfulness. The address is Dr. Robert Chambers, 12, Bell-street, Lisson-grove, N.W.

THE COSTERMONGERS' MISSION.

A Saturday evening's stroll along High-street, Hoxton, will convince anyone that the Costermongers' Mission is planted in the right spot. The cry of the coster is familiar all over London, but here he reigns supreme, possessing the street. The countless barrows are surrounded by eager shouting throngs, and the scene is of the most lively description. Over thirty years ago, when the Mission was started, the costers affected St. Luke's, and there the work began. Now Golden-lane has disappeared, the coster has migrated to Hoxton, and the Mission has followed. Hence, at the corner of Wilmer-gardens, the Costermongers' Mission finds itself surrounded by thousands of street traders, to whose well-being these fine buildings are specially devoted, and amongst whom the work has proved most successful.

The other evening I found assembled in the Mission Hall well nigh 200 voluntary workers—plain, earnest, consecrated men and women. This was no public meeting, but simply a quiet conference concerning what the Lord had done and how plans and methods might be improved. The impression left on my own mind from all I saw and heard at this gathering was one of thankfulness to God that in the heart of a district of this kind such a band of helpers had been formed. Listening to the stirring testimonies, and marking their tone, one ceased to marvel that God had blessed the service.

Mr. W. J. Orsman, who has been the honoured leader in this work, and to whose devotion and organising power its development is due, opened the proceedings in a few straightforward words, calling for more intense and unreserved consecration to the work in hand. He showed that over forty-five diverse operations, of men, women, and children, are carried on, each by its own responsible leader and band of helpers. After the superintendent, one and another arose telling in brief words of the particular part allotted to them. Thus the whole circle of operation, wide as it is, was reviewed and laid before God in prayer.

TOUCHING ALL SORTS AND CONDITIONS

Evangelisation is the great aim of the Mission. The Gospel services are largely attended, bright and effective. Mr. Orsman generally speaks on Sunday evenings, Mr. C. H. Hart taking the morning service. The prayer-meetings disclose the secret of power; for it is a significant thing to find 150 working people come out to a prayer-meeting on a week-night. An earnest spirit of Bible study is evidenced by the large Bible-readings. The Bible-classes are numerous, full of interest, and have given many workers to the Mission. The Sunday-school has 850 children, and associated there is a whole labyrinth of varying and useful efforts in the way of Christian bands, Bands of Hope and Mercy, and so on. Open-air work is carried on vigorously all the year round; and temperance efforts are unceasing.

But while all this spiritual work is going on, the social and physical needs of the poor are met by all sorts of agencies of a useful kind—ranging from the Donkey Show, which has made life tolerable for the donkeys, to the Seaside Home, libraries, industrial classes, and the like.

Moreover, special efforts are made at this season for the destitute. Starving children are fed, shivering little ones clothed, perishing families relieved and tided over the time of need. In a hundred diverse ways help and comfort is brought to the hopeless poor; and thus the Gospel is practically commended to those afar off from God.

It is, after all, but a brief review of a great work; yet it may touch many hearts, who herein may learn how God maintains faithful witnesses for Himself in dark districts, and how wonderfully He blesses their labours. It is obvious that such service demands maintenance, and indeed there is great need of liberal help. Were the Lord's stewards able to visit and see for themselves what is doing, there would be no lack of willing givers. The hon. superintendent is Mr. W. J. Orsman, Milton House, Shacklewell-green, Hackney, N.E.

Pearl Fisher.

STRATFORD CONFERENCE HALL.

Dear Sir,—We are just finishing our tenth year of work for God in the East End of London, and we are devoutly thankful for so many tokens of blessing during these years of happy service. Our large hall is well filled on Sunday evenings, showing the truth of God's word, which says, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all unto Me."

The Sunday afternoon service is attended by about 800 people, and it is wonderful to mark the interest with which the people listen to the plain preaching of the Gospel. Scarcely a week passes without our having to deal with cases of spiritual difficulties, often resulting in a joyful acceptance of the Lord as their Saviour.

Our young men's Bible class, held on Sunday afternoons, has an average attendance of 115 young men, all between the ages of 16 and 30. Many of their lives have been completely altered since attending this class. It would be impossible in a short letter to give an account of the mothers' meeting, the men's Mizpah Band, the women's Mizpah Band, the Sunday school, and all the various clubs, all started with a view to helping the people to help themselves.

But, beside all this, we have to attend to the temporal welfare of the people, and this we do by visiting their homes and, where necessary, by sending gifts of coal, grocery, and bread. We are at present in need of £150.—Yours, etc.,

E. Fox-Butlin, Secretary.

West Ham-lane, Stratford, E.

AT TENBY a six days' mission, in connection with the local Good Templars, has been conducted by Mr. William Dunn, whose addresses were much appreciated.

A VILLAGE MISSION.

In a small village in Suffolk, some ten miles from Ipswich, with less than 250 people, may be seen a very practical answer to the question "What is wanted in our villages?" and what can be done. The work originated in June, 1888, when a tent mission was held for three weeks, resulting in the conversion of many (who to-day are witnessing a good confession), and the arousing of Christians to see the necessity of consecrated lives, and aggressive work for the Lord Jesus. In six months from that time a mission hall was erected and paid for, the Lord sending the money in a wonderful way.

The work proceeded quietly, taking a firm hold of the people. Nothing short of winning them for God was aimed at, and tokens of Divine blessing were not wanting. It soon became apparent that the place was not large enough; frequently on Sunday evenings at the evangelistic service many were unable to gain admission. The hall was enlarged by half its original size, enough money being sent to have made it larger still. With the enlarged building came greater blessing. Young men yielded themselves to God, and others received equal blessing.

What means have been used to bring about this happy result? The united prayer and effort of all classes of Christians in the village, and the simple preaching of the Gospel of God's love. The results can be but imperfectly stated; it seems as if almost half the village are trusting the Lord Jesus for salvation and living for his glory. A branch of the Y.M.C.A. works among the young men, and some six young fellows were recently received by the committee as members. In connection with this branch is a "Mission Band," whose members in the summer visit the adjoining villages, holding open-air services. During the winter similar work is carried on in the cottages. There are also branches of the Gleaners' Union and the Scripture Union. A Bible reading is held weekly, and a prayer-meeting on Saturday evening, when from twenty to thirty gather for prayer and praise.

A mission, conducted by Mr. J. Johnson, of the Evangelisation Society, has been held, and a very blessed time it has proved.

A missionary spirit has taken hold of the people, and they are crying to God for the villages around. Will any help with parcels of suitable tracts and booklets for distribution among the anxious, the careless, and the infidel. These may be sent to Hon. Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., Abbott's Hall, Pettaugh, Stonham, Suffolk.

The work is undenominational, and the Spirit of Christ pervades every branch. It is thus enabled to work hand in hand with the village church, and to strengthen the hands of the beloved aged rector, who is in full sympathy with the effort. J. C.

ITALIAN NAVVIES.

In a lengthened communication, for which we have not space, Mrs. Garnett, of Barwood, Ramsbottom, Manchester, pleads the cause of the men engaged on Italian railways and roads. A letter she sent to us in the Spring created some interest in the work among these men, and after much difficulty two evangelistic workers were told off to distribute to the navvies the word of life. The help of some ladies was also secured. The two student evangelists encountered much opposition from the priests, a lodging being unavailable except at a great distance from the spot where the men were working. In spite of all hindrance, God blessed the effort. Portions of Scripture were eagerly received, and desires were expressed for the whole Bible.

Past experience has shown that this Mission must be planned and carried on quietly, so as to circumvent the machinations of the enemy. Mrs. Garnett earnestly asks for further monetary help, and for Christian volunteers who can help on the work.

HOUSE OF REST, ST. JOHN'S WOOD.—The afternoon meeting last Friday was addressed by Dr. Newman Hall, who gave a few striking thoughts on "Songs in the Night," as suggested by the song of Paul and Silas in the inner prison at Philippi. The evening meetings were conducted by Mrs. Amanda Smith, whose natural eloquence and deep insight into spiritual things make her words effective and attractive to hearers of every class. There were large gatherings upon each occasion.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 16.—MARK XIV.

Love (1-16).—Love to Christ constrained Mary of Bethany. She counted no sacrifice, she braved the criticism of Judas, she was oblivious to every presence but His. Whether she was beside herself, it was to Christ. To all time Christ establishes the principle that there are acts that do not immediately serve a useful purpose, which are yet acceptable to Him, because, like the burnt offering, they express love that passeth knowledge. He understands, He shields, He accepts, He commemorates for ever. The owner of the upper room must have loved Him well, else in those dark days he had never lent the chamber in his house at the magic mention of the word Master. My soul, be thou his guest-chamber, furnished and ready.

Treachery (17-31).—Those who will never betray are most eager in asking, "Is it I?" Let us ever feed on Christ, that we may be strong to meet the temptation and sorrows that may await us. The smitten Shepherd and the scattered sheep are sad enough, but still worse that Judas should betray and Peter thrice deny.

The Agony (32-42).—How strangely do hymns and agony mingle in the Christ-life! The one towards God, the other for man. There could be no use for Jesus except on the behalf of those who would have no mercy on themselves. His bitter sorrow must have been in his vision of human guilt. The emphasis is, Simon, sleepest thou? Of all the disciples, sleep was least becoming to him. Creature resolution can never carry us through these hours apart from watching and prayer. Is it possible that He watched whilst they slept, until the lights betrayed Judas and his bands?

The Arrest and Trial (43-72).—Kissed by the traitor; self-possessed in the tumult; more thoughtful of the Scriptures than of impending trouble; deserted by his friends; accused by false witness; treated with shameful indignity by the menials; but Jesus never once stepped down from his intrinsic dignity and glory. It seemed not incongruous to hear Him speaking of the right hand of power. Ah! Peter, the warmth of that fire enervated thee! Better the night air than its glow!

MONDAY, DECEMBER 17.—MARK XV.

Pilate (1-20).—He had never confronted such a prisoner, so strong in his silence, indifferent to the scene that was passing around Him, as though He had no interest in it, not raising his voice to protest against injustice, or ask for liberty. He would fain have saved Him from his merciless foes, but instead of standing boldly upon right, he tried to effect his purpose by a subterfuge. If he could only get the people to select Christ for release he would evade the alternative of deciding either against conscience or them. Barabbas is Antichrist in miniature. Every heart has to decide between its Barabbas and Christ. In man's mockery learn how the devil would fain treat God's King.

Simeon of Cyrene (21-32).—Africa bore the cross for Christ. This constrained identification with the Crucified probably gave a family to the Church in after days. Many truths have been uttered in jest, and Simon may have learnt the Gospel in the taunt that Christ could only save others by not saving Himself. It was a befitting title affixed by Pilate to the cross, the foundation of Christ's kingdom is his sacrifice.

The Centurion (33-41).—Nature is mysteriously related to man. The death of the Son of Man was the signal for the birth-throes of the new heavens and the new earth. He died that we might live, was forsaken that we might never want companionship, was athirst that we might drink of the water of life, suffered his flesh to be rent that the veil of the Most Holy Place might be parted for ever.

Joseph (42-47).—"With the rich in his death." There was no mingling of his body with the dust of others. His was the Virgin Mother, the unmounted colt, the new tomb. God grant that we may be planted with Him in death, that we may rise to know the power of his resurrection.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18.—MARK XVI.

The Resurrection (1-8).—The hours of dusk were filled with busy preparation. The time and money might have been saved had they understood and believed his word, yet their act approved their love. Look up, and you shall see stones rolled away; look in and you shall see immortal youth sitting in the realm of death; look on, He goes forward to Galilee to new revelations, to fresh ministries. Too often we have sought our life and love in the tomb of our own consciousness, in the sepulchre of rite and ceremony, or in the dead past. He is not here, but risen.

Witnesses of the Resurrection (9-18).—How much of the sorrow and mourning of the world would vanish if we believed those revelations of resurrection and immortality with which the New Testament is full. But Christ bears with our imperfect faith, manifests Himself with convincing proofs, condescends to every method by which to dislodge our unbelief, and to conduct us into the perfect day. Note the mighty power of faith. It secures blessing for others, and immunity for ourselves.

The Ascension (19-20).—He sat down as the exalted Man, the Representative of his people, the Anointed King of all worlds. His sitting down recals the rest of creation. He ceased from his works, as the Father from his, but He works still, and goes forth at the right hand of every humble servant who performs the slightest ministry in his name to men.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19.—LUKE I.

Zacharias and Elizabeth (1-25).—The Temple and the priesthood were the fitting accessories for the announcement of the great forerunner, greatest of the prophets. His parents had pleaded for such a gift. The rising incense had often wafted their prayers to heaven. The long years of waiting were at last forgotten in the joy and gladness of his birth. Many of his personal characteristics must have been due to his mother, his abstinence and continence and moral strength, the effect of her mature piety and long waiting. The result of years of discipline passed from her into her child. Youthful passion had failed of this supreme gift to the race.

Mary (26-56).—Only perfect purity could have spoken so calmly with the angel of God. Only unsullied faith could have broken out into such an outburst of song, when face to face with the possibility that confronted her womanly modesty with the gravest suspicion. Only a soul saturated in the Scripture could have found ready to hand materials for the expression of such experience. Pure, and lovely lily, white flower on the stock of man, thou wast the meet parent of that Seed of the woman, which was to bruise the serpent's head and win deliverance for thy race! Oh to be as submissive to the will of God, at whatever cost, as thou wast to the startling greeting of Gabriel.

The Birth of John (57-80).—Let us rejoice whenever God magnifies his mercy to others. Let our tongues, loosed by the Holy Ghost, praise God. Salvation dates back to the beginning of the world. It contains deliverance, fearless service, holiness towards God, righteousness towards man, the remission of sins, light in the death-shadow, guidance into the ways of peace.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20.—LUKE II.

Bethlehem (1-7).—The plans of God are effected through many different agencies. Here, for instance, by means of the government of the Cæsars. An edict, emanating from Rome, brought the chosen mother to the destined birthplace, as Micah had foretold. Behind the politics of man, a Divine purpose is at work. Swaddling-clothes, manger, and stable, are not able to disguise the King beyond the recognition of faith.

Heaven (8-20).—It was tumultuous with wonder and joy. The angel hosts saw that more glory would accrue to God from this marvellous descent than from the creation of suns and worlds. When there is glory to God, there is always peace on earth. The simple, humble shepherds were more at one with the angels than were Herod or the priests, so the story was told to them. "Revealed to babes." When we have seen, let us tell.

The Temple (21-39).—The offering showed that they were poor, but how aptly the turtledoves symbolised the gentle purity of Mary. What a welcome from the aged pair to their Lord. Thus may we be ever at our post ready to welcome Him, when He descends. "Looking for and hastening unto." But we must abide in the temple of daily fellowship.

Home (40-52).—The Father's business must always have the precedence; but sometimes it consists as much in being subject as in talking with the doctors of the law. What a sad and weary search! So is it with the soul that has lost the Lord! Nothing can fill that blank.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21.—LUKE III.

The Preacher of Repentance (1-14).—He was greatest of those born of women, and the multitudes felt it. Great in his rugged strength, in his burning words, in his power over the conscience. The conscience always recognises the heaven-sent messenger. No need to advertise him. Men find him out and come. God can make sons of stones. Each man has some special form of sin, which must be dealt with and put away if there is to be true reception of the Saviour.

The Humble Slave (15-19).—He who never quailed before the presence of man confessed that he was unworthy to stoop to the feet of Christ. The greatest are lowliest. Noble natures are unconscious of their superiority. Moses wist not that his face shone. But what a contrast these words of John present to the readiness with which Jesus took the homage of those who worshipped Him. Jesus was as lowly as John, but He counted it as his right to be equal with God. Mark that present tense, "There cometh." Jesus is ever coming to the hearts of men to cleanse, to separate, to gather the wheat into safe keeping. (18) The career of the Baptist is cut short. The morning star is lost to view at sunrise. He decreased before the increase of his Lord. His cup of joy was full since he had heard the Bridegroom's voice. All faithful witnessing will sooner or later bring us into collision with evil, and suffering for the truth.

The Baptist (21, 22).—Jesus was admitted as Shepherd to the Jewish fold by the faithful porter. In Baptism He identified Himself with human sin, and took man's side in the conflict. If you would have heaven open obey known duty and pray. This was our Lord's anointing for service. The Dove at last found rest in the Saviour's heart. God always records his acceptance of obedience by some expression of His love.

The Genealogy.—All kinds of men made the line of descent for the Second Adam. He was not contaminated by connection with any ancestor, and He represented all (Col. iii. 10, 11).

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22.—LUKE IV.

Tempted (1-13).—Every temptation was summed up in these three. The life of self: the reaction from faith to presumption; the fascination of power, wherewith to bless and save: through the experience of each of these the tempted High Pest passed, that he might be able to succour them that are tempted. Do not be anxious if you are tempted. When most full of the Spirit, you are most liable to learn the full brunt of hell. Conquer by faith in God, who is nearest us when temptation is fiercest, and by the devout use of the sacred Word.

Preaching (14-30).—It is not enough to be filled with the Spirit for character; we must seek, like our Lord, to be anointed by Him for service. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me." We should be constantly anointed with fresh oil. Now is the acceptable year, the year of jubilee, the silver trumpet calls to freedom. From that trumpet Jesus drew the first dulcet notes. (23) Proximity to the Lord by the ties of nature or locality is not enough to save. Often those who are richest in privilege are poorest in participation. We are not saved by the hearing of the ear or the contact of the outward presence, but by faith. And wherever there is faith, it will link a soul to God, though it has had but the poorest opportunities for knowledge. A living flower on a moorland is a more precious thing than the fading blossom of a rootless stalk.

Healing and Helping (31-43).—Wherever Jesus went He carried blessing to bodies and souls. His miracles were parables. He still casts out unclean spirits, rebukes the fever of care, lays hands on sick and infirm souls, and proclaims the good tidings of the Kingdom. We shall never know true blessedness till we have given all up for Him, and passed into the realm of King Immanuel.

---

LADS' INSTITUTES.—A drawing-room meeting, on behalf of the Red, White, and Blue Christian Institute for Lads, Cumming-street, Pentonville, was held lately at the Langham Hotel. The chair was taken by Rev. Alex. Morgan, who spoke strongly of the need of all possible effort to win the lads for Christ. Rev. W. R. Mowll urged the multiplication of small agencies, such as institutes and missions, as a means of reaching the masses. Details of the work carried on at the Institute were given by some of the workers, including the gymnasium, brigade drill, Bible classes, prayer meetings, and Sunday services. Work has been started amongst the mothers and sisters of the boys.

VALUABLE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDENTS.

PUBLISHED BY MORGAN AND SCOTT.

JERUSALEM (Reduced from an Illustration in "John").

By

REV. JAMES CULROSS, A.M., D.D.,

Principal of Bristol Baptist College.

John, whom Jesus Loved:

A SKETCH OF THE CHARACTER, WRITINGS, AND THEOLOGY OF THE BELOVED DISCIPLE.

PRICES.
TINTED COVERS, 2/-
CLOTH BOARDS . 2/6

PRESENTATION EDITION:
Cloth, Bevelled Boards,
Gilt Edges . . . . . 3/6

WITH EIGHT CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHIC VIEWS.

FROM A REVIEW by the late Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.

"The work before us is a great book for matter, though modest in size. It is perhaps a little too compressed for the general reader, which is a virtuous fault for the student. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices, and are mainly of use in stirring up pure minds by way of remembrance.

"One of the excellences of Dr. CULROSS is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate on what they read."—Sword and Trowel.

ALSO BY DR. CULROSS.

Christ's Message to Ephesus.

("Thy First Love.")

WITH CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHIC FRONTISPIECE

Tinted Covers . . . . 1/6

PRESENTATION EDITION.
Cloth, Bevelled Boards,
Gilt Edges . . . . . 2/6

"The glow, as from a golden sunset, which the imagination sheds over the author's style, gives it a great charm."—The British Messenger.

ALSO BY DR. CULROSS.

Christ's Message to Laodicea.

("Behold, I stand at the Door and Knock.")

WITH CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHIC FRONTISPIECE.

Tinted Covers . . . . 1/-
Cloth Boards . . . . 1/6

PRESENTATION EDITION:
Cloth, Bevelled Boards,
Gilt Edges . . . . . 2/6

"All who admire the author's insight, his delicacy of perception, his felicity of language, his broad and tender sympathies, his grasp of great truths, will welcome this volume."—The Freeman.

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THREE VOLUMES,

Handsomely Bound in Cloth Boards and specially suitable for

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR PRESENTS, PRIZES, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARDS, P.S.A. PRESENTATION VOLUMES, &c., &c. OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

THE

Herald of Mercy.

A SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED VOLUME of Bright, interesting, and profitable Reading, containing:—

Stirring Narratives, Choice Extracts, Biographical Sketches, Children's Pages, &c.

QUARTO SIZE. 384 PAGES.
ABOUT 200 ILLUSTRATIONS.

PUBLISHED AT 4/- OFFERED FOR 1/6 NET. IF SENT BY POST 1/10½

BY A.L.O.E.

Author of "RESCUED FROM EGYPT," &c., &c.

Percival's Picture Gallery.

With Attractive Frontispiece in Colour, and Carmine borders to each page.

Tastefully bound in Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges.

PUBLISHED AT 2/- OFFERED FOR 1/- NET. IF SENT BY POST 1/3

By Dr. ANDREW A. BONAR.

Author of "THE LIFE OF ROBERT MURRAY MCCHEYNE."

James Scott:

THE GLASGOW EVANGELIST.

With Life-like Portraits of Dr. BONAR and JAMES SCOTT.

Handsomely bound in Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges.

PUBLISHED AT 2/6 OFFERED FOR 1/- NET. IF SENT BY POST 1/3

These 3 Volumes, published at 8/6 ARE OFFERED FOR 3/6 NET. IF POSTED SEPARATELY 4/4½

SPECIAL OFFER. If Sent Together the Price of the above-mentioned Three Volumes, Carriage Paid, will be 4/- NET.

Early application, with remittance, should be made to the Publishers, MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, PATERNOSTER BUILDINGS, LONDON; or to any Bookseller.

PRESENTATION EDITIONS OF Sacred Songs and Solos:

750 PIECES.

Handsomely bound in Leather, and Cloth Gilt.

Music and Words.

Old Notation, Large Type.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| FF 3. | Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges | 6 0 |
| FF 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 7 6 |
| FF 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 10 6 |
| FF 6. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 14 6 |

Old Notation, Cheap Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| HH 3. | Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges | 3 6 |
| HH 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 4 6 |
| HH 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 6 6 |
| HH 6. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 9 6 |

Tonic Sol-fa Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| RR 3. | Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges | 3 6 |
| RR 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 4 6 |
| RR 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 6 6 |
| RR 6. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 9 6 |

Quarto Edition.

For Use at the Piano, Organ, or Harmonium.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| MM 1. | Cloth boards | 7 6 |
| MM 2. | Bevelled boards, gilt edges | 9 6 |
| MM 3. | Leather, burnished red edges | 12 6 |
| MM 4. | Persian morocco, boards, gilt | 17 6 |
| MM 5. | Best Turkey morocco, boards, gilt | 25 0 |

Words Only.

Ruby Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AA 3. | Cloth boards, gilt | 0 6 |
| AA 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 1 0 |

Nonpareil Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| BB 2. | Cloth boards | 0 9 |
| BB 3. | Leather, burnished red edges | 1 0 |

Pocket Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CC 3. | Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges | 1 6 |
| CC 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 2 0 |
| CC 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 3 0 |
| CC 6. | Morocco, yapp, kid-lined, gilt edges | 4 6 |

Large Type Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| DD 4. | Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges | 2 6 |
| DD 5. | Leather, burnished red edges | 3 6 |
| DD 6. | Morocco, gilt edges | 4 6 |

Extra Large Type Edition.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| EE 4. | Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges | 3 6 |
| EE 5. | Leather, burnished edges | 4 6 |
| EE 6. | Morocco, gilt edges | 6 6 |
| EE 7. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 9 6 |

A complete List of the various Editions of SACRED SONGS AND SOLOS—with Words only from 2d. upwards, and with Music and Words, both Old Notation and Sol-fa from 2s. 6d. upwards, with Specimens of Type—will be sent post free on application to the Publishers.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

PUBLISHED BY MORGAN AND SCOTT.

NEW VOLUMES BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

A CHARMING PIECE OF AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

The Bells of Is.:

OR, VOICES OF HUMAN NEED AND SORROW.

Large Octavo Size: Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT OF REV. F. B. MEYER AND SEVEN OTHER FULL-PAGE ENGRAVINGS. Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

PRICES.
Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6
Presentation Edition, Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges 3/6

From the Methodist Times.

"A book of real and charming melody; a book in prose and yet of poetry; a book of work and yet of rest; a book that will refresh while it entertains, and which once read will want to be read again. It is a book to soften the heart and moisten the eyes, and to quicken all the holy impulses of souls yearning for the welfare of their fellows."

A NEW VOLUME OF
SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY.

Jeremiah:

PRIEST AND PROPHET.

With Nine Full-page Illustrations, Specially Prepared and Artistically Printed on Antique Paper.

PRICES.
Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6
Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Top .. .. .. 3/6

A Review from Word and Work.

"Another of those choice, tender studies in Scripture Biography that Mr. Meyer has made peculiarly his own. There is no struggle to be startlingly original; but there is everywhere an earnest endeavour to be practically helpful to God's people. Mr. Meyer's new volume will be heartily received, and will be found to be one of the best in a fine series. The illustrations, too, add considerably to the attractiveness and value of the book. Both author and publishers have done their work well."

ALSO BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY.

Each with Nine Original Illustrations. SPECIALLY PREPARED AND SEPARATELY PRINTED ON TONED PAPER.

CLOTH BOARDS, 2s. 6d.;
CLOTH, BEV. BOARDS, GILT EDGES, 3s. 6d.

Abraham: OR, THE OBEDIENCE OF FAITH.
Israel: A PRINCE WITH GOD.
Joseph: BELOVED—HATED—EXALTED.
Moses: THE SERVANT OF GOD.
Joshua: AND THE LAND OF PROMISE.
Elijah: AND THE SECRET OF HIS POWER.
Jeremiah: PRIEST AND PROPHET.

"More useful guides for a series of Bible-class lessons it would be impossible to find."—The Quiver.

The Library of Scripture Biography.

THE ABOVE-MENTIONED SEVEN VOLUMES, BOUND IN LIBRARY STYLE, AND ENCLOSED IN A HANDSOME CASE, Postage 1s. 4½d. extra. 14/6 NET.

"In Mr. MEYER'S hands the Old Testament is a living Book."—Baptist Magazine.

EXPOSITORY SERIES.

Each Volume in CLOTH BOARDS, 2s. 6d.; CLOTH, BEV. BOARDS, GILT EDGES, 3s. 6d.

Tried by Fire.
EXPOSITIONS OF THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER.

"We doubt whether any work has appeared since the time of Leighton, on the same subject, which equals the one before us."—The Rock.

The Life and Light of Men.
EXPOSITIONS OF JOHN I.—XII.

"Will prove a great help, not only for private meditation, but also in preparation for the pulpit and the Bible class."—Christian Progress.

The Way into the Holiest:
EXPOSITIONS OF THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

"The difficult passages are not passed over, as is the way with too many commentators, but elucidated with a clearness that leaves nothing to be desired."—English Churchman.

The Library of Scripture Exposition.

THE ABOVE-MENTIONED THREE VOLUMES, BOUND IN LIBRARY STYLE, AND ENCLOSED IN A HANDSOME CASE, Postage 6d. extra. 6/6 NET.

"A great treasure to any preacher or Bible student."
—Preachers' Magazine.

"CHRISTIAN LIFE" SERIES

Each Volume in CLOTH BOARDS, 1s.
CLOTH, BEV. BOARDS, GILT EDGES, 1s. 6d.

Christian Living.
The Future Tenses
OF THE BLESSED LIFE.
The Present Tenses
OF THE BLESSED LIFE.
Key-words of the Inner Life.
The Shepherd Psalm.
The Psalms. NOTES AND READINGS. { Clth. bds. 1/6; Clth. bev. bds. gilt edges, 2/-

"It is a good sign that such books as these multiply and find readers. They are 'rills from the fountain of life,' and will send those who here taste the living water to the Word, which is the springhead."—The King's Highway.

The Library of Devotional Volumes.

CONSISTING OF THE FOLLOWING VOLUMES IN A NEAT CLOTH CASE:

Christian Living.
The Present Tenses.
The Future Tenses.
The Shepherd Psalm.
The Psalms.

Bound in Cloth Boards, 5/- net. | In Cloth Boards, Gilt Edges, 7/6 net.

Postage, in either case, 6d. extra.

AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
FOR GRATUITOUS DISTRIBUTION.

The Pilgrim's Progress:

MORGAN & SCOTT'S
ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

96 pages. Imperial 8vo size.

In Tinted Covers, PUBLISHED AT 6D.
OFFERED FOR 3/- PER DOZEN NET. CARRIAGE PAID.
100 Copies for 20/- net, Carriage Extra.
Sample Copy, 3d. If sent by post, 4½d.

In Leatherette Binding, with Handsomely Gilt Side, PUBLISHED AT 1/6
OFFERED FOR 7/6 PER DOZEN NET. CARRIAGE PAID.
40 Copies for 20/- net, Carriage Extra.
Sample Copy if sent by post,

Size 20 in. by 30 in. Printed in Colours.

"The Christian" SHEET ALMANACK FOR 1895.

ONE PENNY (Sample Copy post free for THREE HALFPENCE).
Twelve Copies sent post free for 1s. 100 Copies sent post free for 7s. 6d.

The Almanack contains a specially selected

TEXT FOR EACH DAY IN THE YEAR.

ALSO POSTAL AND OTHER INFORMATION,

AND NINE ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATIONS

Of various Scenes in the

LIFE OF DAVID.

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23.

The Prince of Peace. Isaiah ix. 2-7.

Golden Text (verse 7).

For a right understanding of these verses it is needful to read the whole prophecy from chap. vii. to ix. 7. Ahaz was the reigning king, and when threatened with invasion by Rezin and Pekah (vii. 1, 2), received an assuring message from Isaiah, which he had not faith to accept (vii. 3-9). Upon the dark background of the failure of the wicked and foolish king, the prophecy of Immanuel is given (14). And though little is said of this promised Messiah, yet the name lingers to assure the hope of the prophet (viii. 8, 10).

The people as a whole fail as utterly as their king, and Isaiah has to address himself to his disciples (viii. 16-18), in whom we have a foreshadowing of the Church.

Having rejected God, the nation has recourse to evil spirits (viii. 19), a practice which excites the prophet to scorn, then, as he sees the increasing distress of the people, scorn passes into pity (viii. 21, 22), and pity into hope (ix. 1, 2), and hope into glorious victory (6, 7).

The Darkness of the people (2) was of a two-fold character—that of deep distress, and that of grievous sin. Both are described in 2 Kings xvi. 4-6, and 2 Chron. xxviii. Judah was assailed on every side. Multitudes were slain or taken captives. The King of Assyria, to whom in his distress Ahaz appealed for help, only distressed him the more. And all this because idolatry of the grossest forms had been introduced by the king, and welcomed by the people. Even the Temple was shut up, and Hezekiah found the filthiness even in the holy place (2 Chron. xxix. 5, 16). It was when this darkness was felt (viii. 22) and the people saw no hope of deliverance, that the promise of a coming Deliverer was given.

The Promise (3-5) tells of the people delivered from the yoke of Assyria, of everything belonging to war being destroyed by fire, and of the people again multiplied and united, rejoicing in their prosperity. The fulfilment under Hezekiah, who succeeded Ahaz, was only partial. It is only the Messiah—the Prince of Peace—before whom war shall die.

The Messiah (6, 7).—How much the people saw in this prophecy, or how much Isaiah saw himself, we cannot know (1 Pet. i. 11). It was written, not for the people of his day alone, but for us. We must read it in the light of the event that has fulfilled it. (1) His birth (6).—The angel who announced the fulfilment to the shepherds had this prophecy in mind (Luke ii. 10, 11). Tell the story of the birth, and show how, in the family from which He descended, in the place where He was born, in the name which was given Him, and in the work which He was announced to perform, Old Testament prophecies were fulfilled. (2) The titles given Him make his lowly birth the more remarkable (7). Some deny that these titles were intended to represent Him as Divine, on the ground that the people were not prepared for such a revelation. But the words were intended to convey more than those who heard them could conceive.

Wonderful recalls Judges xiii. 18, and reminds us of the wonders that accompanied his birth, of his mysterious nature as both God and man, of his works, and words, and death, and of the love which He revealed. Counsellor speaks of his wisdom, of the work He does for his Church, and what He is willing to be for every individual life. Contrast Psa. i. 1, and Hos. x. 6. This is the only Counsellor whom we may follow with absolute confidence. The Mighty God, whose might is without limit, and who exercises it on behalf of his people. He is able to complete successfully every work He undertakes; and to save to the uttermost (Isa. lxiii. 1. Heb. vii. 25). Everlasting Father, the qualities of a father are found in perfection in Him (Psa. ciii. 13), and He has revealed to us the fatherhood of God for all who trust Him (Matt. vii. 2). Prince of Peace, restoring harmony where sin had made discord. Peace with God, with our own conscience, with our surroundings (Job. v. 23), and with men.

(3) His Government is set up in the heart of every believer. Salvation comes through restoring Him to his rightful position in our hearts. And these blessings of continually increasing peace are fulfilled to us. But the prophecy looks forward beyond this dispensation. He now sits on his Father's throne (Rev. iii. 21), but at his coming again He is to occupy David's throne (see Luke i. 32, 33). As the Jewish King He was rejected. He received not David's throne, but a cross. Yet the title put upon the cross was an unintentional prophecy of the day when, as King of the Jews, He will be welcomed to David's throne. The glory of that reign is to be shared by those who follow Him now. There is no true way of keeping Christmas except by giving a welcome to the Prince of Peace.

For the Young.

A MISCHIEVOUS PENKNIFE.

"The King cut it."—Jer. xxxvi. 23.

Could a boy receive a more appropriate present than a penknife? For in the boy there is a restless desire to enter the world of doing, and in the knife such a clever knack of trying to do, that one can see at a glance that they were made for each other. He is not the same boy after he has received the gift as he was before. It has widened his world; it has given him new powers; but it also brings before him new temptations. Watch how he will use it, and you may see a faint picture of the man he is to be.

A boy who means well will begin well. He soon finds the proper material out of which to make the toys he has long wished for. When he is busy with the knife it will seem as if it were whispering of further useful effort. He will save his pocket-money to buy more tools, so that he may go on shaping out his little world according to his bent. The well-chosen gift has helped him to be industrious, and his work has made him happy. One can see that he is a boy with a purpose, and that the discipline of work is moulding his character for good.

But with the knife in his hand temptations crowd in upon the boy who is inclined to mischief. See how his thoughtlessness begins to show itself. He begins to try its edge on the furniture; he leaves its mark on his sister's toys; he cuts his name on the bark of the apple-tree in the garden. He is not a maker, this boy, he is a destroyer.

By thus taking hold of the knife by the wrong handle he is beginning to spoil another gift, the life God has given to him. He is throwing away the opportunity he has of cultivating his inventive faculty. Because of his purposeless, useless, and mischievous employment of his present, it is taken from him, and it leaves him a worse boy than it found him. Let him take care, for he is in danger; from mischief-making he may soon glide to open sin. His feet are very near the slippery path.

Jehoiakim, the king spoken of in the text, seems to have been such an one as this. What a life he led, what a death he died! Though he had lived for twenty-five years, nothing good could be said in his favour. When the good king, his father, was killed on the field of battle, the people of Judah had taken a younger son, and put him on the throne. They had so little respect for Jehoiakim that they passed him by. He was vain and ambitious; he was ready to sacrifice every brotherly and patriotic feeling to gain his selfish ends.

His opportunity soon came. One of the Pharaohs came and took the king, his brother, prisoner. Then Jehoiakim bowed the knee and plied Pharaoh with a flattering tongue. How ready he was to promise he would send gold and silver as tribute to Egypt if he was made king!

He had his wish. No sooner was he on the throne than he imposed more taxes on the people, so that he might pay the price of his promotion.

Neither as a king nor as a man did he walk according to the law of God, and his bad example led his subjects further astray. The prophet Jeremiah sent him stern reproof in the name of the Lord, but he turned a deaf ear to all the prophet's messages. Again Jeremiah was commissioned to send to the palace a solemn entreaty to follow after righteousness. But this time it was to be written. The words inscribed on parchment were to be a testimony against the unfaithful king.

He listens to the message as it is read to him, but it is with no reverent ear. His eyes flash with rage as he hears his wicked reign vehemently denounced. Nervously he grasps the penknife that lies ready to his hand. See, already it rouses his mischievous habit; he clutches at the parchment, and slashes at it with the keen blade, and into the fire he tosses the pieces, mad with anger.

All through his life he had held his knife by the wrong handle, he had seized every opportunity that offered to work mischief and do evil. The exalted rank he had won by treason had but the better shown the uselessness of the man, the worthlessness of his character. Now, nobody believed in him.

Let me tell you how he died. An enemy harassed the whole country and soon thundered at the gates of Jerusalem. The inhabitants at once rose up against their king and killed him, and to convince the besieging army that he was dead, his body was thrown to them over the wall. Then came to pass the words of Jeremiah, the prophet, that had been written on the roll that had been cut to pieces and cast into the fire by King Jehoiakim in the winter chamber:—

"Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, King of Judah: They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah my brother! or, Ah sister! They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah Lord! or, Ah his glory! He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem."

William Main.

A GATHERED BLOSSOM.

From yonder church upon the height
The funeral bell is tolling,
Reverberating through the vale,
Where deep the stream is rolling.

A sad procession issues forth,
And yet not wholly sadness
Their mien bespeaks, the while they raise
Sweet hymns of solemn gladness.

These Indian brethren bear to rest
A little Christian maiden,
A gathered blossom, like the flowers
Wherewith her bier is laden.

Yes, gathered safe from earthly storms,
In Christ her Saviour sleeping;
"Not lost, but gone before," they know,
And comfort blends with weeping.

They pass along the winding road,
Above the rushing river,
And still upraise their strains of praise,
Although their voices quiver.

In Tamil speech they sing, "Oh, come
Thou Fount of every blessing!"
And "Jesus loves me, even me,"
Their trust in Him confessing.

These Christian parents laying down
The body of their daughter
In tranquil trust, in graveyard green,
Beside the falling water,

What blessed contrast to the rites
By heathen practised round them!
We thank Thee, Lord, thy Gospel light
In darkness sought and found them!

Isette Teresa Mody, LL.A.

Coonoor, Nilgherries.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, Stackstead, Dec. 13; Altrincham, Dec. 14; Bristol, Dec. 15—17; Needham Market, Dec. 19; Stowmarket, Dec. 20; W. Kensington, Dec. 28; Sydenham, Dec. 29; Mr. E. Arrowsmith, South Creake, Dec. 13, 15, 16; Holkham, Dec. 14; Thetford, Dec. 17; Southwold, Dec. 29-30; Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Horton, to Dec. 19; Mr. J. S. Tyler; Mr. H. Falkner, Latimer, Dec. 13; Chesham Bois, Dec. 14; Much Hadham, Dec. 18; Therfield, Dec. 19; Sidcup, Dec. 20; Mr. A. C. Jewell, Kentish Town, Dec. 13; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, Clifton, Dec. 29 to Jan. 12.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending Dec. 22.—Sun., Dec. 22, Revelation xxii. 1-9; Mon., 17, xxii. 10-21; Tues., 18, Psalms xci. 1-16; Wed., 19, xcii. 1-15; Thurs., 20, xciii. 1-5; Fri., 21, xciv. 1-11; Sat., 22, xciv. 12-23.

Royal Albert Orphan Asylum, Camberley.—A large number of boys and girls belonging to the Children's Scripture Union fill in, month by month, the blank spaces left for the reference to the texts in the "Monthly Letters" issued by the Scripture Union. Mr. A. Mitchell, the head master, asks if some of our readers would not undertake to correct the work, and thus encourage them in Bible study.

"THE CHRISTIAN" ABROAD.—A correspondent in India writes directing attention to the fact that many newspapers sent to that country cannot be delivered, because of the loss of the wrappers, owing to their flimsy nature. Will those readers who post The Christian to friends abroad kindly see that they are secured in strong wrappers that will not easily tear? Where possible, the address might be written on the paper itself.

NORTH QUEENSLAND.—In a recent letter from Mapoon, Thursday Island, North Queensland, Mr. J. G. Ward writes: "Mapoon is a low, sandy peninsula, washed by the waters of the Gulf of Carpentaria on the Queensland side, about 120 miles south of Thursday Island. The Mission here established is to the aborigines. It is carried on under the joint auspices of the Presbyterians of Australia and Tasmania and the Moravians, or Church of the United Brethren. The Moravian Church, at the request of the Presbyterians, furnished the missionaries, the Presbyterians undertaking their support. The present missionary party consists of Mr. and Mrs. Hey, Mrs. Ward, and myself. Though as yet we cannot speak or write of conversions, yet we clearly trace the workings of the Spirit on some of these dusky brothers of ours."

WINTER IN SPITALFIELDS.

With the advent of winter the large band of voluntary workers connected with the King Edward Ragged School and Mission, of which Mr. Charles Montague is the hon. superintendent, realise that the large district in which their lot is cast is temporally and spiritually one of the most needy in London. Though in an all-round sense things cannot be said to be going from bad to worse—in many respects great improvement being visible—the conditions of the work itself sometimes seem to become more difficult. Though an immense amount of service is done from week to week, the money outlay is comparatively small, the chief part going towards directly benefiting the poor themselves; but there seems to be increasing difficulty in getting in the necessary funds. A most beneficent work has now been carried on for nearly fifty years, the jubilee being in 1895. At teaching, Bible-class leading, and other service, more than a hundred persons freely give their services; and while over 1500 children are taught in the Sunday-schools, some 3000 altogether are benefited weekly in one of the most densely-populated and most needy districts of the metropolis. There is no income save such as comes in voluntary offerings; but as the buildings occupied are all freehold, the whole of the money contributed goes directly to the object had in view.

Attention is first of all given to the directly spiritual work, to the Gospel services, Bible-classes and schools, etc. A great deal of other work is done which cannot but have a very far-reaching influence for good. The directly religious work includes separate Bible-classes for men and women, working lads and young women. There are free night schools for young persons engaged during the day who desire to continue their education. In the industrial classes girls learn to make their own clothing, while boys are taught carpentering, cabinet-making, and other arts. In what is lent and given away the circulating library diffuses an immense amount of pure literature among the people in the course of the year, and, in addition, between five and six hundred houses are visited weekly for the free distribution of Gospel literature. Children's services are held on Sundays and Wednesdays, these being supplemented by the Band of Hope and singing classes.

The Benevolent Society assists the sick and aged poor, just as the savings bank teaches habits of thrift. The visitation of men and women in their workshops is also found to be followed by the best results. The Christian visitor is received with respect and gratitude when his motive is found to be pure and unselfish.

But while there is sympathy for all that is done for adults, all who feel for the poor at all have a tender place in their hearts for the children, who in some cases may have to leave home without breakfast, with still a very poor chance of getting anything like an adequate dinner. The King Edward Mission gathers from the Board Schools of the district 200 famishing children three times a week, to give them a hot nourishing dinner, the tickets being given to the most needy subjects by their teachers and others who know them. The benefit of such meals to the hungry little ones cannot well be either estimated or described. The district swarms with children, and the Sunday-schools might be even much larger than they are if more extended accommodation could be provided.

Now that the King Edward School is entering on its jubilee year the course it has to look back upon is of the most beneficent kind. Begun in an old cowshed by the late Dr. Tyler, the work has developed, until it is now one of the most extensive of its kind in London. As scholar, teacher, and superintendent, Mr. Montague has been associated with the work nearly the whole of the time; and one of the quondam scholars was a member of the late London School Board and a Common Councilman. The neighbourhood itself is of the most interesting kind, for being the chosen quarter of the Huguenots who were driven from France two centuries ago, many of the poor people still retain fine old French names. The silk weavers are now a small company, and are gradually becoming less, but while foreigners and others take their places, such Christian centres of influence as the King Edward institutions are indispensable. Mr. Charles Montague (4, Bedford-square, E.) answers all inquiries, and receives subscriptions for general purposes, which at this time of need and pressure will be peculiarly acceptable.

[1266]

RATCLIFF STRANGERS' REST.

The seventeenth anniversary of the work at the Strangers' Rest, Ratcliff Highway, was celebrated on Friday last; and instead of the customary gathering, two meetings were held, one in the afternoon, and another in the evening. The weather was very unfavourable, but yet there was a large attendance of friends on both occasions. In the afternoon the chair was occupied by Mr. J. E. Mathieson, who read a letter he had received from Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, of Liverpool, who said: "The time that foreigners spend in London affords them such an opportune freedom for listening to the Gospel that they might never have in their own country. Let us put away everything that would displease God, and look for a blessing on Christians of all nations, and expect a mighty, world-wide awakening." The chairman addressed some earnest words to workers (based on 1 Peter i.) on communion with Christ in suffering and labour, encouraged by the prospect that He will soon return in triumph and glory. In conclusion, he urged the need for prayer for an accession of power and blessing.

Mr. J. Theo. Isaac, the hon. sec. of the work, described the various agencies—classes for men of different nationalities, open-air testimony, acts of kindness. The distribution of tracts at the dock gates, and the gift of parcels of literature to sailors departing on long voyages, are efforts of special interest. Having spoken of the unwearying exertions of the workers, some of whom have been connected with the Rest for many years, Mr. Isaac referred to the approaching Christmas feast, at which sailors far from home will be enabled to enjoy some of the comforts of home. He appealed for joints and puddings for the tables, and useful articles to present to them. Mr. W. Noble, treasurer, intimated that £350 per annum is required to keep the machinery going, and having stated that the present subscriptions fell short of this by about £50, he left the appeal to enforce itself.

Miss Macpherson spoke with much sympathy on the privations of sailors, claiming to be quite "an old salt," after making fifty-four voyages across the Atlantic with juvenile emigrants. Pastor Fuller Gooch followed with hearty words on consecration, as relating to Christians and their possessions, powers, and influence. Rev. Peter Thompson, a neighbour in work, spoke in the friendliest way of all such efforts. He was confident of great results from the improvement of opportunities to bring the sailors to Christ. Finally, three seafarers praised God for the Rest, with its Gospel light and Christian sympathy.

The evening meeting was presided over by Mr. George Lidgett, who graphically described the special dangers to which sailors are exposed while in port. Rev. J. G. Train delivered an earnest address to workers, on the parable of the pounds. The possessors say, "Lord, Thy pound hath gained ten pounds." We are trading with what He has given us, until He comes; it is something from his hand, with an inherent power of increase. Our Master for whom we wait is not austere, but righteous in his demand for our work. He spoke in hearty appreciation of the work at the Rest, having great sympathy with it, arising partly from the fact that for twelve years he had laboured among fishermen in the north.

Mr. McVicker spoke to edification on the power of the Gospel. The Gospel that does for the rest of us, does for sailors! The whole materials for renewing a man are in the Gospel. He has the Blood to cleanse him from his sin, and power to keep him from sin. Mr. J. J. Sims, from Canada, followed with a soul-stirring message to workers. What we need to-day is to be filled with the Holy Spirit. Certain marks are given to us in the Scripture of a man thus filled with the Spirit. One is that his heart is filled with melody and his lips with song. Christ wants praiseful lives. We are standing in this little moment of waiting for the coming of the Lord. The time is short; the great motive power of our work is to please Him, not men.

Mrs. Welin, from the Scandinavian Home, closed the proceedings by earnestly pressing the claims of the work upon the hearts of Christians. The prayers of the assembly had many burdens, one being for blessing upon two young ladies who had offered for work at Zanzibar, where a Sailors' Rest is the centre of very interesting Evangelistic operations. After the public gathering the Lord's Supper was observed.

SALVATION ARMY IN FLORENCE.

Dear Sir,—The "City of Flowers" has been entered by the Salvation Army. Major Thonger, who has been carrying on the war in the Waldensian Valleys and at Turin, has succeeded in finding a splendid hall in the Via dei Serragli, a busy street within a stone's throw of the river Arno. The hall is on the first floor, and there is a smaller hall, and good accommodation for the men officers and their cadets.

Saturday evening, November 24, was set apart for the first meeting, which was of a semi-private nature, cards of invitation having been sent to the authorities and principal residents in Florence. The hall was well filled by a select and appreciative audience. The audience listened with the greatest interest to Major Thonger as he explained to them the nature of the meeting, and his belief that God had sent him to open up the work of the Army in this beautiful and aristocratic city. Major Schoch told of the work of the Army in other lands; others spoke. The audience was composed of quite a number of Italians and a good show of English visitors as well.

Next day, the first public meetings were held, and the Sunday meeting will be continued with a meeting every week-day evening, also an English meeting on Thursdays at 3 p.m. and a holiness meeting on Friday evening. The soil is hard, and the work has its difficulties, but we are believing that in consecrating ourselves afresh to prayer and hard work Florence shall be gained for Jesus.—Yours in the Master's service,

J. H. Gordon, Staff Captain.

THE SUFFERING POOR.

Dear Sir,—May I venture to bring under the notice of your readers our little mission amongst the suffering poor? Most of those whom we have been enabled to help during crises of sickness and need belong to the household of faith, and as such, have strong claims upon their brethren to whom have been entrusted the responsibilities of wealth. While the winter slackness of work brings many of our poor friends to the verge of destitution, we ask to be made the channel of gifts that will strengthen their faith and tide them over the present distress.

The following is an extract from a letter received from a Christian woman, whose little family is entirely dependent upon her earnings as a trouser finisher:—"If I can only get over the Christmas I trust I may get on better. I owe 12s. rent, and I have no help from the parish; but they will give an order for the house. I cannot go in, and I am in hopes of more work in the New Year." That is only one case out of many similar cases, and our funds are so low that it is utterly impossible to help except in the barest measure.—Yours obediently,

(Miss) Annie F. Perram, Hon. Sec.

38, Westbank, Stamford Hill, N.

SAILORS' WELCOME HOME.—The last monthly muster of the "Christian Life Boat Crew" this year had a special interest in the presence of several who had just arrived in port, having narrowly escaped shipwreck. After Miss Child had given the text for the month, "Follow thou Me," addresses were delivered by Messrs. John McCall, William Luff, and others. Cheering accounts came from out-ports, as well as from the many meetings held in and around London by detachments from headquarters. Prayer was offered for the destitute seamen, to whom a free supper was to be given the following evening.

THE LADIES' IRISH ASSOCIATION (office, 17, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin) has completed its seventy-third year of quiet, patient work among Roman Catholics and poor Protestants of all classes in remote and neglected districts of Ireland. The past months have been fruitful in opportunities of carrying God's Word to hungry souls through our devoted Scripture-readers, and in providing outfits, etc., for young girls placed in situations where Christian mistresses train them for domestic service. It is for the Mason Relief Fund we would plead just now. While so many kind hearts are full of the poor, will not some remember the wants of ladies who have known better days, and now shrink from making their wants public? We know of many such. Our income is much reduced this winter, owing to the death of valued supporters. Any materials, even odds and ends, remnants, or money to purchase flannel, etc., will be most thankfully received.

(Miss) C. Maud Battersby.

Cromlyn, Rathowen, co. West Meath.

MR. JAMES B. WOOKEY.

For the past ten years or more the name of James B. Wookey has been a familiar one in the most earnest Christian circles of the United Kingdom. He is yet under forty, but few men of twice that age have helped more to influence the best public opinion in questions of individual, social, and national righteousness. The secret is to be found in this fact: he is endowed with the gift of vision, and with the corresponding gift of utterance. Many a man thinks and feels strongly who cannot transfuse the inward fire into bolts of red hot speech; others have command of a glowing rhetoric, without any real and serious passion for truth at the back of it. Mr. Wookey feels strongly and speaks strongly; so that his burning words, bred in a heart aflame with the love of purity and with the hate of evil passion, find a ready and practical response in other hearts and minds.

We may pass lightly over the days of his boyhood and youth. When at the age of twenty-two he was led to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ by a humble worker in a West-end mission hall, Mr. Wookey had known what it was to be in the far country. He could, therefore, appreciate to the full the blessed light, and warmth, and comfort of the Father's house—the kiss of forgiveness, the tokens of sonship, and the family joys of communion and sacred feasting. His nature was cast in a very intense mould, and he at once set to work with the full conviction that he had been "saved to save." For a time the glow of his first love found vent in active service in the ranks of the Salvation Army. Even while he marched under the "blood and fire" banner of General Booth, he had his righteous soul roused by the wrongs done to the gentler and weaker sex by the unbridled passions of evil men. In our quiet country centres he found the devil in human forms, roaming about seeking whom he might devour.

About this time, that great social-purity crusade was in the throes of its birth, which culminated in Mr. Stead's "Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon," and the passing of a law for the better protection of young girls from the schemes of the wicked and the designing, Mr. Alfred S. Dyer (whose labours in this holy cause ought not to be overshadowed by his later achievements) enlisted the services of Mr. Wookey, who became general secretary of the newly-formed Gospel Purity Association. He visited many parts of England, enlightening the Christian mind and awakening the Christian conscience of the community as to the existing evils, and the responsibilities of citizens towards their removal. As a spectator of the trial of the notorious Mrs. Jeffreys, and of the parody of justice that followed her prosecution, Mr. Wookey's indignation was kindled, and at a meeting in the country he caused no small sensation when he denounced by name some of the highly-placed patrons of that notorious procuress. He was in the thick of the fight all through those exciting and well-remembered days and months. In his increasing labours he was earnestly aided, we may mention, by his wife, whose voice was heard on many platforms pleading the claims of her much wronged sisters.

In addition to the advocacy of this special theme, Mr. Wookey undertook from time to time evangelistic missions of a more general kind. These endeavours were abundantly owned of God; the dealing of the evangelist with audiences of young men, and their special temptations, being of a markedly successful character.

In the course of this moral crusade, Mr. Wookey spoke to large assemblages in the East of London, among other places at the "Edinburgh Castle," Limehouse, which forms one of the centres of Dr. Barnardo's many-sided work. It was in this way that he formed an acquaintance with the eminent child-philanthropist—a relationship which later on developed into an engagement to act as one of the deputation secretaries of Dr. Barnardo's Homes. In that capacity he is still employed, and he has amply proved his special fitness for it. Since he became attached to the staff of the institution he has pleaded its cause in almost every part of the three kingdoms, with singular acceptance and power. He is accompanied in his deputation tours by a band of musical boys from the Homes, whose attractive bearing and capital performances on the bells, bagpipes, &c., are one of the most effective object lessons as to the scope and thoroughness of the educational value of Dr. Barnardo's vast rescue work among destitute boys and girls.

One deeply interesting chapter in this part of Mr. Wookey's career was his recent visit to the United States and Canada, with his band of boys, on behalf of the East End Homes. As many of the robuster lads received into the Homes ultimately find their way to the Far West, and become part of the rising communities across the Atlantic, the friends in Canada and the States are equally interested in Dr. Barnardo's work with those on this side the sea. In his Western trip Mr. Wookey was the bearer of many hearty words of commendation from leading Christian men in this country, and he was successful in creating a widespread interest among our Transatlantic cousins, in this greatest of modern enterprises for the salvation of our waif and straydom. He and his interesting little company were unwilling victims in a serious railway accident in the States, which caused the death of one of the boys and injury to others, while he himself escaped with a shock to his system which was serious enough at the time.

As we have said, Mr. Wookey has scarcely attained his prime. What there may be in store for him of public service no man knoweth. But all who know him sincerely thank God for what he has been enabled to do in the past decade, and pray that many further years of useful and fruitful work will fall to his lot.

THE HADLEIGH FARM COLONY.

Dear Sir,—There may be among your readers some who have had no summer holiday, and who, now that the busy season is over, long for a "peaceable habitation, a quiet resting place" for a time. To such I would say, take a trip to Hadleigh and, while resting brain and body, you will learn that General Booth's farm colony is not a myth but a reality.

Look over the farm and the various industries connected with it. The fine dairy, the capacious cowstalls for the sixty-seven cows, heifers and calves feeding on the grass land and marshes, numbering together about 200; the large acreage planted with fruit trees, the market-garden, the three brick fields, carpenter's shop, chair factory, etc., the tailor and boot-making departments, giving employment to nearly 300 men who have come from the ranks of the starving, destitute, homeless outcast. After being tested at the City colony, the most suitable are sent back to the land to redeem their character and work their way up. Many of them get back to their home (or to make one), and to God and heaven. As you stand by the old ruins of Hadleigh Castle and look at the River Thames before you, with its numberless vessels and craft gliding by, beyond it into the County of Kent, and away to the wide expanse of sea by Southend, and feel its invigorating breezes blow over you surely you will thank God for the work that is being done in this charmingly pleasant place.

Park House is the "the home" for visitors. You will be well cared for there. Mrs. Col. Stitt, the governor's wife, with whom I stayed, took me to see the poultry farm, the rabbit warren, and the hospital, which has twenty beds—not one occupant at present. Everything looked so clean; the chrysanthemuns, dahlias, and other flowers, surprised me by their beauty for this time of the year. Two strawberries were picked and given me; many more were nearly ripe. I should say there are some hundreds of tame rabbits kept here; how the eyes of many a boy would brighten to see them. Everything helps to make the colony pay; in time it will doubtless be self-supporting. At present help is needed to "undo the heavy burdens, and let the oppressed go free."—Yours faithfully

Susan Lawford.

Park Farm, Church Oakley.

HAMBURG STRANGERS' REST.

This Rest was founded in 1880 by Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, and continues to be a rich centre of blessing. Situated as it is near the harbour and at the entrance to a district in which many public-houses open their doors to invite seamen and other strangers to destruction, it has proved a safe retreat to many who had almost become total wrecks. Many young men who had fallen low and were in danger of falling still lower, but who are now in respectable situations in Hamburg or at sea, bless the day when they first visited the Strangers' Rest.

During the past year the number of visits amounted to nearly ten thousand and many of the visitors experienced rich spiritual blessings. The committee, unhappily, has the prospect of closing this year with a considerable deficit. Anyone desiring to encourage this good work is requested to communicate with the treasurer, Rev. J. C. Aston, 7, Waterloostrasse, Altona, Hamburg.

LIVERPOOL SHELTERING HOME.

The annual meeting of this institution was recently held in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, presided over by the newly-elected Lord Mayor; among the speakers were Bishop Ryle, Mr. S. Williamson, M.P., Mr. S. Smith, M.P., Mr. J. J. Kenna, and Mrs. Birt. The Homes being opened on May 1, 1873, the work has attained its majority.

Splendid testimony was borne to the work of placing children in the farm homes of Canada by Rev. E. M. Taylor, who crossed the Atlantic on purpose to speak at this meeting. Having been chosen by the Canadian Government to inspect the day-schools, he has had special opportunities of seeing the Sheltering Home emigrants in the schools he was officially inspecting, and also in the homes where he was receiving hospitality. He said they were equal to the Canadian children in secular knowledge, and surpassed them in the Sunday-schools by their quick answers on Scriptural subjects. Some of the lads had become day-school teachers, and others Sunday-school teachers; while one was mayor of a town. The girls were bearing their part in life well. They speak of the training time in the Sheltering Home as among their very happiest days on earth.

Our readers will rejoice to know that this Home is one of the many channels by which great and lasting good has been accomplished; it is well worthy of practical sympathy and support.

BOOK DISTRIBUTION.—The Homerton Book Distribution Society, in connection with Mr. Charles Button's Bible class in Homerton, has been busily engaged during the past year in scattering good and wholesome literature in the neighbourhood. Over 42,000 booklets and periodicals have been distributed, and the workers have been cheered by a knowledge of some distinct cases of blessing. Friends willing to help should send parcels of good reading matter to the Evangelical Hall, High-street, Homerton, E. The secretary is Mr. R. Monk.

TIBETAN PIONEER MISSION.

Miss Annie R. Taylor, notwithstanding her remarkable energy and endurance, has found the burden of leading the Mission too heavy for her, and has requested the friends in England to invite Mr. Cecil Polhill-Turner (whose great interest in Tibet and whose labours on the Chinese border, where he and his wife suffered on behalf of the Gospel, are known to many) to undertake this responsibility.

Mr. Polhill-Turner, who for the present is prevented by his wife's health from returning to the Chinese border, has kindly consented, with the concurrence of the China Inland Mission, to proceed without delay to Sikkim, and for a time to render all the assistance he can to the young Mission, thus setting free Miss Taylor for the more direct work of pioneering, a work which lies so near her heart, and for which she is so especially suited.

The continued prayerful interest of the friends of the work is earnestly desired, so that every difficulty may but prove a stepping-stone towards the attainment of the great object in view, namely the entrance of the Gospel into Tibet.

Since the above was written we find that a paragraph is in circulation stating that this Mission has been dissolved; but it will be seen that the difficulties which probably gave rise to this report have been settled, and that the arrangement we have mentioned seems likely, under the overruling providence of God, to tend rather to the furtherance of the work. Others papers are requested to give publicity to this statement, which is authoritative.

TINPLATE WORKERS IN MONMOUTHSHIRE.

We much regret to hear that the distress among the tinplate workers appears likely to be as severe this winter as it was last. In a circular letter just issued the superintendent of the Pontymoile Christian Mission says: "The position of multitudes of these poor people is more pitiful to-day than at any period during the depression.

"Last winter we gave 100,000 free meals to the children and parents, and we are encouraged to make this urgent appeal again to continue these meals, which are prepared and served out by our excellent staff of voluntary helpers, at the cost of less than one penny per head. In addition to the relief work, we are in the midst of our winter's Gospel campaign in our five mission halls, with multifarious agencies to protect the helpless, raise the fallen, rescue the perishing, reclaim the drunkard, care for the orphan, shelter the outcast, and befriend the needy; but we are sorely in need of funds, and earnestly trust our friends will promptly help us again at this time of urgent need, so that this work, which has been so signally blessed by God, may still go forward unhindered by lack of funds. Gifts of bread, rice, lentils, potatoes, oatmeal, boots, or cast-off clothing will be very acceptable." Thos. M. Wintle.

Pontymoile, Pontypool, South Wales.

TOWER HAMLETS MISSION.

One of the latest developments of the great work in Mile End associated with the name of Mr. F. N. Charrington, is the opening of the old Brunswick Chapel as a Children's Hall. In the absence, through indisposition, of Lady Hope, the building was formally opened on Saturday last by Mr. T. A. Denny. There was a large attendance of friends.

In the course of an interesting address, Mr. Charrington referred to the start made by himself and others a quarter of a century ago, when services for children were held in a stable-loft. For some time past the small hall utilised for mission work amongst the children failed to provide sufficient accommodation. The present hall was therefore secured two years ago for the sum of £2000, and the purchase included six almshouses, situated in the courtyard adjoining, which are to be used as class-rooms.

The new hall will accommodate 1500 children, and in it will be held the classes and Band of Hope meetings; work proceeding night after night just as in the Great Assembly Hall. The school has 1500 children in it, with 115 teachers.

Mr. E. H. Kerwin, secretary of the Mission, announced that the sum of £1000 was still required to complete the purchase of the hall, and about £200 for fitting up.

MR. CHARLES INGLIS IN ST. LOUIS.

This evangelist has been labouring here for two weeks under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. The meetings were held in the Washington and Compton Avenues Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. Brookes is pastor. Bible-readings were given in the afternoon, which were open to all; the Gospel services held at night were restricted to men, except on Wednesday and Sunday nights. The power of God was present from the beginning, and at every meeting there were anxious inquirers.

At the conclusion of his engagement with the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. Inglis was invited by Dr. Brookes to remain for a few weeks to conduct general evangelistic services in his church, but other engagements prevented him from accepting the invitation for more than one week, and these services are in progress at this writing. A number of the pastors of neighbouring churches are co-operating. From St. Louis Mr. Inglis goes to Sedalia, Mo. Geo. T. Coxhead.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 24.

AMONG JEWS IN PARIS.

Our work among the Jews in Paris, I am thankful to say, is being greatly blessed. All our meetings, Bible-classes for Jews, Jewesses, young women, as well as our Sabbath school, are well attended; and many have frankly confessed to me that it was in our Mission Hall, 2, Rue du Roi de Sicile, that they first heard of a crucified and glorified Saviour, that it was there they learned to believe Him truly to be the Messiah, the King of the Jews.

Moreover, the Lord has given us another token of his favour in the baptism of a son of Abraham, a gentleman of good position in business. This took place on Sunday evening, Dec. 2, in the presence of a very large congregation, in the British Embassy Church, Rue d'Aguesseau, the chaplain, Rev. Dr. Noyes officiating. The service was very impressive, especially when the convert audibly and heartily confessed before all his steadfast belief and faith in the Saviour Jesus Christ.

May I request the Lord's people to pray for this young believer, and that many more from the house of Israel may come forward to the glory and praise of our blessed Redeemer?

L. C. Mamlock,
Missionary, London Jews' Society.

119, Rue de Rome, Paris.

THE STOCKWELL ORPHANAGE.

A choir of boys from the Stockwell Orphanage visited Bournemouth on Saturday last at the conclusion of a fortnight's tour in the interest of the excellent institution, which remains as one of the most valuable monuments to the memory of the late Mr. Spurgeon. The chairman for the afternoon was the Mayor of Bournemouth, Mr. J. Russell Cotes, and in the evening Mr. Geo. Pearce. Both meetings were well attended, and the programme, which included performances on the hand bells, choruses, and solos, was greatly appreciated by the audience.

Two of the pieces, sung by Miss Lizzette Pearce, were composed by Mr. T. Walter Partridge, musical director of the Orphanage, whose manipulation of the instrument showed him to be as skilful as an accompanist as he is as a composer. Both are sacred songs; one of them "Yesterday, To-day, and For Ever," being entirely an Orphanage production, the words having been written by Rev. V. J. Charlesworth. The other is entitled "Sabbath Memories," and introduces for chorus a verse of four well-known hymns to equally well-known tunes. This is described as "specially adapted for the P.S.A." and is dedicated to Rev. F. B. Meyer, B.A., at whose excellent P.S.A. it was first sung. Every similar organisation may introduce this piece with the confidence that it will minister both interest and profit. Both pieces are published by W. Paxton, 19, Oxford-street, W., or can be obtained post free for 6d. each from Mr. Partridge, Stockwell Orphanage, S.W.

THE PASTORS' COLLEGE.

The annual meeting of this valuable training institution, so dear to the heart of the late Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, was held last Thursday at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. The pastor, Mr. Thomas Spurgeon, presided at the evening meeting, and delivered a stirring and vigorous address.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Spurgeon, president of the College, gave an account of the institution and its work, also of the different settlements at home and abroad. He said there were in all twenty-three students settled during the past twelve months, making up the total number of men who have gone from the college into the work of the ministry 921. One hundred pastors and students had gone to their reward; 737 men were still actively engaged in the work of the Lord, 650 of whom were Baptist pastors, missionaries, or evangelists. The addition reported by the brethren during the years 1865 to 1894 were 181,197. Of these 108,660 were Baptists on profession of faith. The net increase to the Churches was 88,432.

Professor A. McCaig, M.A., gave an account of the doctrine taught, which he said was the same as that taught by the beloved founder, the late C. H. Spurgeon. Pastors Amos Stote, of Kansas City, J. Wilson, of Woolwich, and others addressed the meeting.

PRAYER UNION FOR LONDON.

The first annual meeting was held last Thursday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A., Morley Halls, Regent-street, Rev. G. H. C. Macgregor presiding.

Mrs. Vaughan Jackson, of Potter's Bar, founder and hon. sec. of the Union, in reading the report for the year, told how two years ago her thoughts were first directed towards the spiritual needs of the so-called "upper classes" of London. A few friends agreed to pray weekly for London, and a year later the "Prayer Union for London" was formed, the members of which are asked to pray every Thursday for our great metropolis. The annual subscription for expenses of printing, etc., is 1s., and any surplus is sent to "Friedenheim," the "Home for the Dying," in St. John's Wood. The number of members enrolled up to last Thursday was fifty-four.

Miss Habershon then gave an account of work among young ladies of the upper classes, and related some interesting experiences at young ladies' Bible readings which she had conducted, and emphasised the need of such Bible-readings, and the growing interest and marked success which had attended them.

Rev. G. H. C. Macgregor then gave a stimulating address from Col. iv. 12 on "Labouring in Prayer."

M. M. S.

DUBLIN VISITING MEDICAL MISSION.

We have started our mothers' and children's meetings, and though only about seven weeks opened, the poor people are learning their value. We have great reason for thankfulness for the wonderful way the Lord has protected all our workers (about twenty in all) from sickness, though we are surrounded by disease of almost every description. Our numbers continue to grow at the Dispensary. The Lord in his goodness allows us to see fruit for our labours in the salvation of many of our patients, both amongst those attending the Dispensary and those treated in the wretched rooms which we can scarcely call "homes" by our doctor and nurse. We greatly need help for our relief funds.

(Mrs.) E. Edith Figgis.

6, Simmons Court Villas, Donnybrook, Dublin.

BOARD SCHOOL CHILDREN'S FREE DINNER FUND.—During the past year 140,090 free meals have been given at centres and within schools under the auspices of this fund. Free meals are given only to the children of widows in great poverty and to the children of parents out of work. A head master, who has been at his post as teacher in a Board school in a poor neighbourhood for nineteen years, states that a large number of children in his school, need food who cannot pay even a halfpenny towards a meal, and that the Free Dinner is often their first meal in the day. The hon. sec. (Mrs. Pennington, 16, Crossfield-road, South Hampstead, N.W.) writes: "Earlier than we can venture, on account of inadequate funds, to resume our free meals, piteous incidents occur in the schools. A little child, one of six, her mother dead, her father out of work, was found crying on the school stairs one Tuesday morning lately; she had had nothing to eat since Sunday. We are sure that no one would willingly allow such child-suffering as this to continue." Copies of the report will be gladly sent, and contributions will be acknowledged and gratefully received by the hon. treasurer, Mr. H. E. Allen, 7, Palace Gardens Mansions, Linden Gardens, Bayswater, W.

DRIFTS AND CRIPPLES.

HELP IS GREATLY NEEDED

BY C. L. BOYER'S

DRIFT CHILDREN'S MISSION

AND

HOME CRIPPLES' BAND

To carry on the work among 500 CRIPPLED and the most Destitute Children in East London. SURGICAL AID LETTERS, CAST-OFF LINEN, INVALID CARRIAGES, MAIL CARTS, TOYS, SCRAP and PICTURE BOOKS, most acceptable.

Cheques and Postal Orders payable to

H. CLOGG, Esq., Hon. Treasurer.

C. H. T. ARCHER, Secretary.

OFFICE: 29, COTTAGE GROVE, BOW, LONDON, E.

GREAT DISTRESS in WHITECHAPEL.

Bread for Poor Jews.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED

To provide free meals, coal, and clothing to destitute Hebrew Christian Women and Children.

A CHRISTMAS TREAT

Will also be given to about 600 of our Band of Hope.

Clothing, etc., directed to H. EHRLICH, Hebrew Conference Hall, Old Montague-street, Whitechapel, E.; and Donations to J. A. CRUICKSHANK, Esq., Treasurer, 114, High-street, Whitechapel, E.

Destitute Children's Dinner Society.

THIS Old-Established Society is earnestly in need of Funds to carry on its work. Last season they gave 222,484 dinners. They have 52 rooms open.

Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Treasurer, LORD KINNAIRD, 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.; by the Secretary, H. MORTON CARR, Esq., 13, Ilminster-gardens, Lavender-hill, S.W.; or by the Bankers, Messrs. BARCLAY AND CO., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W

HOMES OF HOPE,

4, 5, and 6, Regent-square, Gray's-inn-road, London, W.C.

The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.

Special efforts are made on behalf of mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women before they become mothers as are unfitted from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.

The Committee need £300 to close the year free from debt. Contributions received by the Secretary, or may be sent to the Office of THE CHRISTIAN.

WM. HORNIBROOK, Secretary.

INTERNATIONAL BIBLE-READING ASSOCIATION.

Provides one of the best methods for daily Bible Reading, and has enrolled in all parts of the world. It is a valuable help to Sunday-School Teachers and Scholars, and is highly commended by Ministers. Full particulars post free from Mr. C. C. WATERS, 56, Old Bailey, London, E.C.

HALF-A-MILLION MEMBERS

COOK'S TOURS TO PALESTINE, THE HOLY LAND, EGYPT, ATHENS, ETC.

THOS. COOK and SON have arranged for a Special Select Personally-conducted Ninety-nine Days' Tour, leaving London January 21st next, visiting Palestine, the Holy Land (Jerusalem, Jericho, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Damascus, etc.), Alexandria, Cairo, Nile Trip to the First Cataract, Constantinople, Athens, etc. Also Shorter Tours leaving London February 11th, 21st, 25th, March 11th, 21st, and 27th.

Private arrangements also made for long or short Conducted and Independent Tours, available for one or more passengers, arranged to start by any route, at any date, time, or point, and for ascending the Nile to the First and Second Cataract in tourist steamers, fitted with every luxury. Pamphlet, with Map and Plans, 6d., post free.

THOS. COOK AND SON, Ludgate Circus, London; and Branches.

VOLUME I. FOR 1894

OF

The Morning Star

WILL BE PUBLISHED ON OR ABOUT

DECEMBER 10th.

Cloth, plain, 2s. Cloth, gilt, 3s.

We ask those friends who would like the volume to kindly order it AT ONCE. It will be sent post free to all who do so. It will contain a splendid chromo-lithographed

CHART OF THE DISPENSATIONS.

London: ALFRED HOLNESS, 14, Paternoster Row.
R. L. ALLAN, 143, Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow.

THE POOR IN BETHNAL GREEN. PARMITER STREET MISSION,

President, Sir C. R. LEIGHTON, Bart.

SOUP KITCHEN (twice weekly), and CHRISTMAS DINNERS

DONATIONS URGENTLY NEEDED for these, and the GENERAL FUND of the Mission; also Clothing, Hospital Letters, &c. PLEASE HELP US WITH CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Address, Mr. G. W. L. BARRACLOUGH, F.R.H.S., Hon. Sec., Parmiter-street Mission, Bethnal-green, E.; or, the Hon. Treasurer, SAMUEL WILLIAMS, Esq., Clarence Villa, King Edward-road, Hackney, N.E.

BREAD FOR STARVING JEWS.

Distress terrible: no food, no fire, illness and starvation. Kindly help us, as in former years, to alleviate the acute suffering by giving FREE MEALS, BREAD, SHELTER, COAL, SICK RELIEF, etc., also

XMAS TREATS TO HUNGRY CHILDREN.

Garments, please direct D. OPPENHEIM, City Mission to Jews, 119, Leman-street, E.

Donations, GEORGE WADE, Esq., Treasurer, 30, Schubert road, Putney, or may be sent to the office of THE CHRISTIAN.

SUFFERING CHILDHOOD!

Among the deeper shadows of our great city are the homes of our suffering little match-box makers, who, with their enfeebled mothers, are trying to earn a sorry pittance. Affliction and privation are daily attending their path, and most gladly would we pass on any help kindly sent. Contributions would be gratefully received by Mrs. F. A. BEVAN, 59, Princes Gate, South Kensington, S.W., by the Director, N.E. London G. Missions, WILLIAM CHORLEY, 6, Clephane Road, Canonbury, London, N., or may be sent to the Office of THE CHRISTIAN. Parcels to Somerset Hall, 205, Devon's Road, Bow Common, E.

THE

LONDON CITY MISSION

EMPLOYS

480 MISSIONARIES,

WHO VISIT SYSTEMATICALLY ALL THE YEAR ROUND

In the Family,
" Factory and Workshop,
" Public House,
" Hospital,
" Workhouse,
" Open Air,
Among the Homeless Poor,
Among Foreigners of all Nationalities, &c., &c.

More than 500,000 MEN regularly visited by the Missionaries.

FUNDS to carry on this most necessary work are urgently needed, and will be gratefully received by the TREASURER—F. A. BEVAN, ESQ.; or by the SECRETARIES { REV. T. S. HUTCHINSON, M.A., REV. ROBERT DAWSON, B.A.

OFFICES—3, BRIDEWELL PLACE, E.C.

BANKERS—Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, & Co., 54, Lombard Street, E.C.

LONDON MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Object.—To spread the knowledge of Christ in heathen lands.

Fields of Labour.—China, from 12 chief centres; North India, South India, and Travancore; Madagascar; South Africa; Central Africa; West Indies; Polynesia; New Guinea.

Centenary Fund.—A serious deficit at the end of the financial year, and the necessity of a much larger income if the 67 additional missionaries sent out are to be maintained and adequately provided with means for carrying on their work, have led to the opening of Centenary Fund, contributions to which are urgently needed; they may be forwarded to Rev. A. N. JOHNSON, M.A., Home Secretary, 14, Blomfield-street, London, E.C. c2958

LONDON CITY MISSION DISABLED MISSIONARIES' WIDOWS & ORPHANS FUND.

This fund was formed to give support to aged and infirm Missionaries who, after a life-long service—enriching the poorest of the poor with the unsearchable riches of Christ—are compelled to cease from their labours. Forty-two of these receive yearly grants of from £20 to £52, according to length of service. Fifty-six widows whose husbands died in the work—several from disease taken when visiting, and in some instances leaving families—receive grants of from £10 to £20 yearly. Among these true helpmeets to their husbands are those who work earnestly among the London poor. Five orphans of Missionaries who have lost both parents receive help during childhood.

Last year this fund was deficient by £349 7s. 6d.

The Committee earnestly ask you to cast generously into this part of our Lord's treasury, that these aged and worthy disciples and widows may for the present year have their needs supplied.

Treasurer: F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.
Secretary: J. M. WEYLLAND, The Mission House, 3, Bridewell-place, London, E.C.

POOR PARISH SURROUNDED BY THE VICTORIA AND ALBERT DOCKS.

Wholly Undenominational.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to AID the SUFFERING POOR in this large district, and to provide Dinners for HUNGRY CHILDREN. Clothing and Boots of every kind would be most acceptable. We have constant appeals for BREAD and COALS.

Rev. STEWART SMYTH, The Vicarage, St. Mark's, Victoria Docks, E.

OPERATIVE JEWISH CONVERTS' INSTITUTION.

Established by the Rev. Charles Simeon and others in 1831.

A Home for young Jews who are called to forsake all for Christ. They are fed, clothed, and lodged for three years, and they are taught trades. MONEY is needed for their support, and orders for PRINTING and BOOKBINDING are required for their training.

Number of admissions, 922.

Rev. H. OLIVER ALLBROOK, Principal, 12, Palestine-place, Cambridge Heath, London, E.

Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen

Patron: THE QUEEN.

The Council URGENTLY APPEAL for funds to carry on their work among Fishermen. The Society has TEN VESSELS stationed with the fishing fleet, and last year upwards of 1,593 religious services were held, chiefly on the high seas, and 9,160 cases medically or surgically treated on the Mission smacks. The MISSION to DEEP SEA FISHERMEN is the only Society carrying on systematic medical mission work amongst the thousands of fisher-folk on the Labrador coast, medical relief was afforded to at least 1,000 persons during the past season. Cheques, money orders, &c., should be crossed "Lloyd's Bank (Limited)," and be made payable to the hon. treasurer, Thos. B. Miller, Esq., or to

FRANCIS H. Wood, Secretary.

181, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

Our Little Jolly-boys' Home.

By J. W. C. FEGAN.

What! You have never heard of—did I say our Little Jolly-boys' Home? Of course I meant our Little Wanderers' Home—but really the wee fellows there now are such a plump, bright, merry crew that I believe if you saw them you would say Little Jolly-boys was their proper title.

As I have been staying at Greenwich on furlough lately, I have had the opportunity of paying a visit there almost daily. So I have come to know our Little Jolly-boys better than I have done since our Camping-Out in 1893, when we bathed together in the morning, played cricket matches in the afternoon, and bought tarts and sweets in the evening.

Well, while I am under this local inspiration, I want to describe this branch of our work in The Christian, so that by closer acquaintance my friends may have their sympathy more drawn out to these nestlings.

Just fifteen years ago (1879) about fifty smaller boys, from seven to twelve years of age, each with his kit in a bag, marched out of our Boys' Home, then at Deptford, to take possession of our Little Wanderers' Home, 137, Greenwich-road, which for some weeks had been in a state of preparation to receive them.

This unpretentious building, I may observe, was a boarding-school in those palmy days when the "royal borough of Greenwich" was a favourite suburb, and fashionable four-in-hands on a summer evening bore aristocratic coteries to whitebait dinners at the now moribund "Ship" or the quite dismantled "Trafalgar." The whole can lay no claim to symmetry or convenience. It is just a rabbit warren for stairs, passages, tunnels, etc.

We are fortunate now in having a couple as Superintendent and Matron who seem severally to possess all the main qualifications for the very difficult work of kindly and wisely training younger boys of the waif class.

This I can say for them—that through their kind care our small fry have plump bodies (I do like to see chubby cheeks), clean, healthy skins, and happy, contented, hopeful hearts—a result very much more difficult to attain than any would imagine who have not had practical experience with such material.

Now let me, before I go further, explain the peculiar difficulties of this sphere of service. The boys are young, and not only need the same kindly offices and help as other children of the same tender age, but more—for most of them have had no tidy nursery training, but have been reared without any regard to cleanliness or order. Many of them have had their little minds polluted by sights of vice and crime, and ribald and blasphemous talk. Many, again, have inherited vitiated constitutions from corrupt parents, with predispositions to various diseases of mind and body. Remember there are seventy such to be cared for, dealt with, borne with unceasingly—and you will agree with me, I am sure, that the post is one that calls for much grace and method, patience and push, cheeriness and firmness.

We have, too, a God-given schoolmaster for this strange colony of cherubs and renegades in Mr. Caselton, who was assistant schoolmaster at headquarters till I thought I discerned in him traits that would make him a very successful teacher where an ability to come down to little minds and make allowance for warped dispositions is so valuable.

So much for the building and the staff, now for our Little Jolly-boys themselves.

Let me introduce the head boy—Bob Francis—a typical "Little Jolly-boy." If you saw his fat, rosy cheeks and merry smile that discloses such a beautifully white set of teeth, you would understand how hard it is now to think of him as a "Little Wanderer." Poor Bob had a younger brother here, but about three years ago the Good Shepherd gathered him from a bed of pain to his own bosom.

Here is a boy of quite a different type. At first I kept him at Southwark, for he was like the son whose father in the Gospels said of him, "Ofttimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water." Poor child! with adverse heredity and evil environment, what hope for him? Now he was in the height of passion—now in the depths of despair. It was rather embarrassing for me, as he was known as one of my "pals"—and I felt like a judge with an habitual criminal as his chum! In these cases one has to remember the injunction in Jude, "Of some have compassion, making a difference."

Lots of lies and other sins I had just to pass over till I could find some foundation to work upon. With him, as with so many others of his class, the element of hope seemed to be that love was quite an unknown influence. This is one reason why a bad boy of the neglected class is so much more easily reclaimed than a bad boy of a more favoured class. What wins the one with its new charm is often translated by the other into mere licence to further transgression. For them the injunction goes on—"and others save with fear." Poor Knowles has responded bravely to the interest taken in him, and since he was transferred to Greenwich has done splendidly, and made his way into Squad I. I am quite proud of my "pal" now.

Well, here's another character. My prophecy of him is that "he will never die in his bed." Unselfish, affectionate, and frank to a degree, but mischievous as a monkey, and restless as a buccaneer, I shall always expect to hear of him by-and-by in connection with some startling event—tragic, heroic, comic, Quixotic. "Tom Tough" is his nickname. He was really a desperately wicked boy when he was sent to us from Cheltenham, but I quite believe now he wants to be an honourable boy, although still a shocking "pickle."

But "Tom Toughs" often make front-rank men for God, and I hope this one will yet manfully serve the Captain of his salvation.

Again, my little friend Campin is quite the opposite. He had a worthy but very poor mother. His little disposition is naturally good and his character has always been exemplary. But what a body! Slightly paralysed—not able to articulate plainly—hardly able to lift his feet! His great need in life was "grub." Now I wish some who are more "spiritual" than their Lord, and pooh-pooh "philanthropy," and forget how while He ministered the Word of Life He had compassion on the multitude, and fed the hungry, healed the sick, and felt for every human woe—and just because this tender sympathy was so different to the cold superiority of the Rabbis "the common people heard Him gladly"—I say I wish they could watch the blood flowing into the veins, the flesh coming on the bones, the strength gathering in the limbs of a child like this, who will by-and-by have to fight the battle of life like the rest of us, that they might be ashamed of their forbidding, begrudging words.

If you laugh at young Barnett I must not blame you, for I always laugh when I see him myself. He was a poor, wee starveling, who always looked as if he had just dropped from the clouds, and had not recovered the shock. His nose is all on one side through being punched by an elder brother; on his forehead is a big cicatrix where Barnett struck himself in his first efforts to use a toy spade as a pickaxe—for he has only a little spark of mind, which we are carefully nursing. He came under my notice specially when Camping-Out in 1893, through my observing his abject terror about bathing in the sea. I let him off entirely for some days, and coddled him up a bit, and he followed me like a shadow. He soon began to feel confidence in my pilotage, and joined hands with the other mannikins as we ducked under the breaking billows. This little experience put Barnett on his feet, and he has quite blossomed out since. However, he still has tragic reminiscences of his first dip, and persists that "the Guv'nor saved me from bein' drownded."

Now, Sayers, you can imagine, is a bright capable, pleasant boy. He is an orphan. His father a bricklayer's labourer, was killed about four years ago through falling off a high ladder up which he was carrying a load of bricks. His poor mother was terribly affected by this, and subsequent hardships, and pined away with consumption about two years after. Her only means of employment was sorting paper, for which she was paid 10s. a week. Out of this she paid 2s. 6d. rent, leaving only 7s. 6d. to provide everything for herself and family.

Jimmy Peters is the champion athlete. He seems constructed differently to other humans—all joints and springs inside—resilient as indiarubber in some parts, hard as ebony (and nearly as black) in others.

At our athletic sports in the spring Jimmy was victorious in each event for Little Wanderers' Home. But his best performance that day we all felt was when he gallantly gave up one of his prizes to another fellow who had been his close rival.

The fact is, Jimmy was trained in a circus, and was a tiny bare-backed rider, when he met with an accident, and was deserted with a broken arm by the troupe to whom his mother had transferred him, although his father met with a shocking death in a lion's cage. A kind lady sent him to us from Dorsetshire, and has cared for him since.

I might introduce to you some poor little fellows who come under quite a different category. They are "England's Shame"—the starved, tortured, maimed offspring of inhuman parents, most of them rescued in the first instance through the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, with whose work I have the most heartfelt sympathy.

* * * * *

Now surely some with dear little jolly-boys of their own—or perhaps only the treasured memory of faces that are gone, and voices that are hushed—at any rate, some who love such for his dear sake, who when here, said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me," will feel their hearts drawn to these dear small boys—precious to Him as those by your own fireside, for whom you plan, and pray so solicitously.

Some loving fingers once made Him a coat, "without seam, woven from the top throughout." Her name we know not, but who would not give every earthly possession for the honour that will be hers when that act of devotion is rewarded before the throne of God and of the Lamb? Yet does He not count that what we do for his sake, we do to Him? Will He not by-and-bye remember and reward even "the cup of cold water"?

Here are these seventy cared for in Christ's name.

(A) They want winter clothing—a suit, two shirts, two pairs of socks—for each, costing together about £1. Who will send the wherewithal for twenty, ten, five, or one as "God hath prospered him"?

(B) They want boots. Each pair costs us 5s. For £15 all those little feet may be kept warm and dry through the winter. Ah me! how differently we shall see things when we look back upon them from the hills of eternity! O for the wise heart to "provide bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not."

(C) They want a library and some games. I have had a room prepared for the library and for the boys' own little prayer meetings—but we want a substantial lock-up book-case (about £5) and about 200 books. Let me see

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 65 outfits ... | at £1 | £65 |
| 60 prs. boots ,, | 5s. | 15 |
| Bookcase ... ... | | 5 |
| Books ... ... | | 15 |
| | | £100 |

What an investment!

What "Little Jolly-boys" indeed they will be if this plea strikes a responsive chord in some hearts! Those clothes, those boots, those books and games—when they arrive! If you want a thrilling sight come down and see our "Little Jolly-boys" crowding round with shrill cheers, dancing and embracing one another, lifting up "Little Jumbo" to have the first pair of boots, or the first peep at some pictures—and you will say with me, "Our Little Jolly-boys! God bless them."

J. W. C. FEGAN.

The Boys' Home, 95, Southwark-street, London, S.E.

[ADVT.]

THE Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Lindeck, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Gotenburg, in Sweden, sends the gratifying intelligence that the building fund of his Association amounts at present to about 100,000 francs, and the number of members to 350.

The Trowbridge Association has experienced a good time since the recent combined jubilee conference held there September 25. Thirty members and associates have since been enrolled, and four conversions have resulted from the week of prayer. An excellent winter programme has been arranged, amongst the lecturers being Archdeacon Sinclair.

A member of one of the Associations in Rome, Mr. Pirazzini, has left for Springfield (Massachusetts), where, thanks to the support of Mr. J. Stokes, of New York, he will study at the school of the general secretaries, and will then become the secretary of the Central Association, which, it is hoped, will be formed in Rome by the fusion of the different Circoli of the churches.

The Associations of the Berlin district have taken upon themselves an important work, which consists in facilitating for their less favoured members a longer or shorter stay in certain localities for the recovery of their health. This work, modestly started by a few members at their own expense, soon justified the wisdom of its founders, and the district committee has decided to go on with it according to the measure of its resources.

The annual meeting of the Sheffield Y.M.C.A. Lodging House Mission was held on Monday week, when a very satisfactory report was read by Mr. A. Shipman, the hon. sec., who was re-elected for the year. The report shows that the Gospel has been preached in the houses to 1200 souls; tracts, books, and Gospels being distributed largely Prayer meetings have been held previous to visiting the common kitchens week by week, and many have testified to having received great blessing. Mr. A. Thackery was elected as president.

There is an interesting Association building in Bohemia connected with a remarkable historical reminiscence. In the little village of Hussineck may be seen a barn in a good state of preservation, which is the place in which John Huss, the great forerunner of the Reformation, was born. This barn has been lately purchased by Mr. A. Adlof, president of the Prague Association, and fitted up for the Association. Such an Association building with its historical souvenirs, though in the form of a simple barn, will awaken the interest of Christians in every land.

On Thursday some 200 young men gathered at the Stratford Conference Hall to meet Mr. W. H. Roberts (Y.M.C.A. travelling secretary for Devon and Cornwall). After tea and coffee, the company adjourned to the Lower Hall, where, after a hearty address of welcome had been given by Messrs. W. H. Seagram and Butlin, Mr. Roberts sang a solo, and then gave an earnest and powerful address, dwelling on some of the changed characters of men that he had lately met in his work. Mr. Seagram also made an earnest appeal for decision this year, so as to insure a truly Happy New Year.

The half-yearly meeting of the National Council took place at Exeter Hall on Friday, and was largely and influentially attended by representative men from all parts of England and Ireland. The business was of a most practical character, and the discussion useful and interesting. Mr. R. D. Pringle, of Walsall, was formally appointed general secretary of the Bombay City Association, and was wished a hearty God-speed in relation to his future work. An increase of some fifteen associations in the English Union was reported for the past year. In a sympathetic and appreciative letter the Bishop of Carlisle raised the question of its being the sphere of the Association to promote general missions. This matter, to which prolonged attention was given, was referred to the executive for further consideration. It was urged by many experienced Association workers that the Y.M.C.A. should confine its religious operations to young men, but there were also many who emphasised the great value of an occasional evangelistic mixed meeting, whilst it was conceded on all sides that much of the social work of the Association might with advantage be extended to young women.

---

BLACKGANG MISSION, I.W.—The twenty-first anniversary was held on Tuesday last, when, in addition to local helpers, some friends of the Mission from other parts of the island were present. Mr. James Newman, of Sandown, presided, and an address was given by Mr. W. G. Morley, followed by numerous testimonies. Reference was made to the past history of the work, and the great blessing that had resulted from the labours of the late Mr. Reade and members of his family, as well as the late Miss Hamilton. Sympathy was expressed for Mrs. Christopher Smith, who now takes charge of the work.

THE Y.W.C.A.

A new branch has been opened by Lord Kinnaird, at Lavender Hill, Clapham, with very encouraging prospects of success. Miss G. Marion Webber is hon. secretary.

At the University of California, Berkeley, the work of the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. is very closely connected. They meet in the same building and have one secretary, Mr. David Burrows, Pomona College. The two Associations work much along the same lines, uniting for socials, lectures, and other aggressive work.

One hundred delegates from the Y.W.C.A. centres of Kansas, U.S.A., recently met in convention at Ottawa. A variety of practical papers were read, and addresses delivered. The pastors of the various churches preached special sermons to young women at the morning services, while the pulpits were filled by convention speakers in the evening.

Miss Marrable, Hon. Secretary of the Irish Division, calls attention to the Deaconess and Missionary Training Institute, 31, Mount Pleasant Square, Dublin. Deaconesses have proceeded from the home this autumn to Persia, India, and China. There is great need for mission workers in Dublin as well as abroad. Several vacancies for residents will occur in January next.

The Y.W.C.A. in York, Pennsylvania, has a library of over 500 volumes, many of them standard works. Daily and weekly newspapers and periodicals are provided, and are eagerly sought by the girls. Educational and industrial classes are conducted by a corps of volunteer teachers. Every Tuesday a musical evening is held, when the rooms are full to overflowing. Scores of girls have been aided in finding situations.

The Park Mission Lodge was removed in June last, from 13, Duke-street to 9, Taunton-place, Regent's Park, in order that a larger family might be accommodated. One hundred and forty have passed through the Lodge since last November, and steps are being taken to arrange for them a Christmas treat. Gifts of food, of clothes, new or old (especially boots, which are greatly needed), will be thankfully received by the honorary superintendent, Miss Hay Chapman.

---

N.E. LONDON GOSPEL MISSION.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting of the above Mission was held recently at Earlham Hall, near Dalston Junction, Mr. John McCall presiding. There was a large attendance.

From the statement made to the meeting by Mr. Chorley, in whose care the administration has principally been since 1870, favourable mention was made of the progress of the mission at each branch of the work. Special mention was made of the Home of Rest at Lancing, where the total number of visitors, old and young, had exceeded one hundred at the time for the busier portion of the season, or 615 for the three summer months, while the number during the entire year had largely increased. A newly-added set of rooms had provided accommodation for men and boys which had proved most helpful. From the financial statement we learnt that the income for the past year had been within a few pounds of £2800, and the expenditure side gave a balance in hand of £4 17s. 5d.

The secretary's statement was followed by addresses by representatives from the East End branches, from which we learnt good things about the progress of the Gospel in districts where drink and indifference, coupled with Romanism and Sacerdotalism, ran riot. Definite salvation work was reported, and instances of a happy kind were not wanting to support the testimony. Among other pleasing features mentioned was that there are now six lady helpers working among the poor, both at Bow Common and the Isle of Dogs; four out of these six ladies were wholly or in part self-supporting. The mothers' meeting in the former place numbers over 140 members.

Happy mention was made of the work among the match factory girls, the gutter lads, and the young. Communications should be addressed to Mr. W. Chorley, 6, Clephane-road, Canonbury, N.

---

THE ANTI-OPIUM CRUSADE.—A services of public meetings are being held in the North of England by Mr. S. C. Kanaga Ratnam and Rev. A. W. Prautch, Among the places visited have been Carlton, Northallerton, Middleton, and Stockton-on-Tees. The meeting at Stockton was held in the Exchange Hall, nearly 1000 persons attending; the Mayor, Mr. J. Samuel, J.P., presided, supported by the ministers and influential citizens. A strong resolution against the opium traffic was passed. The following other dates are fixed: Jarrow, Dec. 13; South Shields, Dec. 14; Bishop Auckland, Dec. 15 to 17; Newcastle, Dec. 18; Carlisle, Dec. 19; Penrith, 20th; Kirkby Stephen, 21st; Barnard Castle, etc.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

WELCOME TO DR. CLARK.

On Tuesday last week, members of the London district met in large numbers in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Newington Butts, S.E., to welcome the founder of the Society, Rev. Dr. Clark, and Mrs. Clark, on their fourth visit to England. Having lately passed through a severe illness, Dr. Clark was greeted with great joy.

In the morning 150 London ministers attended a breakfast and conference. Rev. J. B. Morgan, Chairman of Council, presided, and Dr. Clark spoke on the work as it affects the pastor of the church. Rev. T. Spurgeon having expressed his pleasure in making the acquaintance of Dr. Clark, a number of pastors bore testimony to the good results from Christian Endeavour Societies in their churches.

The event of the day, however, was the great gathering of Endeavourers in the Tabernacle in the evening, when they came from all parts to testify their esteem for the honoured visitors. Mr. Charles Waters, hon. sec. of the Christian Endeavour Council, presided. In his opening remarks he referred to the rapid progress of the movement in this country since Dr. Clark's first visit in 1888. There are now 1989 societies, 130 of them having been registered in the month of November.

Rev. J. G. Train, of Norwood, gave the address of welcome, and said how impressed he was by the measure in which the movement embodied ideas that were distinctly Scriptural. The word Endeavour speaks of effort and aim, of persistency and humility. He believed the societies of Christian Endeavour were doing good to the Church as a whole in the way of calling attention to the possibility and the necessity of Christian effort not merely among the young, but by the young.

Following this address thirteen representatives of the various districts of London presented brief but well-conceived words of welcome. Mrs. Clark delivered a very interesting address on the work among children, pleading for Junior Endeavour Societies, in order that from early years the children should be trained for Jesus.

Dr. Clark was greeted with much enthusiasm. He congratulated Endeavourers on the great advance in the country during the past year, and spoke of the development of the movement in so many unlikely places, saying that in one of the Japanese ships which took part in the battle of Yalu there was a Society of Christian Endeavour. In America the movement had developed a great desire for a purer political atmosphere and an earnest crusade on behalf of temperance. A true missionary enthusiasm had also been made especially prominent, and many young people were saying, "I am ready." There had also been evolved a greater spirit of fellowship of Christians, differing in name, but all servants of the same Lord.

---

The Gifford Hall Mission C.E. Society has voted 10s. to the Mission fund for providing 350 poor old people with a Christmas dinner.

Nearly four thousand Endeavourers crowded the great Town Hall at Sydney at the consecration meeting of the recent New South Wales convention.

At a recent denominational gathering in Ohio, one pastor got together a number of young people, talked with them, interesting them in Christian Endeavour, and sent them home with such a purpose to enlist others in the same cause that nineteen new societies were started.

The tenth annual Conference of the Connecticut C.E. Union has been held in New Haven. Among the notable addresses were those of Dr. R. R. Meredith and Mr. W. H. Beach, of Jersey City, in which he described the recent suppression of the race track gambling in New Jersey. There are now 514 societies in Connecticut, with 35,300 members and twenty-four local Unions.

---

IRISH NOTES.

Evangelistic meetings have been held in Island Magee Methodist Church, by Rev. Henry Ball, and in Clonmel Methodist Church by Rev. John Good.

The Dublin Methodist Colportage Society are doing a good work. During the year the agent sold 800 Rhemish Testaments, about 1500 portions, and a large quantity of religious publications of various kinds, besides visiting many people in their homes and praying with them.

At a reception given to about 400 young men in Percy-street Hall, Belfast, on Tuesday week, by Rev. Henry and Mrs. Montgomery, the establishment of a large central hall in connection with the forward movement in Presbyterianism was most heartily approved of. Within the last few weeks twelve new branches of the Christian Endeavour Society have been formed in Ireland.

Letters to the Editor.

"BELIEVERS IN A DILEMMA."

Sir,—I am in full sympathy with those who are "out in the cold," though, by God's merciful Providence, not in that position myself when at home. It is different when, as last summer, I am taking holiday, e.g., when in the Parish Church, the only one available, there is besides sacramental doctrine in the pulpit, a mode of conducting the service which is distracting and even ludicrous, as in the attempt of the vicar to monotone by continual use of a tuning fork! At such times the question cannot but arise, "What should I do? What could I do if I lived in this village?"

For one thing, I should certainly encourage any godly layman who, as there, would lend a large and comfortable room in his house on a Sunday afternoon for an evangelistic service. But such rooms are not often met with, and even in these exceptional cases where there is a room, and willingness to have it used once a week for a service, there are many other requisites which are not commonly at command. Still, even when there is the room and the disposition to lend it, and the ability to supply whatever else is needful, "out in the cold" is a fair description of the condition of many Evangelical Churchmen in such places, and of many others belonging to other churches. This, alas! must be borne in mind.

"Out in the cold" is the condition of many who are "by choice and conviction" members of other churches than the Church of England. What, then, should be done? What is possible under such circumstances? This is a question that ought to be seriously considered, and may, perhaps, be best considered by those who are not yet in the dilemma, i.e., by those who are at present in the enjoyment of an Evangelical ministry. Would it not be well for the Evangelical ministers themselves to teach their followers by anticipation what they ought to do under such circumstances? Would it not be well if Evangelical ministers would teach their people how much they can do without them, without even their superintendence?

In family prayer, for instance, or even in "saying grace" before and after meals, the Evangelical minister might take the opportunity of teaching the important anti-sacerdotal lesson that "every man (and woman) is priest in his (or her) own house." But, again, would it not be well for Evangelical ministers to teach their people that they ought, and, if necessary, by leaving them occasionally, let them find out that they can have a Bible reading and a prayer-meeting without their help? It is not to be supposed that the Bereans asked the permission of Paul and Silas, or waited till they, or one of them at least, could preside before the daily searching of the Scriptures, to see whether what the Apostles had said was true.

Your correspondent, "Out in the Cold" might do worse, if when "two or three" have heard what they think a bad sermon, or better still, if after every sermon, good and bad, they would meet together and take the text as a guide and search the Scriptures, as to what the truth is upon the subject. Once more, would it not be possible for "two or three" like-minded to agree together to join one of the many Bible unions, reading the same chapter, and marking day by day something in their chapters that they have found profitable to themselves, and then meeting together at each other's houses, once a week, to tell each other their experiences of the Spirit's teachings? I have tried this simple way of using Mr. Richardson's plan of Bible reading, and can confidently recommend it to any who are "out in the cold."

I will make but one more suggestion. It is this, that those who are like-minded should agree to meet, if possible, but, if not, to pray every day, at a certain time, using for their guidance, after the manner of the Evangelical Alliance, different comprehensive subjects for the different days of the week. I have such a list before me. Monday: The ministry of the Word. Tuesday: Family life, young men and young women who are from home. Wednesday. Troubles of mind, body, and estate. Thursday: Missions at home and abroad, Jew and Gentile. Friday: Nations, our own and other. Saturday: Schools and colleges.

I venture to suggest these two ways in which, by united prayer and by united Bible reading, those who, though they are members of Evangelical Churches, find themselves "out in the cold" might find some comfort and edification. I could name other ways, but these two are better than any other. —I am, yours faithfully, Mal. iii. 16.

---

The October "Quarterly Report" of the Evangelical Protestant Union, reporting the sixteenth annual conference held recently at Manchester, gives a thoughtful paper by the late Hon. P. Carteret Hill, in which it is shown that while licensed clergymen are fettered in their action, complete liberty is enjoyed by laymen. Therefore, "in parishes where the Gospel light is darkened by Ritualism and Romish teaching, the godly members of the churches whose souls are daily vexed by its unlawful doings should erect or hire halls or rooms as a rallying point for scattered Protestant Churches. At the services let the prayers from the Prayer Book, as well as extempore petitions, be used, and God will own and bless the gatherings of his people. In most parishes a Protestant layman can be found who can deliver an address on the Atonement or other fundamental doctrine of the Gospel, or read a sermon by some well-known and sound Evangelical minister. Godly laymen and their families will be refreshed and edified by such Scriptural services, and will thank God for the opportunities and means of grace afforded them." Copies of the "Quarterly," giving the full text of the paper, may be had, 2½d. post free, from Rev. J. B. Waddington, Low Moor, Clitheroe, Lancashire.

THE LONDON AGED CHRISTIAN SOCIETY.

Prebendary Webb-Peploe writes:—"May I lay before your readers the urgent needs of a Society which probably few of them ever heard of?

"Established sixty-nine years ago, the Aged Christian Society has never pushed itself forward, but has worked in a quiet, unostentatious way among the aged poor of the household of faith, who have by circumstances of life found themselves in their old age in the metropolis, natives of nearly every county in the United Kingdom being found on the books. 1272 old Christians have participated in its benefits, very many of whom, but for its aid, must have died in the workhouse.

"At the present time there are 172 pensioners, many ninety years old, who have enjoyed the pension and other gifts, coals, etc., for nearly twenty years. As may be imagined, the original nominators of a large proportion of these old people are dead, and they have been unable to obtain new subscribers, so that the whole burden has fallen on the Society, who for 110 pensioners only receive £160 13s., leaving £449 7s. to be collected yearly. Up to the present this has been done without encroaching on our very small capital, the interest, (6 per cent.) of which is just sufficient to meet the working expenses. Thus the whole of the funds subscribed go to the pensioners.

"To avoid crippling the society by realising capital, the committee urgently solicit for the Lord's aged servants. The secretary is Col. Hamilton Northcote, 32, Sackville-street, W., who will thankfully acknowledge the same."

---

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For special evangelistic meetings next Saturday and Sunday at Hurstpierpoint Mission Hall, by Mrs. S. J. Alexander.—For special services to be held on Sunday evenings in the Assembly Rooms, High-road, Leytonstone, conducted by Messrs. Borton Bros., commencing Sunday, December 16.

TIPTOE, HANTS.—Rev. G. R. Tanswell, the Manse, Milford-on-Sea, Lymington, Hants, reports continued advance in the work of grace at Tiptoe, referred to in our columns last October. There have been additional decisions for Christ, and backsliding believers have been restored. The Sunday services and prayer meetings show a largely increased attendance.

THE VICTORIA INSTITUTE held the opening meeting of its thirtieth session a few days ago. Mr. T. G. Pinches, of the British Museum, gave an interesting sketch of the results to science of the work of the Geneva Orientalist Congress, specially referring to the section of Semitic languages. In doing so he took up various points connected with Babylonian inscriptions and bearing directly or indirectly on Bible history. His address was followed by an interesting discussion, in which it was pointed out that investigations of the records of the past, as found in the buried cities of the East, were beset with difficulties. We had up to the present so scant an acquaintance with the history of early times, and the language spoken, that conclusions come to by one person were abandoned by another; in fact, we were but on the threshold of that knowledge which was really necessary to enable one properly to understand the history of early times.

A NORTHUMBERLAND MISSION.

The Chatton Presbyterian Church has been having refreshing times from the Lord through a mission, lasting a month, conducted by Mr. J. de Burgh Rochfort, of the Evangelisation Society. The first week's meetings were held in the church, and were well attended. Then a week was devoted to the farmhouses round about — sometimes the houses were packed with eager and attentive congregations, and always there were goodly numbers present. By the kind permission of the Earl and Countess of Tankerville, meetings were held in the Chillingham Castle servants' hall, and proved deeply interesting.

The last week of the Mission the meetings were held in the church, and it was seen how much the district had been stirred, as night after night large congregations attended, and the spiritual power in the meetings deepened. During this week Mr. Rochfort and the minister (Rev. W. Thorp) had the assistance of Lord Bennet on several occasions, as well as other friends. On the last Sunday evening a number of persons, including office-bearers, members, etc., professed to have received blessing. This testimony was given in public before friends and neighbours. Others privately expressed their indebtedness to the evangelist.

THE BEDFORD INSTITUTE.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the First Day School and Home Mission Association was held on the 7th inst. at Devonshire House, Bishopsgate-street, under the presidency of James Henry Barber, of Sheffield. An abstract of the reports sent in from the seven branches was read by the secretary, G. Armitage, giving a cheering account of the work as a whole. In some instances the number of attenders was lessened, but the losses were almost made up by accessions in others, the chief factor in the first being the removal of inhabitants from the town localities to the suburbs, in consequence of the pulling-down of premises. Notwithstanding, the figures in total were but little behind those of last year, and were as follows:—First Day schools, boys, girls, men, and women, 3418; religious meetings, 1660; temperance meetings, 1950; Bands of Hope, 1824; evening schools, 392; mothers' meetings, 979; children's meetings, 261. Total, 11,190. Addresses were delivered by the chairman, Rev. W. H. Harwood, and Dr. H. Newman. The work of the association, which is carried on by the Society of Friends, comprises religious meetings and schools for adults, as well as boys and girls, educational classes, etc., in six districts in the East-end of London, the seventh being opened two years ago at Barking, in Essex.

---

MISSION TO DEEP SEA FISHERMEN.—Last year a "Helpers' Union" was started in connection with this Mission with the object of endowing a "cot" in each hospital in Labrador, and providing warm clothing. The annual subscription is only 1s. I shall be happy to send information provided a stamped envelope is enclosed.

Louisa M. Harris.

Valley View, Clevedon, Som.

EAST LONDON SEWING CLASS FUND.—During the past year this class has been held regularly at Sidney-street, Mile End. In the winter months it consisted of about fifty women, most of whom were either widows or the bread-winners of their family. Mrs. van Erckelens still superintends the work, and visits the women in their own homes. The balance-sheet shows a deficit of £39. More than the amount subscribed is paid in small weekly sums to the women. It is hoped that it will be possible to hold during this winter larger classes than last, as it is a great hardship on the women to turn them away when they have been accustomed to receive one shilling per week in years gone by. Communications may be addressed to Lady A. Hobart, 63, St. George-road, S.W.

MADAGASCAR.—A correspondent writes:—"Some time ago, you will remember, the Pope was very busy sending new bishops to different parts of the world, and among others there was one named for the island of Mauritius, and in his episcopate comes the island of Madagascar. I was told at the time that the person appointed for that post was one of the leading Jesuits of Maynooth. I settled in my mind that we should not wait long before seeing results from such a nomination. Nor have I been deceived. As in the Franco-Prussian War, the Jesuits and Church of Rome were the hidden instigators, so now, it will again be found, they are at the bottom of this Madagascar conspiracy. It is the same agency that framed the dastardly Gunpowder Plot of November 5. Wherever the carcase is, there will the eagles be drawn together; so wherever the saints are, there Rome sends her eagles. Christ came to destroy the work of the devil; anti-Christ comes to destroy the works of Christ."

OBITUARY.

DR. W. G. T. SHEDD.

The death is announced of Dr. W. G. T. Shedd, one of the most influential preachers and teachers of the United States. He was for many years Professor of Church History at Andover; but his work was dogmatic throughout. Dr. D. S. Schaff says in the New York Evangelist:—"He quoted Scripture constantly. Whatever might be thought of his deductions, Scripture was always underneath. To the Scripture statements he added the language of the Westminster Standards. His system did not suit all his hearers in the class-room. His statement of the doctrine of the divine decrees was mercilessly consequential. It was hard for the natural or the sanctified mind to bear. Plied with questions, which at times seemed likely to retard all progress, Dr. Shedd held his ground, never quailing and never making manifest any asperity. He always had an explanation."

MR. HUGH L. HUGHES.

This brother, recently deceased, was for thirty years a true follower and servant of Jesus Christ, and deservedly esteemed and beloved by all who knew him. First at Jewin-crescent and afterwards at Union Chapel, Islington, he rendered invaluable service, being as unostentatious and kindly in his bearing towards all, as he was loyal in faith and service to his Lord and Master. In about two weeks he passed from the active service of the Church on earth to his rest and reward above. The presence of Jesus was most real to him in his short illness, and his patience was as marked as his end was triumphant. He leaves a widow (Mrs. Watts-Hughes), whose tender sympathy for the poor and suffering is as marked as was his own. The interment was at Abney Park Cemetery on Saturday, December 1, many Welsh and English friends being present to mourn his loss.

MR. H. S. BROCKWAY, EDINBURGH.

This promising student of the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society has died suddenly after a short illness. His father is a missionary of the L.M.S. in Madagascar, and it was his intention to have joined his father at his work in the foreign field as a medical missionary. The loss of this earnest young life, given to Christ, is a great blow to his fellow-students, by whom he was greatly loved and trusted. He was living at the dispensary in the Cowgate, in the thick of medical and mission work, when a sudden illness seized him. After lingering for four days, he quietly passed away in the Students' Ward of the Royal Infirmary. The coffin was first brought to the Magdalene Chapel, where he had so often proclaimed Christ, and after a short, impressive service, conducted by Dr. Adamson, was taken to the cemetery, being followed by a large representation of students and friends. Two of his brothers are working with his father in Madagascar, a third is a missionary in India, while his sister, who is in this country, nursed him during his illness.

MRS. HUGH STOWELL PHILLIPS.

This devoted worker has laid down her life in China. It is now five years since, as Miss Minnie Apperson, she landed in Foochow as a missionary of the C.E.Z.M.S. All who came in contact with her admired the simplicity and beauty of her Christian character. Gifted and talented as she was, in a remarkably short time she was enabled to get a workable knowledge of the Chinese language. Two years ago Mrs. Phillips and her husband were called to occupy Kien Yang, a promising outpost of the C.M.S. Mission in the Fuhkien province. A season of anxiety, violence, and compulsory flight followed. The privations endured at this time and subsequently doubtless undermined a somewhat fragile constitution, so that her life was despaired of in the summer. She rallied for a while, but on November 17, a telegram was received couched in those expressive but too familiar words, "Minnie asleep."

She has gone in to see the King, but the memory of her fragrant and unselfish life remains with us, and will continue to be an inspiration to many.

REV. DAVID WILSON, D.D., LIMERICK.

Extreme regret is felt throughout a great part of Ireland at the death of Rev. Dr. Wilson, Presbyterian minister of Limerick, who has passed away, aged seventy-five years. Deceased had spent fifty-one years in the ministry, and of these almost fifty were spent in Limerick, where his pastorate extended over an area eighty miles in length and forty in breadth. For years he conducted five services every Sabbath, often journeying long distances to preach to soldiers and others. He took an active interest in home and foreign missions, and in educational matters, and for two years he filled the position of moderator of the General Assembly. As a preacher he was thoroughly Evangelical, and his sympathies were with all movements calculated to develop the spiritual life. In many ways, too, he was instrumental in bringing the Gospel before his Roman Catholic neighbours. Ten days before his death he occupied his own pulpit, so that he may be said to have died in harness. During his long life he maintained a blameless reputation, and finished his course amidst the love and sincere esteem of all who knew him.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. William Forbes, who has been giving addresses in the metropolis, began on Monday a mission at Denmark-road Chapel, Ramsgate.

Therfield, Herts.—A week of special evangelistic services has recently been held in the Congregational Church, Therfield, Herts, by Rev. J. C. Evans.

Surrey Villages.—Mr. W. Day, aided by Mrs. Simcoe and Miss L. Wallis, is labouring in various outlying villages in Surrey. On Sunday week these workers had good services in Bagshot, both in the Music Hall and in the Wesleyan Chapel.

Mr. William Grove has been holding special services in the Mission Hall, Templemore Avenue, Belfast, and God is owning the work. Some great rough men have been broken down under a sense of sin, and have found rest in Christ.

Mr. Ernest Bailey, of the Evangelisation Society, has concluded a fortnight's special mission at the United Methodist Free Church, Timsbury, Bath. He is now holding a mission in connection with the same church at Farmborough. At both places there has been much blessing.

Eastbourne.—A week's Gospel temperance mission was lately held here. The missioner, Mr. E. Warland, of Bristol, gave stirring addresses to large audiences. The number of new pledges amounted to nearly 400. Besides this, a deep spiritual work was the result of the mission.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Alexander have held a twelve days' open-air and indoor mission at Popham-road, New North-road, N. Interest has been awakened, and many professed decision for Christ, while workers received much encouragement. Prayer is asked for the work in this locality.

Mr. W. R. Lane is conducting a very encouraging mission at Ramsgate, it having been found desirable to engage the theatre (holding nearly two thousand people) for the last five nights. Prayer is asked for a special manifestation of the Divine presence at the concluding service to-night (Thursday).

Clifden, Connemara.—A mission has been carried on here during the past three weeks by two English ladies, Miss Scoones and Miss Barbour. Persons who had not attended a meeting for the past eleven years have attended the mission, including Roman Catholics. Many received distinct blessing during the mission.

Mr. W. G. Carr has concluded a series of meetings at Admiral-street Mission, Liverpool. The meetings have been largely attended, running as high as eleven hundred people. Mr. Carr's teaching was principally upon The Tabernacle and its spiritual lessons, together with life in Christ. Mr. Carr now goes to Clifton and other places until after the holidays, when he goes to London.

The Brothers Weaver have concluded a five days' mission at Burgh-by-Sands, Cumberland. The attendance was very large. The presence of the Spirit was very manifest, and at the after-meetings much good work was done. Believers were revived, and many anxious ones took Christ as their Saviour. Will your readers follow these brethren in prayer to St. George's Tabernacle, Glasgow? P. J. D.

Red Lion Hill, East Finchley.—A special mission was held in this hall last week by Mr. Gerald Coultas. On Monday week there was a special service for children, when several of the elder girls made a definite stand for Christ, and much power was manifest in the meeting. The principal outcome of the mission, however, seems to have been the uplifting and strengthening of the saints and also the conversion of several to Christ. The mission closed by a praise and testimony meeting, and much power was felt, several for the first time openly confessing Christ in public. H. C.

Mr. Opie Rodway concluded on Sunday, Dec. 2, an eight days' mission at Duke-street Hall, Frome. The week-night attendance was not large, as had been expected, it being Frome Fair week, but the congregations on both of the Sabbath evenings were good. At every service the message of God's love was delivered with great power, and many have been brought face to face with God and eternal things. The closing service was one of great power. The Holy Spirit applied the solemn truths presented to many hearts, and in the after meeting we were gladdened by seeing souls born into the kingdom of God. We expect to see more fruit gathered for the Master as the result. D. R. WALKER.

Southport.—A twelve days' parochial mission has been held in Christ Church, Southport, of which Archdeacon Clarke is vicar, by Rev. J. Denton Thompson. Special services have been held for men, women, and children, in addition to mission services and afternoon Bible-readings. The attendance throughout the mission has been quite phenomenal. On Sunday afternoons upwards of 1000 men gathered together in the church, while at the services for women at least 1500 women were present. On Sunday evenings the church was crowded to its utmost capacity; an overflow service was held in the Town Hall, and still hundreds of people were unable to get in at either of the services. The best indication of the success of the mission are the many sincere testimonies from those who have received spiritual blessings during the last twelve days. Not only members of Christ Church, but members of most of the churches in the town are under a debt of gratitude to the missioner.

Rev. G. C. Grubb is announced to hold a series of meetings for Christians and Christian workers at St. Peter's Church, Islington, Jan. 6 to 10.

PERSONALIA.

Canon Fleming has been suffering from a severe bronchial attack, but is recovering.

Mr. William Moorcock, evangelist, has accepted the superintendency of the Mutley Mission, Sussex.

Rev. L. Ton Evans has resigned his present charge in Haïti, W. Indies, to take effect in January.

The Bishop of Worcester has been compelled, under medical advice, to cancel his engagements for the present month.

The Bishop of London completed his seventy-third year on Friday week, having been born on November 30, 1821.

The Bishop of Rochester has completely recovered from his indisposition, and has left London for Rochester in connection with the duties of the diocese.

Mrs. Ormiston Chant is lying seriously ill at her residence, 49, Gower-street, W.C. Mrs. Chant is suffering from bronchitis and influenza, brought on by exertion and cold contracted at a meeting she recently addressed at Bridgwater.

Rev. Dr. Mathews, of the Presbyterian Alliance, has been visiting the churches in South Africa. He attended the Synod of the French mission at Lessouto, and was greatly pleased by what he saw of earnest endeavour and useful organisation.

Rev. Colmer B. Symes, of Leytonstone, formerly of Kensington, has been suffering for several weeks from nervous break-down. According to medical orders, he left for South Africa, accompanied by his wife, by the Dounc Castle, which sailed from Southampton on Saturday. It is hoped the voyage will completely restore him.

The late Dr. William Goodell, of Philadelphia, has left by will a number of conditional bequests: £10,000 to the American Board for Foreign Missions; £10,000 to the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania; and £2000 to the College of Physicians, Philadelphia. Dr. Goodell was the eldest son of a veteran missionary to Turkey, and practised as a physician in Constantinople for several years.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.—The indefatigable secretary of this useful Society (Captain Kearney White) has issued a Christmas greeting to the friends of the work. The weighty testimony of Dr. Spence, of Belfast, as to the great service rendered throughout Ireland by the agents of the Society is quoted. We note that the auditors, Messrs. Fry and Son, testify to the economy with which the operations are conducted.

MR. BRAMWELL BOOTH AT PLYMOUTH.—An innovation, probably unique in the annals of any religious organisation, was made on Monday evening by Mr. Bramwell Booth, who is conducting services in Plymouth. By arrangement with the management of the St. James's Theatre of Varieties, Mr. Booth took a turn on the stage as one of the "stars." His intention to appear in that capacity was extensively advertised, and drew a crowded audience. Coming on after an acrobatic troupe, Mr. Booth had a mixed reception, a large section manifesting resentment and displeasure. On his announcing, however, his intention not to give a religious address, all hostility ceased. For a quarter of an hour Mr. Booth rivetted the attention of the gathering while he expounded, with eloquence and force, the cardinal features of the Salvation Army social scheme. His address produced a deep impression on the audience, and his closing declaration that if they did not agree with the religious tenets of the Salvation Army, they must at least sympathise with its efforts to raise the submerged tenth, was received with loud and general cheering.—Daily Chronicle.

The Book World.

ANNUAL VOLUMES.

Sunday Friend. (1s. 6d. Marshall Bros.) The simple and well-illustrated stories contained in this volume will both please and profit the young people.

Old Jonathan, vol. xix. (1s. 6d. Collingridge). The annual volume of this well-known district and parish monthly forms a useful and pleasing book, suitable for cottagers, village libraries, and wherever wholesome and bright reading is wanted.

The National Temperance Mirror, Vol. xiv., is a repertory of biographies, stories and sketches, dialogues and poetry, and other items which temperance workers will find of service. It is a very useful magazine. (2s. National Temperance League Publication Dept.)

Christian Progress for 1894 is a volume which we commend unqualifiedly. Edited by Rev. Ernest Boys, M.A., and issued in connection with the Scripture Reading and Prayer Union, it answers its claim of being "a magazine of help and encouragement in Christian life, testimony, and work." The year's parts included in this volume contain much instruction and good counsel. (1s. 9d. Bemrose & Sons.)

The Guide for 1894 is up to its high standard, and answers the description of its title-page, "A Help to Present Progress and Future Well-being." Various writers point out what a young man can do in various directions; Rev. P. A. Gordon Clark writes on books that help the culture of the Christ-like life; and Rev. Professor Ferguson, of Glasgow, contributes papers on "Men I Have Heard." Thoughtful young men will be profited by a perusal of these well-edited pages. (2s. Wm. Love, Argyle-street, Glasgow.)

NEW YEAR BOOKLETS.

"Jesus Only," as a motto for the New Year, is beautifully elaborated by Henrietta S. Streatfeild. The points are: looking unto, leaning upon, labouring for, and living with Jesus. (C. Caswell, Birmingham.)

Mr. J. Forbes Moncreiff has written two booklets for the young: The Only Way (Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling) and Red Lamps (Glass & Co., 33, East Howard-street, Glasgow). Both are pointed in style, and full of earnest purpose. (1½d. each.)

Mary Gorges has written some stimulating poems. A New Year's Watchword and A Promise for the New Year are published in tract form (1s. 6d. per 100). Waiting for Christ is a tastefully-printed booklet (1s. per dozen), in which the blessed hope is beautifully expressed. (C. Caswell, Edmund-street, Birmingham.)

The Turned Lesson is the title of Laura A. Barter's seasonable word. (½d.) It shows that the turning must be from and to—from sin to the Saviour, from failure to victory. Two other booklets are: Under His Wings (in shilling packets), by Rev. William Frith; and Life for Christ (6d. per dozen), by Rev. Cecil de Carteret, M.A. (Partridge.)

Among the booklets issued from Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling, are: Full and Free, a parable of the great Salvation (1s. per dozen), by Rev. George Everard, M.A., who writes as powerfully as ever; and Emblems of the Bible, an address to the young (1½d.), by Rev. Alex. Andrew, D.D., in which the Word of God is considered as a hammer, a sword, seed, milk, honey, gold, a lamp, and a covenant. The pages deserve many readers.

STORY BOOKS.

Guy and Gladys. By M. Carrie Hyde. (C. H. Kelly.) A well written story of American Western life, with many bright and stirring episodes.

Sowing Sunshine; or, Sue Blake's Self-Denial, by Grace Stebbing, is a girl's story, showing what good may be done by a poor orphan, if she is also an earnest Christian. (1s. 6d. Jarrold & Sons.)

In Kate Gridley, a story of '54, by Sydney Watson, the emotions of love and the perils of the battle-field are described; the characters being developed in such a way as to illustrate Christian faith and practice. (1s. 6d. Drummond's Tract Depot, Stirling.)

A Double Cherry. By M. E. Winchester. (Seeley & Co.) The story of two boys, who, being left in utter helplessness and want by the death of their father, struggle on bravely, and, after sore trial, find an uncle, when all ends well. The tale will appeal strongly to the boys, although some of the incidents strike one as somewhat unusual coincidences.

The Family, by Evelyn Everett-Green. (5s. Religious Tract Society.) That a housekeeper who has lived with one family for many years should know enough to write a history of its members is not surprising; and, in assuming such a rôle, this gifted authoress has dealt wisely with her materials, sparing the reader unnecessary and trivial details, making the most of telling situations, and pervading the whole with a healthy moral tone which is welcome reading after much of the profitless fiction which daily pours from the press.

On to the Rescue. By Dr. Gordon Stables. (5s. Shaw & Co.). This favourite author has chosen an interesting, if not new, theme for his new book. The harrowing and exciting scenes of the Indian Mutiny, in which the story is laid, cannot fail to rivet the attention of old and young. Willie Saunders, the young Scotch boy, who enlists as a soldier, owing to an unhappy love affair, meets with many thrilling experiences during the mutiny, as does also his friend, Jack Morrison; and the fortunes of these young men will be anxiously followed by all Mr. Stable's young readers.

Harry's Trip to India, by Rev. W. J. Wilkins (1s.), is a story for boys. A London lad went East for the benefit of his health, and these pages tell how he fared on the way, and describe, in a graphic manner, the things he saw. Josh Jobson, or "Pards" (2s.), by Florence E. Burch, is a book which will minister wholesome entertainment to young people. Margaret Somerset, by Louisa C. Silke (2s. 6d.), is an historical tale, given in the form of diary extracts. It illustrates events in England in the seventeenth century; Bishop Ken enacts a worthy part in the story, and the battle of Sedgemoor is described. (Religious Tract Society.)

Secrets of Happy Home Life, a booklet by Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D. (6d. Hodder & Stoughton), is a treasure. Its counsels, if heeded, would heal many a sore, and cement the bonds of family affection.

The Sweetness of Pardon: Thoughts on the Thirty-second Psalm. By Rev. F. S. Webster, M.A. (6d. C. Caswell, Edmund-street, Birmingham). Six choice addresses originally delivered as sermons in St. Thomas's Church, Birmingham.

Little Frolic (Shaw & Co.) will delight the little ones of both sexes in its merry pictures and bright little stories and poems. In language easy to understand, and large type delightful to read they will find endless amusement not without instruction.

The Government of God: in Relation to the Evolution of Man. By William Woods Smyth. (Elliot Stock.) This work, which embodies a large amount of thought on distinctly independent lines, has been issued in a new and revised edition. Scripture and philosophy are shown to favour an evolution opposed to that of modern materialism.

Messrs. Jarrold have issued in their "Ever Welcome" series of toy books a well-designed Nurseryland Painting Book. The pictures are so arranged that they can be coloured either in paints or with chalk. Other issues in the same series are: Nursery Rhymes of Olden Times, Dick Whittington and His Cat, and Holiday Time. These, however, are not for painting.

The Homiletic Review for December opens with an article by Rev. Dr. Cobern, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, on the sacred scriptures of the Egyptians. Some of the facts disclosed are directly opposed to modern philosophy as to the evolution of religious thought, and put an important argument in the quiver of those who contend for the Mosaic origin of the Pentateuch. The part contains a wealth of sermonic suggestion and expository thought. (1s. monthly. Funk and Wagnalls.)

The Cambridge Teacher's Bible, in its various sizes and bindings, should be remembered by those who are making Christmas presents. The "Companion," a mine of information for students, constitutes this an admirable edition of the Scriptures for preachers and teachers. The ruby type 8vo size is handy, and may be had handsomely bound in morocco with padded covers at reasonable prices. Either the Authorised or Revised Versions may be had in combination with the "Companion." (C. J. Clay & Sons.)

Keep to the Right: The Young Man's Guide. By John Angell James. (1s. E. Knight.) Not only has this publisher re-issued Mr. Angell James's famous addresses to young women (mentioned last week), but also those to young men which, in the past, have done so worthy service. In the re-editing, the volume has been reduced in size, and brought within easy compass. Such themes as "Entrance upon Life," "Indecision," and "Success or Failure in Business," are trenchantly dealt with. The book ought to be widely circulated among young men.

A Dream of a Garden and other poems, by Ellen C. Pearson. (7s. 6d. nett. John Heywood.) We have in this volume a collection of really charming poems, powerful in diction and lofty in thought. It embraces a wide range of subjects which are treated with delicacy and skill, breathing a devout spirit which is by no means the least marked of its characteristics. The volume will be particularly appreciated as a gift book, for in addition to poetic work, its pages are embellished with floral designs of an exceptionally high and artistic order. In fact, the eye is apt to be deceived by the exquisite and dainty realism in which these delineations are portrayed. The book will be valued by all who delight in poetry or art or both.

Christmas Eve and other Verses, by Jessie Adams. (E. Hicks, jun.) is a little collection of tuneful, heartfelt poems, each freighted with some useful message.

Messrs. R. Banks & Son have published their Baptist Almanac and Directory for 1895 (2d.), which will prove of special use to London members of the denomination.

Four booklets in very attractive covers have been issued from the "Joyful News" Depôt, Rochdale, entitled the "Up-to-Date" Series. They are all from the pen of Rev. Thomas Champness, and direct in evangelistic appeal (4s. 6d. per 100, assorted).

The letters of the late Rev. W. Gibson on Paris Under the Commune, are being republished, with illustrations, prefaced by a Character Sketch and portrait. The book will cost 2s. 6d., and will be sold for the benefit of the work in France with which his name is associated. (Whittaker and Co., Ave Maria-lane, and Wesleyan Methodist Bookroom, Paternoster-row.)

The Church and Recreations and Amusements is the title of a striking address given on October 30 at the Liverpool Diocesan Conference by William C. Procter, who, as an instructed Christian, distinguishes between things that differ, and contends for methods that shall conform to the spiritual aims of the Church. (2d. G. G. Walmsley, 50, Lord-street, Liverpool.

Pastoral Counsels for Perilous Times, by Frank H. White, is a choice booklet on the responsibilities and privileges of Church fellowship. Believers are exhorted to be real, loving, diligent, valiant, subject to Christ, prayerful, filled with the Spirit, and studious of Divine truth. We could wish that such heart-searching counsels as these could be placed within the reach of Church members everywhere. (1d. Partridge.)

BOOKS RECEIVED.

From Elliot Stock.—Young Methodism, Vol. I. (for 1894).

From C. H. Kelly.—The Mystic Secret, and other sermons, by James Lewis, 3s. 6d.

REV. T. COOK IN AUSTRALIA.

Letters from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cook show that they are in perfect health, notwithstanding the strain of continuous service and much travelling. Mr. Cook states that he was about to begin a mission at Bathurst. From Bathurst he would go to Sydney, and at the close of the Sydney mission he purposed to rest till Christmas is over. He will then, all being well, proceed to New Zealand, Queensland, and, if possible, to Ceylon and India. Should his engagements allow, he would like to visit Fiji, but this remains uncertain for the present. The evangelist has thus before him a heavy list of appointments and a great deal of travelling by sea and land.

Mr. Cook was, at the time of writing, half way through his evangelistic tour, the number of inquirers at the various missions he had then held being about 4200. Everywhere he had gone ministers and people have given him the heartiest welcome, co-operating with him in the most cordial manner. So far he has had to rejoice over uninterrupted victory, his services having been as useful to the members of the churches as they have been awakening and profitable to outsiders. The evangelist has been much encouraged, and expresses himself as grateful to God for sending him to so large and fruitful a field of labour, and giving him such an abundant measure of blessing. The missions in Hobart and Launceston have, according to latest accounts, been a great success.

IN DARK LOLOLAND.

In the December issue of Regions Beyond there is cheering news from the Congo-Balolo country of Central Africa. Mr. Ellery, of Ikau, reports a visit to Bomati, where he was cordially received. At Bosurvonzo crowds gathered in the chief's palace, and though the Gospel was listened to with rapt attention, another spirit seemed to prevail when the forsaking of sin was insisted upon.

Writing of a visit to another town, Mr. Ellery says: "During the morning, while reading to myself Moule's 'Union with Christ,' I took out of it a book-marker (an advertisement of Mr. Meyer's books), on which was a portrait of Mr. Meyer. I showed them this, but they could not see a man. I endeavoured to show them his mouth, nose, eyes, and ears. At last they saw, and all together they shouted, 'Hide him! hide him!' Some shut their eyes, others covered them with their hands, until fully assured I had obeyed their very pressing commands."

This incident illustrates the religion of fear which holds as in fetters of iron the millions who live in the dark places of the earth.

TOTTENHAM.—An interesting meeting on the anti-slavery question was held at the Friends' Meeting House, Tottenham, last week, Mr. Joseph Howard, M.P., presiding. Impressive speeches, dealing with the varied phases of the subject, were given, special reference being made to the continued existence of the slave traffic in different parts of Central and South Africa.

HAMPSHIRE VILLAGE MISSION.—The operations of this Mission have been carried on with spirit during the past season. The Gospel vans have visited many outlying places, and much good literature has been circulated. The baneful effects of the evil literature so prevalent are often met with, and every effort is made to counteract them by preaching and by the supply of good reading.

"HOME WORDS" ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For Christmas & the New Year.

Home Words Library.

SUITABLE BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Now Ready. Now Ready.

A BLACK DIAMOND. By EDWARD GARRETT. "A Second Uncle Tom's Cabin." Fully illustrated and handsomely bound in cloth gilt. Crown 8vo, price 1s. 6d.

MOTHER AND SON. By Mrs. EMMA MARSHALL. With Original Illustrations by A. Twidle. "A remarkable Tale of Difficulties Overcome." Handsomely bound in cloth gilt, price 1s. 6d.

ALMOST A CRIME. By T. S. MILLINGTON, M.A. "A Striking Temperance Story." Handsomely bound in cloth gilt, and specially illustrated throughout by G. Wilkinson. Price 2s.

TURN AND TURN ABOUT; or, A Word to the Men. New Work by the Rev. WALTER SENIOR, M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Margate. A Companion Volume to "The Precious Things of Home." In bevelled cloth gilt, with frontispiece, price 1s.

THE PRECIOUS THINGS OF HOME. A Word to the Wives. By the Rev. WALTER SENIOR, M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Margate. New Edition. Now Ready. In bevelled cloth gilt, with frontispiece, price 1s. 6d.; also in paper boards, price 1s.

"OVER THE SEA": A CHRISTMAS GIFT. Send Friends Abroad "THE MAN THAT DID GOOD TO HIMSELF": "The Day of Days" Christmas Number (1d.); "I GIVE AND BEQUEATH": THE FIRESIDE CHRISTMAS NUMBER (6d.); and our Two Coloured Almanacks, THE FIRESIDE ALMANACK AND HOME WORDS ALMANACK (1½d. each). A Shilling will more than do it all.

BEAUTIFUL 1895 SHEET ALMANACKS.

"HOME WORDS" COLOURED ALMANACK for the Home. With splendid Pictures and Floral Designs. Printed in Colours, with Tinted Background to Calendar. Ask to see a copy. Size 21in. by 30in. 1½d. each.

THE FIRESIDE" COLOURED ALMANACK Seven Coloured Pictures are now given; the centre picture specially reproduced from an original painting. Special new features. Increased attractiveness. 1½d. each.

No books are so cheap as Magazine Annuals, and they are especially adapted for HOME GIFTS.

ANNUAL VOLS. FOR 1894. Now ready. Edited by the Rev. CHARLES BULLOCK, B.D.

The Fireside, 7s. 6d. Sixpence monthly. Crimson cloth, bevelled boards.

Home Words, 2s. One penny monthly. Blue cloth.

The Day of Days, 2s. One penny monthly. Blue cloth.

Hand and Heart, 2s. One penny monthly. Handy size, cloth gilt.

The January Numbers for 1895 begin the New Volumes in ALL the above.

ILLUSTRATED PERIODICALS.

ONE PENNY MONTHLY.

HOME WORDS.

A High-class Illustrated Magazine for the Home.

The January number contains the opening chapters of a new serial tale, by the Rev. T. S. MILLINGTON, entitled Jack of all Trades, specially illustrated by A. Twidle. This number also contains The Story of England's Church, by ARCHDEACON SINCLAIR, D.D.; The Two Firesides, by P. B. POWER; To Marry or Not To Marry, by the author of "How to be Happy though Married"; In Wonderland, by the Rev. JOHN ISABELL, etc., etc. A beautifully-coloured presentation plate, entitled "DEAR OLD GRANNIE," is given with every copy. Framed it makes a beautiful Christmas present. The plate is fully worth more than the 1d. charged for the whole number.

ONE PENNY MONTHLY.

HAND AND HEART.

An Illustrated Home and Temperance Magazine.

The programme arranged for 1895 is exceptionally strong. The January number contains two complete illustrated tales, the first, by the Rev. P. B. POWER, is entitled Water in the Glass and in the Eye, the second Ruello, or The Wagging of the World, by H. SOMERSET-BULLOCK, B.A. The Rev. FREDERICK LANGBRIDGE contributes Last Year and This, and amongst the other contents will be found How to get up a Temperance Society, by the Rev. J. ROOKER, jun., Ten Minutes' Talks, by T. S. MILLINGTON, Blessings in Disguise, by the Author of "How to be Happy though Married," With Dr. Nansen in Greenland, by A. L. SOMERVILLE, etc.

ONE PENNY MONTHLY.

THE DAY OF DAYS.

The Best 1d. Magazine for Sunday Reading.

The January number of The Day of Days is now ready. Throughout the year special prominence will be given to a new series of papers by leading writers, entitled "LIGHT ON CHURCH MATTERS." A second series of Illus. Articles, PENCIL NOTES AND SKETCHES IN PALESTINE, by H. SOMERSET BULLOCK, B.A.; a short Tale by KATHLEEN SAVILE, entitled "A TRUE LOVER'S KNOT"; a new Serial Tale by Mrs. MARSHALL, and other articles of great interest will appear in the first number of the year.

SIXPENCE MONTHLY.

THE

FIRESIDE MAGAZINE.

Edited by Rev. CHARLES BULLOCK, B.D.

In the January number a new Serial Tale, a complete short Tale, a Portrait Sketch, and a number of Illustrated Articles and Papers will be found of unusual interest:—By the North Sea; or, The Protector's Granddaughter, by Mrs. MARSHALL. The Havergal Family: Some Lingering Memories, by the Rev. S. B. JAMES, D.D. From Jaffa to Jerusalem, by Mrs. CHARLES GARNET. Portrait Sketch, by the EDITOR. Authors and Books, by A. J. SYMINGTON, F.R.S.N.A. Sunday Readings, by the Rev. P. B. POWER, M.A., etc., etc. Illustrations by first-class artists.

"HOME WORDS" Office, 7, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.

WORKS BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE PEEP OF DAY."

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITIONS.

THE PEEP OF DAY; or, A Series of the Earliest Religious Instruction. New Edition. With 13 Illustrations by Miss BEVAN, a niece of the authoress. Coloured Illustrations, imperial 16mo, 5s. Plain Illustrations, imperial 16mo, 2s. 6d.

"As we turn over the leaves we mark with delight the artistic pictures and daintily-printed hymns, each with music in four parts, and each framed in an exquisite bordering. This is indeed our old friend, but in what an altered guise! Edition de Luxe scarcely expresses the beauty of its present form."—Schoolmaster.

THE PEEP OF DAY.
Popular Edition, with 24 Illustrations. 18mo., 6d.
School Edition, with 27 Illustrations. 1s. 2d.
18mo, with 27 Illustrations. 2s.
" " " roxburgh, 2s. 6d.

LINE UPON LINE; or, a Second Series of Religious Instruction.
PART I.—Questions and 30 Illustrations. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d. PART II.—Questions and 27 Illustrations. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Popular Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, each 9d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, each 1s. 4d.

STREAKS OF LIGHT; or, Fifty-two Facts from the Bible. 52 Illustrations 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

PRECEPT UPON PRECEPT. Questions. 63 Illustrations and Map. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

APOSTLES PREACHING TO JEWS AND GENTILES; or, the Acts explained to Children. Questions. 27 Illustrations and Map. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 4d.

LINES LEFT OUT. Questions and 23 Illustrations. 18mo. (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE KINGS OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. 27 Illustrations and Map. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE CAPTIVITY OF JUDAH. With Questions. 27 Illustrations and Map. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

MORE ABOUT JESUS. With Questions. 26 Illustrations. 18mo (roxburgh, 3s.), 2s. 6d.
Cheap Edition, Illustrated, limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

Over Two Million Copies of this Author's Works have been sold.

N.B.—The only authorized Editions of these works are those published by Messrs. LONGMANS & Co. All others are reprinted from early and unrevised Editions.

LONDON: LONGMANS, GREEN AND CO.

CAMBRIDGE TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Prices from 2s. 6d.

OPINIONS.

BISHOP OF CARLISLE:—"It is the most complete and useful Bible that has ever come under my notice."

Guardian:—"Of the general excellence of the work it is impossible to speak too highly. We have seldom seen so much good material compressed into so small a space, and the volume is worthy of the distinguished band of Cambridge scholars who have produced it."

Church Sunday-School Magazine:—"The Cambridge Bible will be found a most valuable help, not only to every Sunday-school teacher, but to every student who desires to acquire trustworthy information as to the structure and growth of the Holy Scriptures."

Independent:—"It is an ideal Christmas present for an intelligent Sunday-school teacher."

THE CHRISTIAN:—"The Cambridge Teachers' Bible will be especially prized by students. The Companion is a small library in itself."

The Cambridge Companion to the Bible,

Containing the New Indexed Atlas

May also be had separately from 1s. net.

Prospectuses and price lists may be had of all Book sellers or direct from the publishers.

London: C. J. CLAY AND SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

RUBY MOTTOES FOR 1895.

9 by 4½, 7s. 100, Blank or with Texts.

No. 50.—Fishers on Sea of Galilee. "Follow thou Me." With lines by N.E.R.
" 51.—Crusader with Banner. "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

7½ by 4¾, 6s. 100. In the Carmine and Gold Style so popular last year.
" 52.—"Lean Hard." Illuminated. Lines by Charlotte Elliot.
" 53.—"All for Jesus." Illuminated.
" 54.—Banner. "Ye are my witnesses," &c.
" 55.—Scroll. "Ye are not your own," &c.

4½ by 3½, 3s. 6d. per 100, Blank or with Texts.
" 56.—Camel and Rider. "I will go in the strength," &c.
" 57.—Trees Planted by the River. "Blessed is the man that trusteth," &c.
" 58.—Camels Crossing the Desert. "Commit thy way," &c.
" 59.—Woman Drawing Water. "I will trust and not be afraid."

JOHN GEORGE WHEELER,
88, MILDMAY PARK, LONDON, N.

S. W. PARTRIDGE & Co.'s BOOK SALOONS,

8 & 9, PATERNOSTER ROW
(No. 9, up the Passage),

Contain the largest and most varied collections of

NEW BOOKS FOR THE SEASON, ANNUALS, CHRISTMAS CARDS, &c.

Conveniently arranged for inspection.

New Illustrated Catalogue Post Free.

Just published, price 3s. 6d.

SEARCHINGS IN THE SILENCE. By Rev. GEORGE MATHESON, M.A., D.D., F.R.S.E.

"The meditations are so elevated and impressive that they cannot fail to exert a happy and helpful influence on all who enter into their spirit."—Scotsman.

"The book is a treasure-house of original spiritual thoughts."—Dundee Advertiser.

CASSELL & CO., Limited, Ludgate Hill, London.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Bishop of Ripon, with his wife, has gone to Costebelle, near Hyères.

Archdeacon Hughes-Games will take up his new work in Hull at the beginning of the new year.

A most interesting mission to young people and children has been held by Rev. T. Turner in St. James's, Gravesend.

It is generally expected that a well-known Manx clergyman will be appointed Archdeacon of Man, in succession to Dr. Hughes-Games.

A new mission church has been opened at Poole. It is the gift of Lord and Lady Wimborne, whose warm interest in evangelistic work is well known.

Banda, in the North-West Provinces in India (says the Mission Field), is again to have a resident European missionary, Rev. J. R. Hill, who was there 1873 to 1884, having resigned his English benefice in order to return to the mission, which he opened in 1884.

Rev. J. A. Howell's appointment, by the Simeon Trustees, to St. Bede's, Liverpool, has given considerable satisfaction to the congregation. He is a thoughtful preacher and a hard worker, who ought to do good service in St. Bede's parish for the cause of Evangelical religion.

We regret to hear that Rev. William Horne, M.A., vicar of Christ Church, St. Albans, has resigned his charge. Mr. Horne is an uncompromising preacher of the Gospel and a thorough Protestant, and he is greatly respected at St. Albans by Nonconformists as well as Churchmen.

The Record reports that the mission in Douglas and the neighbourhood is progressing successfully. Rev. W. H. Aitken, Canon Bullock, T. J. Madden, and the other missioners report large congregations at all the services on Sunday. Mr. T. J. Madden has been holding mid-day services for men at St. George's.

A meeting was held on Monday week at the Paddington Baths, Queen's-road, Bayswater, in connection with the Paddington Association of the C.P.A.S. The great hall was packed in every part, some 1200 people being present, and large numbers were turned away unable to obtain admission for want of room. Rev. W. Abbott presided, and vigorous addresses were made by the Dean of Norwich, Revs. C. W. Houlston, E. A. Stuart, and Mr. A. F. Buxton.

The English Churchman states that the "Francis Goode" Van, in charge of Mr. Courtney, is having a rough time of it at Longridge, in Lancashire. "It has been attacked with some of the strongest Romish and Ritualistic arguments. The windows have been smashed, and the van pelted with stones, mud, and filth, and both Mr. and Mrs. Courtney have been struck on the head and face with the missiles. The Romanists and Ritualists have also threatened to set fire to the van. It is hoped that all Protestants in the neighbourhood who may happen to read this paragraph will at once go over and support Mr. Courtney. The antagonism of the Romanists and Ritualists shows that good work is being done."

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. G. Warren has been recognised as pastor at Okehampton.

Mr. J. S. Langley has been ordained to the pastorate at Kirkham.

An interesting mission has been held by Miss Brennen at Castleford.

Mr. Bray has conducted a fruitful three weeks' evangelistic mission at Cranbrook.

The jubilee of Headgate Church, Colchester, is to be celebrated by enlarging the school premises.

The new Amersham-grove Sunday-school, New Cross, was opened on Thursday by Mr. F. J. Belsey, J.P.

Rev. Jonathan Evans, of Buckley, Flintshire, has been appointed financial secretary of North Wales Union.

Rev. Ll. B. Roberts, having recovered from a protracted illness, has resumed his duties at Penydref, Carnarvon.

Rev. Isaac Hartill having accepted the pastorate of St. John's Wood, brought his ministry at Trinity Congregational Church, Hanbury-street, E., to a close on Sunday.

The sixty-first anniversary of the church at High-street, Halstead, has been held. During the past five years eighty have been added to the fellowship. The work is full of vigour.

A new year's devotional meeting is to be held at the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, on Monday, Jan. 1 to be addressed by Revs. Dr. Mackennal and J. L. Green, Demerara.

At Queen's Park, W., the eighth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Leach has been held. During the past eight years about 800 have been enrolled as members, of whom 500 are still in fellowship.

A branch church in connection with St. James's Church, Newcastle-on-Tyne, has been formed with about 100 members, at New Pandon, where a mission has been carried on for more than half a century, and where a good work is being done.

It has been decided that the secretary of the Colonial Missionary Society, Rev. D. B. Hooke, should, in accordance with invitation, visit the churches in South Africa. He will probably leave England immediately after the annual meeting in May.

The American Board for Foreign Missions has received from Spain an indemnity of £3500 for the loss of property and other injuries inflicted on it at Ponape by Spanish authorities a few years since. The missionaries of the Board have been practically shut out from the island since 1890, but they may now resume their work.

Mr. C. Silvester Horne, speaking at Sheffield last week, said there was no falser conception in modern times than that Puritanism meant a narrow-minded policy in regard to legitimate recreation and amusement. The stand true Puritans took was that recreation should be pure. They in Yorkshire must see to it that they put down gambling and betting, not because they were the foes of decent recreation, but because they were the friends of it, and the foes of indecent recreation.

Calls.—Rev. P. S. Atkinson, to Merton (accepted), Rev. M. G. Astbury, to Clemens-street, Leamington; Rev. T. Kench, formerly of Finsbury-circus Chapel, to Willoughby, Sydney.

Resignation.—Rev. B. Crowther, of Merton.

BAPTIST.

A Polish Baptist Church has been formed in Buffalo City, New York.

Rev. A. A. Harmer has held a four days' mission at Trinity Church, Colne.

Rev. W. Kirk Bryce has been ordained to the pastorate at West Park, Chatteris.

Church-street, Sudbury, reports thirty-eight new members admitted during the past year.

Rev. Joseph Tucker, of Blaenavon, has accepted the pastorate at Church-street, Edgware-road.

It is announced that the Baptist Boys' Brigade has assumed extensive proportions in Brooklyn.

A new mission-room has been opened at Fawkham Green—two miles from the nearest church or chapel.

A site for a new chapel at Builth has been purchased on the road leading to the famous mineral springs near Glanne.

During the two years' pastorate of Rev. Walter Wynn, the church at Earby has admitted 149 adult members, 135 by baptism.

It is stated that 999 candidates were baptized in Hungary last year. The number of Baptists in that country has doubled since 1891.

Rev. William and Mrs. Carey left for India in the P. and O. s.s. Mirzapore, to return to their former sphere in the Bhackergange district, East Bengal.

The 241st anniversary of the Stalham Church, Norfolk, has been observed, and interesting accounts have been given of the early history of the cause and the difficulties the first founder had to encounter.

Calls.—Rev. E. Francis, of Fivehead, to Bartholomew, Exeter; Rev. T. A. Judd, to Clee, Grimsby, Rev. F. A. Rees, to Rochdale-road, Bury.

Resignation.—Rev. H. Beddow, of Amersham, Bucks.

METHODIST.

New chapels have been opened at Bloxwich and Axminster.

New chapels are building, or about to be built, at Newquay, Llanabar (Barmouth), Aberystwyth, and Ashbourne.

Statistics are given in the new "Year Book of Universal Methodism," the gross totals being—ministers 43,503 and members 1,456,902.

The decrease in the mission fund of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America for the past year amounts to £11,753, on a total income of £227,500.

At Crawshawbooth, the suggestion of a farthing per head additional per Sunday, to wipe out the missionary debt, has been taken up. Already the result is over £10.

The annual meetings of the South Wales Mission, of which Rev. J. Evans is the leader, were held last week at Pontypridd. The reports were of the most cheering type.

Fifteen men signed the pledge at the closing meeting of an evangelistic mission held in Derrygonnelly by Messrs. Griffin and Cathcart. Very successful missions are in progress in Agnes-street and Falls-road Churches, Belfast.

Rev. Thomas Cook's programme for New South Wales was arranged as follows:—Newcastle, October 14 to 23; Waverley, October 28, November 6; Bathurst, November 11 to 20; Stanmore, November 25 and December 9 to 18; Centenary Hall, Sydney, December 30 to January 8.

The third anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. D. H. Moore at Barking occurred on Monday night. A highly satisfactory record was given as to spiritual advance, increased numbers, and generous giving. The prayer meeting, the unfailing thermometer of Church life told a tale not more flattering than true. The Monday evening meeting was the best of the week. Sunday-school and Bible classes flourish; 380 persons have professed faith in Christ. A new chapel has been built, to which the people, all of the wage-earning class, have liberally contributed. The pastor evidently has the desire and the ability to elicit the gifts of his members, so that to a large extent they are what every church should be—a union of Christian workers.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The removal of the College from London to Cambridge is being freely discussed among our Presbyterian brethren.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Martin are returning to Syria after furlough. Rev. W. M. Nevin is also about to leave for the mission at Antioch.

Rev. Dr. William Forsyth, of Abernethy, Inverness-shire, will conduct the bi-monthly Gaelic service in Craven Court Church, Covent Garden, on Sunday afternoon.

At the next meeting of South London Presbytery, in connection with the Committee on Religion and Morals, a conference on gambling and betting will be opened by Rev. D. Matheson.

Rev. Alexander Connell, speaking at his last "at home," in the lecture hall of Regent-square Church, said the presence of so many young people at Regent-square was an inspiration to him.

A conference of the South London Presbytery will be held at Upper Norwood Church on the night of January 15 on "Young People's Societies," including the Christian Endeavour and Boys' Brigade.

Calls.—Rev. Andrew Allan, formerly of Edinburgh, to Newington, Hull; Rev. Rd. Williams, to Penmaenmawr; Rev. D. P. M'Lees, of Aberdeen, to Stirling (accepted); Rev. J. Barr, of Paisley, to Neilston; Rev. Alex. Hutchison, of Eckford, to St. George's, Glasgow; Rev. W. Gordon, of Markinch, to Barrhill Church; Rev. K. D. M'Laren, late of Calcutta, to be assistant in Holborn Church, Aberdeen.

Resignation.—Rev. John Campbell, of North Knapdale.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

General Booth is this week visiting Salt Lake City, U.S.A.

Three days' meetings have been held in Sheffield, led by Commissioner Howard, who is in command of the work in Great Britain.

The directors of the Social Wing will be glad of funds towards the Christmas Dinner, which it is their wont to provide for all the "strangers within their gates" on that day.

Mr. Bramwell Booth, in the course of his address at the opening of the New Shelter in Charles-street on Dec. 3, said he hoped ere long, by the increased efforts of the Army, that no man, woman, or child would ever have to sleep in the streets of the City of London. There are now twenty-one Shelters, with accommodation for 5418 homeless, friendless men. During the past year there has been 1,290,000 occupations, which cost £22,100, but which has been defrayed by the occupants themselves, leaving a balance to the credit of the Shelters of £600.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Veytaux, Switzerland, on 29th ult., Mr. Bainbridge Robert Bell, aged thirty-five, second son of Canon Bell.—At Dover, on 4th inst., Rev. Stenning Johnson, aged seventy-six, late rector of Eastergate, Chichester.—At Ashton-under-Lyne, on 1st inst., Mrs. T. Green, wife of the esteemed Congregational minister.—At Brotton, in Cleveland, on 28th ult., Rev. James Bell, aged eighty, rector of the parish.—At Sydney, Mrs. Bayley, wife of Rev. T. A. Bayley, for so many years superintendent of the United Methodist Missions in the colony.—At Moldgreen, Huddersfield, Mr. F. Hirst, a devoted young man who had consecrated his life to missions.—At Coventry, on 1st inst., Mr. N. Hill, a well-known local worker.—At Surbiton, Rev. W. A. White, aged seventy, late vicar of Llantrissant, Newport.—At Frostrow, on 2nd inst., Mr. William Mason, aged seventy, a preacher of the Gospel, who passed away while on the road returning home from a preaching engagement.—At Whalley Grange, Mr. John Cooke, a leading Methodist in Manchester.—At Newark, Mr. George Chew, aged seventy-two, a beloved servant of Christ.—At Richhill, Rev. Andrew McCalvin, Presbyterian minister, aged seventy-five years.

CHRISTMAS APPEALS.

Millwall.—The pastor of the Congregational Church asks help for the deserving poor.—W. J. Temple, 32, Strafford-street, Millwall, E.

Kent-street, Borough.—To provide something for those who are almost starving, and to put a garment on them.—J. T. Smith, 86, Fort-road, Bermondsey, S.E.

West Marylebone Mission, Dauntless Hall, Lisson-grove.—To provide at Christmas and the New Year free meals for the aged and the needy poor and the starving children.—James Sprunt.

Christ Church and Farmhouse Lodging House Mission.—For aid in giving a little Christmas cheer to the inmates of the common kitchens.—W. Geller, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge-road, S.E.

Rev. J. Tolefree Parr, of 62, Nelson-square, S.E., minister of Surrey Chapel, appeals for money, toys, food, and warm clothing to enable him to give a Christmas meal to 1000 poor children, 170 poor mothers, and 100 aged and deserving poor.

Ham Yard Soup Kitchen and Hospice.—For funds to help in providing their usual Christmas dinner to 1000 families, 5000 persons. The institution is open all the year. The hospice contains 20 beds.—W. Stevens, Manager, Ham Yard, Piccadilly Circus, W.

Christian Community.—For help to provide Christmas cheer for the many poor and half-starved who attend the Mission halls; also night shelters for the homeless, and the free meals given to some hundreds every week.—James Atkinson, 28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, N.

The Ann's-place Soup Kitchen and Free Dinners for Poor Children in Bethnal Green gave last year over 14,000 dinners to children who are amongst the poorest of the poor in one of the densest districts of Bethnal Green.—J. E. Roberts, 8, Darnley-road, Hackney, N.E.

Cripple Children.—Mr. Boyer, on behalf of 500 crippled children, most of whom have been discharged from hospitals incurable, for money, clothes, books, toys, or anything that will help to brighten their sad lives.—Secretary, Charles H. T. Archer, 29, Cottage-grove, Bow, E.

Dock Labourers' Mission.—Thousands of poor toilers out of employment round the Docks, with their wives and children, are suffering daily the need of food. We have facilities for feeding 1000 per day, but funds will not admit of fifty per day.—C. Coleman, 150, Boleyn-road, West Ham, E.

The Chiswick Mission wishes to send 1 cwt. of coal to each member of the mothers' meeting, to render assistance to widows with young children, to provide comforts for the sick and aged, to give a tea to the children, and to assist needy cases.—Robt. T. Smith, 1, Thornton-avenue, Chiswick.

Old Ford.—This East London parish consists of 11,000 poor, and our resources are likely to be drawn upon heavily. Our soup coppers, which were repaired in 1892, must now be replaced by new ones (cost £11) before we can open our children's dinners.—Annie Seton Adamson, The Vicarage, Wright's-road, Old Ford, E.

Scandinavian Sailors.—Christmas is now fast approaching, and with it the anxiety how to provide for our sailors' festival, which is to be held as usual in this home on Christmas Eve. Twelve hundred "tars," or thereabouts received presents through our hands last year.—Agnes H. Welin, Scandinavian Sailors' Home, West India Docks, Poplar.

Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society.—There are at present 1237 aged pilgrims on the Society's books, who receive with great thankfulness their small pensions regularly. There are many hundreds of them over seventy years of age, 266 are more than eighty, and twenty-one have got beyond ninety years. The secretary is Mr. J. E. Hazelton, 83, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

Union Tabernacle is a centre in Wandsworth-road of home mission work in a poor and densely-populated part, where there is always a vast amount of poverty, sickness, and distress. In the cold season we provide free meals for the hungry; the afflicted poor, after investigation, are helped; Christmas dinners and free teas are provided to bring cheer into their dull and monotonous lives.—D. M. Cameron, Thurlow, 515, Wandsworth-road, Clapham, S.W.

Christmas Cheer for the Poor of East London.—Last year we provided a Christmas dinner for about 1000 persons in their own homes on Christmas Day. Many of these were widows and fatherless, and not a few out of employment and on the verge of starvation. This year we want to do at least as much as last, and we also wish to add coals and other comforts for the exceptionally destitute and suffering. Our work is not merely a special Christmas work, but continuous.—T. J. Hazzard, 52, Addington-road, Boro', E.

Ragged School Union.—During the fifty years of its beneficent work the Ragged School Union has grown into a wide-spreading tree, sheltering numerous agencies, all of which have for their aim the relieving and uplifting of the poorest children, and through them their parents. By means of an army of Christ-like workers it is doing a great work under conditions suited to the present-day needs. In sustaining these varied efforts the Council confidently ask generous assistance.—Compton, President, 37, Norfolk-street, Strand, W.C.

Miss Rye appeals for her work. "The funds are now very low, so much so, that unless we get a very liberal response to this appeal, we shall be compelled very much to curtail our work during the coming year. We sent off our third and last party for this year a few weeks ago, which entirely emptied our treasury, but we hope before the winter sets in—or, at all events, before the New Year—to be in a position, by your kind help, to receive into this Home a large number of poor neglected girls, to be trained for our first exodus to Canada in the spring.—Emigration Home for Destitute Little Girls, Avenue House, High-street, Peckham, S.E."

Field-lane Refuges and Ragged Schools.—For our work amongst the poor and destitute. In addition to holding upwards of thirty mission meetings a week, we maintain continually some 250 boys and girls and 60 men and women, distribute broken food daily to some 90 families, give a breakfast every Sunday to upwards of 550 of the homeless poor, and a hot dinner four days a week during the winter to some 100 children (7603 such dinners were given). We are anxious also to provide a dinner on Christmas Day for 700 to 800 of the homeless poor, and to send a good Christmas parcel and coal to 600 poor deserving families.—Peregrine Platt, Secretary.

---

The lady (Mrs. Bernardo) who has been sending a copy of The Christian weekly to Mr. H. King, in China, is asked kindly to communicate with the Editor, who is not aware of her present address.

The Christian.

☞ To avoid delay it is requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and not to its individual members. Communications for THE CHRISTIAN should be addressed to the Editor, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for THE CHRISTIAN should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 1 of cover.)

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

☞ The Publishers request that all orders for THE CHRISTIAN by post, and remittances for same, be addressed to "THE CHRISTIAN" POSTAL DEPARTMENT, BOUVERIE HOUSE, SALISBURY SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

Cheques and Post Orders to be made payable to Messrs. John Haddon and Co. at that address.

The subscription for one year, including Postage and Coloured Almanack, is as under:—

| | |
|---|---|
| For Great Britain and Ireland .. | 6s. 7d. per annum |
| For India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, France, Germany, and other European Countries .. .. .. .. | 8s. 10d. " " |
| For United States and Canada .. | 2¼ dols. " " |
| Or including Monthly Copy of HERALD OF MERCY .. .. | 2½ dols. " " |

Subscriptions for THE HERALD OF MERCY.

| | |
|---|---|
| 4 Copies monthly .. .. .. .. .. | 2s. per annum |
| 8 " " .. .. .. .. | 4s. " " |
| 12 " " .. .. .. .. | 6s. " " |
| 24 " " .. .. .. .. | 12s. " " |

Post free to any address at home or abroad.

Remittances to be sent as above. Postcard should be enclosed for receipt or extra stamp to cover postage of same.

Notes and Comments.

☞ We beg to call attention to the Special Announcement made above with reference to Subscriptions for the ensuing year. It will greatly facilitate our work at this season if friends will kindly note the particulars.

☞ Will those of our readers who receive THE CHRISTIAN direct from the Office by post, and who have not recently communicated with us, kindly send their present full postal address—specially Missionaries and others in foreign countries?

The call to Praise and Prayer on the first day of the New Year, given in our last issue, will awaken, we doubt not, a wide response, for many must feel that the times demand that God's people should come together, with one heart, to wait definitely on Him for the revival of his work. We trust all ministers, workers, and helpers in prayer will endeavour to be present in St. Martin's Hall, at one or other of the meetings arranged to be held at 11 a.m., 3, and 7 p.m.

The text on our almanack for Christmas Day is "Good tidings of great joy...to all people." This is the note of the Gospel. Not tidings of judgment and woe; Christ came "not to judge the world, but that the world, through Him, might be saved." Not tidings of hate and estrangement of God from man; "God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son." Not good tidings for a few; Christ gave Himself a ransom for all. The "joy bells" may well peal out again at this glad season of the year. If the tone of Christian teaching has at all fallen below this Divine standard, let it be raised to the full pitch at once; let Christmas bring the Saviour in richer, fuller measure into every believer's heart and into every Christian's life and teaching. Let Christmas sermons run over with the good tidings of the Father's love and the Saviour's redemption and the Holy Spirit's grace.

The news from Armenia becomes still darker. From the missionaries we learn that as many as forty-eight villages have been destroyed, and 10,000 persons massacred. The feeling of shame and indignation is rising in England, and the Government is said to have got a free hand to act along with Russia for the succour of the poor Armenians. Meanwhile, part of the English Press is saying that it would be as well if Russia would set her own house in order, and cease persecuting the Stundists. This is a case in which we may say, "This ought ye to do, and not to leave the other undone."

We are glad to read the following items in the telegrams of Monday last from Constantinople; the time for forbearance is passed, and if the Great Powers do not now exercise their treaty rights in behalf of these defenceless Armenians, a serious responsibility will rest on them:—

It is generally believed that the Armenian question will not be closed by the Sassun inquiry, but that serious steps will be taken by the Powers for the execution of the reforms stipulated for by the Berlin Treaty. The French and Russian Governments have officially notified the Porte that their consuls at Erzeroum have been authorised to appoint delegates to attend the commission of inquiry into the Sassun outrages.

The proceedings at the first general meeting of the London School Board afford hope that the religious dissensions of the past will be buried in a common desire to promote the highest educational efficiency of the young people under its care. The "Compromise" will be adhered to, and the simple elements of the Christian faith taught as hitherto. The first administrative act of the new Board was to institute a searching inquiry as to the number of children attending the schools who are insufficiently fed—a very pressing subject at this season of the year.

Mr. Gladstone has contributed to the January number of The Evangelical Magazine an article on "The Evangelical Movement: its Parentage, Progress, and Issue," which deserves, and is sure to attract, the profound attention of members of all churches. It is characterised by a fulness of knowledge, and by a profoundness of insight into the interaction and reaction of religious forces which have been in play in England for the last two hundred years, which will give it a high place among ecclesiastical writings. Its shortness—only twenty-eight pages—and its value are in striking contrast. There is material and suggestion enough for a book, and we only wish the venerable author might have time and inclination to pen it. An outline of the article is not possible. In the historical part we have the connection pointed out between the political character of the Church of England, and her deadness and barrenness before the Evangelical movement arose. In only one point do we notice the history defective: John Wesley was born and bred in a High Anglican home, but Mr. Gladstone fails to point out that the father and mother of that home had been born and bred in Puritanism.

The manner in which the influence of one section of the Church upon another is traced from point to point ought to convey a salutary lesson on the subject of the Church's oneness. The most extraordinary instance, and the one which will obtain most notice, is the fact that Evangelicalism, though so comparatively feeble and despised, yet became, after the rise of Tractarianism, the great force which changed the whole life and aspect of the English Church. After speaking of Newman and Manning, both cradled in the Evangelical faith, and other leaders of the Tractarian movement, Mr. Gladstone says: "They drew scores, aye hundreds, of others in their train, and of all these leaders it must be said that, as they proceeded from Oxford (so to speak) to Rome, so they had already marched from Clapham to Oxford." It is altogether satisfying, amid the changes which Mr. Gladstone traces, to know that he believes that "in respect of its vivifying and restoring influences, the Evangelical movement is one permanent as the Gospel." One word more. Has not the "movement" been treated too much as a natural thing, too little as the work of the Spirit?

We fear there is too much truth in the remark of a reviewer upon "The Work of Lewis Morris." "If he had only been a little indecent, or a little profane, he might have found praise in some quarters where, as it is, he has only encountered blame." The literary estimate of a writer's productions cannot fail to be influenced by moral considerations. What men do not like in the substance, they will not praise for its form. A practical and sound Christianity is not yet a passport to fame.

For undiluted selfishness, which pays no regard to moral considerations, we have not often seen anything to equal that of some of the citizens of Denver, who have presented a petition to the governor of the State in favour of licensing gambling. They are prominent and "respectable" citizens, who deprecate the closing of gambling "hells" as unfavourable to business! Like the upholders of State-regulation of vice, they want the thing done by responsible men, who would conduct it decently under police regulation. When will men learn that you cannot regulate sin? The only way to keep it at all within bounds is to wage against it a war of extermination. The grave bankers of Denver will find gambling a defiant enemy, if they give it legal recognition.

The age of plain-speaking is not quite gone. Hugh Latimer has here and there a worthy disciple. Rev. Dr. Fry, Head Master of Berkhamsted School, used these words lately in a sermon in a London Church:—

There is not an idle man in a London club, there is not a landlord who knows his tenants only through his agent, there is not a woman whose life is spent on a round of amusement, with a few hours of care for finance thrown in—not one of these that is not definitely adding to the toil and sorrow of the working world! The mere legal claim to draw dividends out of our present organisation of society to support absolute idleness is no more ethical, in relation to these, than the once legal right of a tax farmer to squeeze a Roman province!

Let us have all this and more, but let us also have the unspeakable love of Christ to constrain us to righteous and unselfish living.

No one would feel comfortable at the thought of having to spend most of his time with insane persons, and yet, as we have at least 92,000 insane persons, there must be a great number of keepers who have to live this life. The Medical Magazine estimates that we have at least 6000 men and women who earn their living by caring for lunatics. Among male attendants the best are said to come from country youths, who take up the work young and remain at it. According to the writer of this article, asylum nurses have hard times. Their hours are long, and the need of change from their trying work to the company of sane persons is not sufficiently recognised. They seem to be too much left to themselves—another evidence that only by giving and receiving loving attention can men and women be kept right.

The Forward Movement of the London Missionary Society has created a heavy debt, which will, however, be removed by the gifts of the Centenary Year (1895); it has also stirred many young hearts with a zeal for mission work, which apparently cannot be gratified at present. The Board of Directors has already accepted nineteen men and four women for service, whose term of study closes next year; nine more men and women will be ready in 1896. So far as the Board can see these are all most suitable candidates. What is to be done with them? Are they to be declined after having been accepted? Is their hope of service to be disappointed? We trust the directors will not allow dismay to seize them in view of this crisis. The debt will be paid, is practically paid now. The difficulty beyond is an income large enough to meet the cost of the additional missionaries sent out, and this can be raised. An adequate sense of duty and privilege in the hearts of well-to-do Congregationalists would enable them alone to do it. Behind them are the multitude.

---

"The Denudation of the Church" is the title of a paper in The Expository Times, in which Professor Paterson points out that it is somewhat surprising to find in this age of bustling activity "that there is hardly one of the great humanitarian duties required by Christ which she fulfils in its most characteristic and useful form," viz., relief of the destitute, entertainment of strangers, tendance of the sick, and visitation of prisoners. He thinks it is a most noticeable circumstance that the Church is least directly associated with those agencies which most effectively and directly grapple with the principal varieties of human distress. This condition he regards as in startling contrast to the Church's earlier performance, by which he means that of the monastic age. "A divided Church has been forced to concentrate her efforts on the propagation of the Gospel and the support of her clergy." Mr. Paterson has not taken due account of the connexion which has always existed between the preaching of true Evangelicals and these forms of service. We commend this to his notice, as it may be seen in Puritanism, in early Methodism, in the life of the late Mr. Spurgeon, and in the conduct of earnest Evangelicals all the world over.

---

"Because ye were become very dear to us." So wrote Paul to the Thessalonians (1 Thess. ii. 8, R.V.). He had conceived a new affection for them as the result of all his toils and persecutions on their behalf, and also as the result of the readiness with which they had received his message as the word of God. Two things help to create and foster a tender and enduring love between a Christian worker and those for whom he works; indeed, they are necessary. On his part, toil and care and trouble, which make him spend himself; on their part a response to the Spirit of God working through him. A careless worker never can have warm affections; a cold, unsympathetic congregation or people, for whom the work is done, freeze the heart. Then, again, we do well to remember that affection does not generally come with a rush; we "become" dear to each other. Love needs time and opportunity.

---

The law which holds good in the animal world, that the more social animals prevail and preponderate over the unsocial, is a law also among the churches of Christ. Sociality as an expression of Christian love is of the very essence of the Gospel. It ought to know no class, no poverty, no wealth, but should bind the most diverse together. And its existence and vigour do certainly determine to a large extent the power of a church: not wholly of itself, of course, but as representing other gracious things as well as itself. One of the most loudly urged objections against the Church as a whole is its want of sociability; therefore, wherever there is the opposite of this there is a healthy popularity. As a sociable man makes friends, so a warm-hearted church, walking in the fear of God and the comfort of the Holy Ghost, makes converts.

---

The sense of sin, the anguish which it can cause, and the manner in which conscience can be awakened to it, found striking illustration in a story published last week. It appears that the lantern of the Messina lighthouse, which was broken by the recent earthquake in Sicily and Calabria, was replaced by a powerful electric light. The effect upon the peasants of Tauro when they saw such a brilliant and extensive illumination was remarkable. "They prayed and flagellated themselves, and the uproar was only ended by the interference of the police. Further off the coast, on the foothills of the Apennines, some people even went mad. The women beat their breasts, and the men, on their knees, confessed their sins aloud." "Conscience makes cowards of us all." Yet is it cowardice to fear the wrath which conscience tells us is due to our sin? So long as men are oppressed with this fear, so long will there be need for the Gospel which tells of a finished atonement, and of the enjoyment of a present forgiveness. We need not hesitate to appeal, as our Lord and his apostles did, to this sense of fear.

---

A correspondent of The Daily Chronicle draws a very gloomy picture as to approaching distress in the West of Ireland through the failure of the potato crop:—

I can assert without the slightest exaggeration that throughout the West, and especially in the Connemara district, there will be no potatoes worth eating after the middle of January, and this means not only starvation in the spring, but no seed for next year's crop.

The writer urges on the Government the immediate necessity of providing relief works, in the shape of a light railway, which would not only save the people from starvation, but open up a beautiful country. No doubt there will be ample room remaining for the exercise of private charitable help.

---

There is a den at Woodford, which, judging by its pretensions and its promiscuity might well be called the wickedest house in England. Its vile character is well known in its own neighbourhood. Should any of its emissaries, say perhaps a married man, inseparably accompanied by a single woman, or vice versa, make their appearance in any neighbourhood, let all people who wish to be considered decent, beware! "I have written unto you not to keep company with such, no not to eat" (1 Cor. v. 11). "These be they who separate themselves ('cause separations,' R.V.), sensual, having not the Spirit" (Jude 19). "Their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus, who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already, and overthrow the faith of some" (2 Tim. ii. 17, 18). "Holding faith and a good conscience, which some having put away, concerning faith have made shipwreck: of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander: whom I have delivered unto Satan that they may learn not to blaspheme" (1 Tim. i. 20).

World-wide Evangelisation.

Dean Alford writes, commenting on Eph. v. 14: "Wherefore he saith, Up! thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall shine upon thee." This is a paraphrase of the passage in Isaiah lx. 1, 2, 3. There the people are set forth as being in a state of darkness and death—

We grope for the wall like the blind, and even grope as if we had no eyes; we stumble at noonday as in the night. We are in desolate places as dead men (Isaiah lix. 10).

The people are exhorted to awake and become light, for that her light is come, and the glory of Jehovah has risen upon her. The well-known commentary by Jamieson, Fausset, and Brown, on Isaiah lx. 1, says:—

Arise—from the dust in which thou hast been sitting as a mourning female captive (ch. iii. 26; lii. 1, 2), shine—impart to others the spiritual light now given thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.

And now let us quote another, the very aged and beloved author, Wm. Arthur, who, in his celebrated "Tongue of Fire," when describing Pentecost, writes: "They all began to speak. This shows that the testimony of Christ was not borne by the ministry alone; that this chief work of the Church was not confined to official hands. The multitude of believers were not mere adherents, but living, speaking, burning agents in the great movement for the universal diffusion of God's message. Many feel as if religion, on the part of the ministry, was to be a matter of bold and public testimony; but on the part of ordinary Christians, a heart-secret between themselves and God. Let such sit down in sight of that first Christian scene; let them behold every countenance lighted up with the common joy, and hear every tongue speak under the common impulse, and then ask Bartimæus or Mary if the private disciple has not just as much cause to be a witness that Jesus lives, and that Jesus saves, as either James or John? Let them ask if it is like their religion that one lonely minister shall, on the Lord's Day, bear witness before a thousand Christians, who decorously hear his testimony as worthy of acceptance by all, and then go away, and never repeat the strain in any human ear?

"Looking on the universal movement of that Pentecostal day, who could think that the new religion was ever to come down to this? That speaking of its joys, its hopes, its pardon, its mercy for the wide world, was to be considered a professional work, for set solemnities alone, and not to be a daily joy and HEARTS-EASE to ever-growing multitudes of happy simple men?"

I refrain from adding a single word of my own to these learned men, and will conclude by quoting from Acts iv. 31: "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness." And viii. 1, 4: "And they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles." "They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the Word." The commentary above quoted says:—"The Spirit rested on the entire community in the very way they had asked, so that they spake the word of God with [illegible] by ness."

Reginald Radcliff[illegible]

---

A CHILD'S DAY, like the day of a grown person, has its lights and shadows, its trials and anxieties. Temptation has met the little one in the playground, the street, or the school-room, and she has had her fits of naughtiness, her gusts of temper, or her disappointments, as great to her as her father's to him. A cup can be more than full to the brim, let its size be what it may.—Selected.

His Name: An Advent Study.

We speak of the Annunciation, as though to Mary alone, the highly-favoured among women, it was made. But, for an equally definite one we must go back seven hundred years, to the time when Isaiah, with prophetic eye, saw coming events so clearly that his prediction, compared with its fulfilment, reads like veriest history: "Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given." But how is this! We are accustomed to think and speak of the Son of God; but this is a son given to humanity, ours. And this reminds us how the Lord Jesus always assumed this human relationship when speaking of Himself. Demons called Him the Son of God; so did his disciples; so did the voice from Heaven that was heard over the waters of baptism, and on the Holy Mount; but from his own lips there always came the same familiar and endearing title "the Son of Man."

A much-neglected truth comes into prominence here. The law of heredity brought into our history and heritage a fearful curse, when in the sin of Adam all died, not merely to physical immortality, but to inherent righteousness. As Dr. Stalker strikingly says:—

From Adam his children derive a sad double heritage, a debt of guilt which they cannot reduce, but are continually increasing, and a carnal nature which is incapable of righteousness. But Christ is a New Adam, a new Head of humanity, and those who are connected with Him by faith become heirs of a double heritage of a precisely opposite kind. As through our birth in the first Adam's line we get inevitably entangled in guilt, so through our birth in the line of the second Adam we get involved in a boundless heritage of merit, which Christ, as the Head of his family, makes the common property of its members. So, likewise, as Adam transmitted to his posterity a carnal nature, alien to God, and unfit for righteousness, so the New Adam imparts to the race of which He is the Head a spiritual nature, akin to God and delighting in righteousness.

Thus Christ, "as a Son over his own house," has made it possible for us to sing,

"In Him the tribes of Adam boast
More blessings than their fathers lost."

A rather heavy introduction this to a Christmas homily, some may think; but it must always make us glad to look at these strong buttresses of our faith.

We are accustomed at Advent season to dwell on the scenes and circumstances of the Nativity. To-day let us look at the name of the Holy Child—only one, but many-sided, and full of teaching and consolation. "His name shall be called Wonderful." All his people can endorse that title. They have proved in their own experience that there are modes of working known to Him with results unlike anything of an earthly origin. It is difficult in the space of so brief a paper to introduce details, but for the encouragement of some of his distressed and perplexed people, let me instance one that came some time ago under my own notice. A very dear relative was in deep disquiet about temporal difficulties in her home. Her father, who was a corn merchant, had sustained heavy business losses, and serious reverses seemed imminent. Sorely burdened, she prayed earnestly, either for the removal of the trial or for special grace to bear it well, and as she prayed she felt impelled to make what was for her a unusual request—that she might open [illegible] some passage of Scripture that would be a direct message from her Saviour of comfort and good cheer. Then she took up her Bible which opened, so far as she was concerned, at random, and presented to her the following words in one of the minor prophets, words which were comparatively unfamiliar to her, Haggai ii. 18, 19. But the message they bore, though striking in itself, became almost awe-inspiring with the sense of a present God when she suddenly thought of the date, and realised that it was, in fact, the 24th day of September. Can anyone venture to call that a mere coincidence! Need I add that the wonderfully given promise, "From the four-and-twentieth day of the ninth month, from this day will I bless you," was in the most minute and circumstantial manner literally fulfilled.

And as with individuals so with communities. Civilisation may attempt to take hold of the lapsed masses, some of them scarcely human in their degradation, and lift them from the abyss, and it stands defeated in their presence. But the "wonderful" Christ has his agents at work, and as truly as by his word He healed the demoniac of Gadara, He heals to-day, and, equally in the slums of Darkest England and in the wilds of Darkest Africa, He restores true manhood and beauty of moral character to the most degraded.

And He is "Counsellor," too. There are crises in every life that call for special wisdom, and our own, it may be, is utterly at fault, and sometimes the advice of the most trusted friends is either impracticable or unsafe. But let those who have heartily sought Christ as a counsellor say if He has ever failed. He leads the blind by a way that they know not, and faith and patience are often sorely tested by its toilsome windings, but all the time He is surely making darkness light before them, and crooked things straight; and in ways that no human skill could have devised—most striking sometimes from their very simplicity—He justifies their wisdom in committing to Him their cause.

"His name shall be called The Mighty God." Let doubters of his divinity pause here, and explain away this title if they can. To us it is one of the many crowns that He wears in the sight of his own people. But it is an aspect of the Blessed Saviour often kept in abeyance. We ordinarily dwell with devout joy on the sympathy, and the priestly intercession and sacrifice, and the marvellous comprehension of our needs, that make Him so precious as Friend and Saviour. It is reserved for times of giant need to bring out this giant truth, that He is also, for me, The Mighty God. Ah, do not such times come, once or twice at least, in the lives of most, when the malice and craft of men are so cruel, and apparently so successful, that we have no strength at all to crush the wrong or escape the bitter injustice; and earthly friends, pitiful and eager to help as they may be, stand powerless with folded hands, and we at our wits' end? Then is the time for this Name, which is above every name, to flash out in fresh splendour, irradiating the darkest condition with the promise of deliverance. "Fear thou not, for I am with thee, be not dismayed, for I am thy God, I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Let any faint-hearted, sorrowing reader grasp this promise as true, and it will, indeed, be good tidings of great joy this Christmas-tide.

The tenderness comes with the next title, "The Everlasting Father." What a combination: Son, and Father, and God! Well may He be called Wonderful! There are men in the present day, who, under the guise of religious teaching, would detract from the beauty of human fatherhood, who would suggest that a better Divine worship can be offered by those who hold themselves aloof from, or trample upon, human ties of this tenderest relationship. But they cannot blot the fatherly element out of the Bible. It is full of it, both human and Divine. It was an earthly father's love that gave the finishing touch of pathos to the sacrifice of Abraham; that mingled with Jephthah's agony as his daughter came out to meet him; and with David's bitter weeping when Absalom died; and in Divine form it takes the place of honourable precedence in the sacred Trinity, and manifests itself alike in the revelations of the Old Testament, and in the surpassing sacrifice of the New. But Christ is "the Everlasting Father." Can we fathom the meaning? Does it not dimly shadow forth the truth that all the undying tenderness, all the protection, all the providence, all the rewards that we are wont to associate alone with the Eternal Father are ours in Christ? Friend, Happiness-Giver, Mansion-Preparer, Crown-Bestower—Christ is all.

And, lastly, He is named Prince of Peace. We can only here speak of this beneficent aspect of our Lord as it concerns individuals, though much might be said of his benign influence over nations. It was a memorable incident of his earthly life when, one tempestuous night in Galilee, He saw from the mountain heights some of his disciples tossing on the lake, in sore stress and jeopardy, doing their skilful best, but almost hopeless. In a moment He was at hand, and the storm of fear in their hearts, and of wind and wave on the water, were instantly stilled by his word of peace. This is what He is doing continually in human life to-day. Sometimes indirectly, by producing in his followers a self-abnegation and a tolerance and considerateness for the feelings of others, similar, but superior, to the gracious amenity of true good breeding, and which contrast admirably with the loneliness and self-assertion of less disciplined characters. This rule of the "Prince of Peace" over the individual is of priceless value, and would, if more fully established, put an end to the "moral east winds" of worry and murmuring, would check domestic tilts and tiffs, and would blessedly allay strife in the churches.

But there still remain the heavier storms which Christ alone can calm by his direct intervention. The shrill whistling of the tempest of unforgiven sin, the heavy swirl of temptation's waters, the straining of the timbers of the vessel of life in times of bereavement, affliction, or any other adversity; and last of all, the sharp dash of the breakers on the rocks of death—all alike are obedient to his word, if the prayer of our faith bring Him to us, walking on the sea of our trouble. The sadness lies in this—that we are so often content to remain exposed to the blind fury of the storm without crying to Him in our distresses. Let us all be wiser in the coming year.

Percy Park, Tynemouth. M. C. F.

---

LONDON CITY MISSION.—Last week at the Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Great Ormond-street, there was held the third anniversary of Mr. J. J. Browne's work as missionary to public houses in the neighbourhood.

NEW HALL MISSION, WELLINGTON, SALOP.—A memorial has been put up in the large Hall to the late Dr. Cranage. On Sunday week a service in memory of the doctor was held, when there was a large congregation, and Mr. Weston, now director of the mission, read a short statement explaining how the memorial had been raised, and announcing that nearly the whole of the necessary expense had been subscribed, but a little more money was still needed. On behalf of the subscribers and congregation attending the New Hall, he asked Mrs. Cranage's acceptance of the tablet, now placed in the hall, and at the same time handed her a list of the subscribers. The inscription on the brass is—"To the dear and honoured memory of Joseph Edward Cranage, founder of this hall and mission. Born 18th April, 1826. Died 12th November, 1891. 'For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.'"

After the Thousand Years.*

III.—MILLENNIAL SIN AND DEATH.

By Mr. GEORGE F. TRENCH, B.A.

We are not limited to Revelation xx. for our knowledge of the moral character of the Millennium. It is set forth fully in the Old Testament prophecies, notably in the Psalms.

That there will be then an atmosphere of tranquillity, wholly foreign to our present experience, is undoubted. But what is taught us is, that that peace will be mainly superficial and unreal.

Three times in the Psalms we find the submissiveness of the nations of the world to Christ's rule described as "feigned obedience."

Psa. xviii. 44.—"Strangers shall submit [mar., lie, or yield feigned obedience] unto Me."

Psa. lxvi. 3.—"Through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit [mar., yield feigned obedience] unto Thee."

Psa. lxxxi. 15.—"The haters of Jehovah should have submitted themselves [mar., lied, or yield feigned] obedience unto Him."

This, then, is the condition of the world's masses morally. They are strangers to God, enemies to Christ, haters of Jehovah; and that external calm which has so captivated the imagination of Christians is the product of power, not of grace; is the result of fear, not love; and is maintained, as we shall see, by ever-repeated execution of judgment on offenders.

This is set forth specifically in no less than eighteen of the Psalms.†

I shall only refer to a few of them, hoping that the interested reader will himself search the whole list given in the note.

We have already referred to Psalm ii., which from its importance as a Kingdom Psalm cannot be too much relied upon for the character of that age. In Psalm ix. "Jehovah is known by the judgment which He executeth....The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." The beautiful royal Psalm, xxi., assuring to the King, the Risen Man, an eternal enjoyment of his Humanity, shows with what fiery wrath Jehovah will swallow up the enemies of his King. The 45th, revealing the eternal duration of Christ's Kingdom as God, teaches also that in the Millennium his sword and his arrows shall fall sharp and heavy on his enemies. In lix. we read, "Consume them in wrath, consume them, that they may not be; and let them know that God ruleth in Jacob unto the ends of the earth." In lxvi. 7, "He ruleth by his power for ever; his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves." These last words ought to be strongly confirmatory of the evidence of the words, "feigned obedience." Their true state is that of rebels. But the sword ever drawn in the King's hand will prevent their exalting themselves against Him, till Satan is released that their true state may be shown forth. In lxxii., "His enemies shall lick the dust," and the blood of his poor saints (for even murder will sometimes occur) "shall be precious in his sight"; and as we read in ix. 12, He will make prompt "inquisition" for blood shed.

Ps. ci. 4-8.—This Psalm gives us, perhaps, the clearest and most remarkable indication of the regular or normal system of government throughout the millennial reign. It is one of constant, discriminating judgment, detecting, convicting, and punishing by death, all those in whose lives sin breaks out in overt acts. "A froward heart shall depart from Me; I will not know a wicked person. Whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I cut off: he that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight. I will early (or diligently) destroy all the wicked of the land, that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of Jehovah."

Psalm cx. rightly occupies a foremost place in all study of the Kingdom; its opening words being four times quoted in the New Testament, to show their proper application to our Lord Jesus Christ. (See Matt. xxii. 44; Acts. ii. 34; 1 Cor. xv. 25; and Heb. i. 13.) Now what says that inspired utterance, which our Lord has endorsed with his own imprimatur? It confirms Psalm ii. and the others we have referred to in every particular. Christ is to rule in the midst of enemies. His people Israel alone are excepted. He will strike through kings in the day of his wrath. He shall judge among the Gentiles. He shall fill the places with dead bodies. He shall wound the head over many countries.

It is not without regard to the possible effect it may have upon some holding unduly optimist opinions as to millennial beatitude, that I ask attention to the closing words of Isaiah's prophecy, a prophecy, be it remembered, which abounds in glorious presentations of Israel's joy and prosperity in that age. That the time is millennial the whole context shows: ver. 18, "The time cometh that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come and shall see my glory"; ver. 20, "And they shall bring all your brethren out of all the nations for an offering unto Jehovah, . . . to my holy mountain Jerusalem"; ver. 23, "And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before Me, saith Jehovah." Then follow these solemn words, "And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against Me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." This language plainly conveys a continuance of judgments by death throughout the whole course of that age.

I ask my readers if this is exactly the Millennium they have pictured to themselves? Does it convey the idea of a perfect state, of a Kingdom worthy of the Prince of Peace? If anyone replies, "These judgments cannot possibly occur during the progress of the reign, they must be merely initiatory," I ask for some Scripture proof. I challenge the suggestion with great confidence, and point to Isa. lxvi. 23 again, and to Zech. xiv. 16-19, where we are plainly taught that the judgment of a dearth of rain will be inflicted on every nation that shall fail (throughout the thousand years) to send its representatives once a year to Jerusalem to worship. But, even if this theory could be sustained, is it not manifest that a Kingdom, the peace of which is procured and brought about by such means, can be nothing more than what it has been already shown to be, a reign of might, terrorizing, and subjugating opposition, and leaving the world in its spirit, its attitude Godward, its lawlessness, its self-will, its sin, exactly where it is now, albeit outwardly reformed, nominally acknowledging God, and presenting superficially an attitude of law, order, and peace? (See also Micah v. 8-15.)

* Extracted from After the Thousand Years. The Glorious Reign of Christ as the Son of Man in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. (Morgan & Scott.)

† See ix. 7-20; xviii. 42-45; xxi. 1-13; xlv. 1-5; xlvi. 6-11; xlviii. 4-7; l. 3; lix. 13; lxvi. 7; lxviii. 1-30; lxxii. 9-14; lxxvi. 1-12; lxxxiii. 13-18; xcvii. 1-7; ci. 4-8; cx. 2, 5, 6; cxliv. 6-9.

THE ARMENIAN MASSACRES.

The feelings of our Metropolitan community have found vent at an "indignation meeting," held on Monday evening at St. Martin's Town Hall, when Mr. F. S. Stevenson, M.P., presided over a large and representative assembly. Many eminent personages sent letters of regret at absence. The following letter from Mr. Gladstone was read:—"The terrible statements concerning Armenia have riveted the attention of the world, and I heartily wish well to your and to every other effort for bringing out the truth. Should the allegations be sustained they will prompt the civilised world anew to ask how long these things are to be endured. I will not anticipate the result of the examination, but I feel morally certain that the administration will not rest without a most thorough examination of the matter, in which under the Cyprus Convention we have a separate, deep, and painful interest. It is my present duty to hope the Ottoman Government will, for its own honour, cordially concur in this searching examination."

Addresses full of warm protest were delivered by Canon McColl, Mr. C. E. Schwann, M.P., Professor Agar Beet, Mr. F. A. Channing, Canon Gore, Dr. R. F. Horton, Mr. Albert Spicer, M.P., Dr. Newman Hall, Dr. Clifford, and M. Thoumaian. Resolutions were passed, deploring the recurrence of such barbarous deeds, and calling on the British Government to fulfil its treaty obligations to the Armenian people.

Dear Sir,—Are we, as British Christians, awake to our responsibility in the matter of the scandalous misgovernment by Turkey of her Armenian subjects, culminating in the terrible outrages perpetrated at Sasun by regular Turkish soldiers under Zekki Pasha. Outrages consisting in the butchery, and worse, of women and children; outrages so gross that even Turkish soldiers could only be brought to commit them by threats of punishment if they refused; outrages against which the Turkish Governor of the province himself protested and was in consequence removed; but outrages after performing which Zekki Pasha has been honoured by the Sultan's Government.

Had such deeds been done by the troops of any other Power, we, as Englishmen, might have been horrified; but we should have been powerless to do anything. With Turkey the case is different, not because she is weaker than other Powers, and therefore more amenable, but because, by the Treaty of Berlin of 1878, Turkey, in return for the strong influence of England exerted on her behalf against Russia, promised to make reforms in the treatment of her Armenian subjects, and further agreed that the Great Powers of Europe should "superintend their application." (Berlin Treaty, Article 61.) Where are these reforms to-day? sixteen years after the Treaty of Berlin! Echo answers—Where?

By the Cyprus Convention of 1878 England promised to assist Turkey by force of arms in protecting her Asiatic dominions from Russian aggression, and thus deprived the Christians of Armenia of the support of the one Power who had been their friend, and in thus handing them back to the uncontrolled power of the Turk. We asked them to be satisfied with promises from the Turk to treat them better—from England to see that this was done. For sixteen years these promises have been (except in a few isolated instances) a dead letter. It is for Great Britain to say how much longer she intends to be responsible for a policy which results in such massacres as that in Sasun!

What then, as British Christians, is our duty?

I. Prayer.—individual, and when possible, collective. 1. That God would strengthen and guide our Government in bringing about a concert of the European Powers on this question. 2. That, failing a concert of the Powers, Great Britain and Russia might agree upon a common ground of action to compel Turkey to give due guarantees for future good government, and especially to appoint a Christian Governor of Armenia, to be approved by the Powers.

II. Action.—If we pray sincerely, must we not use the powers God has placed in our hand as electors? and seek to influence and support our Government, whether by the Press—public meetings, petitions—or letters to our local M.P.'s.

If we, as British Christians, do not bestir ourselves, the blood of murdered Armenian women and children will rest on us.—Yours sincerely,

Kendal, Dec. 14. T. Crewdson Wilson.

The Meekness of God.

Lucifer.—I will ascend into heaven. I will exalt my throne above the stars of God. . . . I will be like the Most High. I am God: I sit in the seat of God.—Isaiah xiv. 12-14; Ezek. xxviii. 2-19.

Jesus.—I am meek and lowly in heart. I am a worm and no man, a reproach of men and despised of the people. No man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He hath revealed Him. He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father. God...hath in these last days spoken unto us in his Son...who, being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person, when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on High.—Matt. xi. 29; Psalm xxii. 6; John i. 18; xiv. 9; Heb. i. 2, 3.

Evil had its origin, as was shown last week, in selfish pride. The archangel became a rebel. The equilibrium of the universe was deranged, and mere almightiness could not restore it. Lucifer might have been ground to powder, but that would not have readjusted the balance of moral order, any more than the annihilation of a star which had left its orbit (had that been possible) would have restored the balance of the material creation.

Had the fallen angels been utterly destroyed, creation would not have reverted to its first and "very good" condition. An antagonism had arisen for which force was no remedy. The trail of the serpent had defiled heaven. Before the minds of all his created intelligences, this question had been asked, "Has the Creator an indefeasible right to rule?" A host of angelic beings had already answered "No!" They might have been buried in oblivion, but the question would have remained unsolved. That first creation might have been entirely wiped out, as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down (2 Kings xxi. 13). The morning stars which sang together, and all the sons of God who shouted aloud for joy, might have been swept out of existence, but when the Creator had repeopled heaven with an entirely new order of principalities and powers, the same question might recur. Having once been raised, it must without delay be exhaustively and for ever settled. Into the method of its solution by the only wise God, their Saviour, the holy angels desired to look.

Observe: The question before the universe was not, Can man be saved? (for man had not yet been created), but, Can God save Himself from the work of his own hands? Not, Can man be justified notwithstanding his disobedience? but, Is God justified in requiring obedience from his creatures? Shall the Creator or the creature rule creation?

The passionate, tumultuous, and foaming waves dash themselves against the firm, and calm, and silent rocks. The furious pride of Satan is met by the strong meekness of God. The wicked is like the troubled sea when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. The Holy One endures and waits. Everything comes to Him who waits. For of Him, and through Him, and therefore to Him, are all things.

The creation of man in the image of God afforded opportunity for the out-working of this wonderful and fearful problem, which Divine wisdom had eternally foreseen, and which God had provided for before the foundation of the world.

Self in the creature inflated itself and exalted itself to the throne of the Great King. The King emptied Himself, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men, and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself. Sin aspired to rule. Incarnate Holiness became obedient to the death even of the cross. The serpent, gliding to the throne, was rendered powerless by the dying Worm on the accursed tree.

Through weakness and defeat
He won the meed and crown,
Trod all his foes beneath his feet
By being trodden down.

Incarnation was in order to crucifixion; He entered into human life that man in Him might die. He was born in Bethlehem that He might descend into the lowest parts of the earth, and He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that He might fill all things. The Word made flesh took the likeness of sinful flesh, that sin in the flesh might be utterly and everlastingly condemned. As the priest "sinned" the unblemished sin-offering, so God made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him—whom none of the princes of this world knew, for had they known they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory.

See from his head, his hands, his feet,
Sorrow and love flow mingled down;
Did e'er such love and sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?

The foolishness of God is wiser, the weakness of God is stronger, than men or Satan.

M.

CHRISTMAS MEMORIES.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER.

My earliest Christmas recollections take me back to Clapham, and the fine old house on the Common where my grandfather lived, and where the whole family gathered once a year. Christmas has never been the same since that home was broken up. Each family spent the earlier part of the day by itself, with exchange of presents, the welcome of scattered members that gathered from school or business to the home-circle. But in the afternoon there was the converging of all on the one centre, where, after fifty years of married life, the aged pair awaited their nine married sons and daughters, with their partners and the elder grandchildren. Then the same jokes and riddles were propounded, the same stories told, the same fun and frolic had its way; whilst after dinner the same speeches were made, full of family pride and unity and good nature. Again I form part of that gathering, and see the long table spread, surrounded by familiar faces, and hear that buzz of voices, and sit in that circle around the spluttering yule-log in the room where Macaulay is said to have written his history.

Why recall these days, except to urge parents and grandparents to do their best to give bright memories to the children! These are the scenes which get enamelled on young hearts, to abide with them until the vase of life is broken. And, amid the inevitable sorrows of life, it is of unspeakable importance to give the soul some fair pictures to hang in the corridors of memory, on which it may gaze with lingering affection when the scenes of more recent years shall have faded from view. It is the remarkable faculty of age to recall the earlier impressions of life. Many an aged soul, when the far-away look is in the eye, is living over again the days of childhood and youth. Let those who are surrounded by little eager eyes and retentive little memories take care that only holy, sunny, and blessed memories gather around this and all following Christmas Days. No wrangling, no misunderstanding, no clouds on the blue, no drink in the home—one unsullied day of innocent and child-like joy.

PROVIDENCE HOUSE, LEICESTER.

Another type of Christmas Day comes back to me from Leicester, from the days when Providence House was under my care for the benefit of discharged prisoners and others. The early morning was pretty busy with unpacking parcels and clearing away great wrappings of brown paper. One Christmas morning, when I was alone, Mrs. Meyer being away in France for her health, five sweet children came to me by half-past eight in the morning with their Christmas greetings, which they had walked a mile and a-half to bring.

Then morning service, when the families of my people were wont to gather; at least the men, fathers and sons, and the younger children. I always judiciously refrained from inquiring after the wives and daughters that day. One had a dream of snow-white pinafores and floury arms, and dexterous fingers arranging flowers, and hot faces roasting with turkeys before the fire, etc., during the preparations of mince-pies and other delicacies to coax appetites which needed no coaxing, because their owners were set on taking a brisk walk in the crisp air for no other purpose than to get an appetite that would do justice to the fare. What a relief it must be, when men go to service or a walk on Christmas morning, that the women may give their undivided attention to the event of the year!

Few uninterrupted dinners, however, fell to my lot in those days, though it was not for want of invitations. The fact is, I had to go round in a four-wheel cab to pick up the dinner which the ladies of my congregation had provided for my men, whose usual number was greatly augmented by guests whom I had specially invited to spend the day with us. One friend had promised a joint of beef, another a leg of mutton, a third a goose, and so on; while puddings of all sizes, wrapped in white cloths, awaited me at various houses. It was no small business to collect all these articles. I have often hardly had a place to sit on. Puddings to right of me, puddings to left of me, puddings in front, on the seat, on the floor of the cab, threatened by floods of gravy, and steaming with a savouriness which, instead of stimulating the palate, soothed and satisfied it.

Thus I arrived at my destination. The cab was soon emptied of its contents, and in due time the meal began, and after that the speeches and songs. How proud and thankful I was of those gatherings—too full of self-congratulation as it seems to me now—and yet unfeignedly grateful for what God had wrought!

THE JOY OF GIVING JOY.

After all, life has no sweets like these. And surely the heavenly banquet itself will lack some of the sweetest ingredients, unless we know that some are sitting there who would have been absent unless we had given them the loving invitation to be present. Sad indeed is that lot, and pitiable that soul, to which no opportunity is given of making some heart glad and thankful as the Day of Peace and Home returns. Let each of us seek out some lonely one, and, if possible, invite such an one to share in the festal joys of Christmas. Why should not each of our more well-to-do families provide for one or two other families? This might be done by giving money to the pastor for him to distribute. But a still better way would be to ascertain the name and address of some poor neighbour, to learn the number and ages of the children, and to suit the Christmas gifts to their wants. What could be more beautiful and Christ-like than for each family in our congregations, that has no other claims, to put itself into personal touch with some poorer family, the children ministering to the children, the women to the women, and the men to the men?

That is the religion of Jesus Christ, and this is the ideal philanthropy. Give yourself to Him who gave all for you. Go your way, and be glad as a Christian should, in all that is innocent and right; and send portions to those for whom nothing is prepared.—Christ Church Magazine.

DARBY-STREET MISSION.—At King's Weigh House Church Lecture Hall last Tuesday evening, the annual meeting of the Darby-street Mission, London Docks, was held, when the Right Hon. Lord Horace Davey presided, and Rev. Alexander Sandison, Rev. E. Theodore Hitchens, Mr. Kiddle (hon. sec.), and others spoke on its behalf.

THE CORNISH COAST.—The eighth annual meeting of the Chislehurst Auxiliary of the Seamen's Christian Friend Society was held at the Christ Church Schools, Chislehurst, on Thursday, under the presidency of Mr. James E. Vanner. Rev. G. J. Hill gave a résumé of progress made during the year, and adduced reports from the missionary and agents showing what a blessing the Home had been to the seamen. Addresses in support of the work were given by various friends.

Missionary Methods at Home.

By Rev. EDWARD STORROW.

Some men can best fulfil their ministry in one way, some in another. Similarly, the mental, moral, and social condition of races, is so diverse—as, for instance, between Matabele, Arabs, Hindus, and Chinese, and the differences of thought and life, seen among the same people, as in India between the Brahmin, the Shudra, and the Pariah—that while all equally need the Gospel, they can best be won to hear and believe by very different methods. What missionary would not desire to preach the Gospel in a direct form and in a public manner in the open streets of Fez, Mecca, Ghuzni, Khiva, Lhassa, Timbuctoo, and to the native ladies of Calcutta and Delhi; but in the former case the fury of the populace and the assassination of the preacher would be the probable result; whilst custom so restricts the liberty of respectable women in India, that even in cities where the Gospel is preached in the bazaars daily, they are never among the hearers. Hence is suggested to us a wide tolerance, not only of the methods of evangelisation, but also of persons representing a variety of theological opinions and churches, and working on very diverse lines. No nation, no race, no church, no organisation, no method, has a success and blessing, whether regarded as human or Divine, denied to others. Of this fact ample illustrations could be given, and the lessons it suggests are obvious.

MUTUAL FORBEARANCE.

Methods there must be; and it gives strength and directness to all workers to have confidence in those they use. But it is important, that along with this confidence in our own, there should be a willingness to admit that they might not be quite as suitable for other hands, or fit for other spheres, and that there is in the sphere of missions, as in other spheres, a wide range of subjects—open questions—which affect no essential principle, and where the apostolic injunctions of Paul in Romans xiv. and xv. should rule.

Much attention should be paid to the grounds on which appeals for interest and aid in behalf of foreign missions are made. Lower rather than higher motives are too often appealed to, and for this reason the results are inadequate and evanescent. Every speaker on Missions ought to aim at some definite result, and if he has no statement of facts to make, he cannot urge higher motives or any more likely to be effective, than pity for the heathen, sympathy with the Saviour's command and desire, "to seek and to save that which was lost" and the honour and glory of God.

THE COMMITTEE OR COUNCIL.

Grave responsibility rests on all bodies, whatever their name, who conduct missionary affairs. The opinion formed of the society and the work, the enthusiasm or apathy with which it is regarded, the efficiency and happiness of its representatives abroad, and the blessing or lack of blessing in its spheres, depend largely on them. The selection of these, by whomsoever made, is a grave responsibility, too little considered; for those frequently are chosen for such positions who have no knowledge of missionary affairs, no earnestness in their behalf, and now and then something worse than apathy. The policy to be pursued at home and abroad, the selection of missionaries, the collecting and expenditure of sacred funds, the cultivation of the missionary spirit at home, and the selection of spheres of labour and methods of operation abroad, chiefly rest with them, therefore the best, wisest, and most zealous should be chosen.

ADVERSE CRITICISM.

Methods for the missionary education alike of the Church and the world require much attention. The latter ignores the supreme subject in its newspapers and magazines, and is usually more willing to receive statements reflecting on missions, than any illustrative of their efficiency and success. The usual policy of leaving adverse criticisms unanswered is open to question, whilst it is certain that efforts should be made to give missionary information wherever it will be received, and to show on the acknowledged grounds of reason, civilisation, benevolence, and humanity, that missions are worthy of respect and honour, and something more.

Two things are greatly to be desired, a more abiding consciousness of the grand and divine qualities of the missionary enterprise and more systematic endeavours to aid it. If there were the former, and Christians were missionaries in conviction and aim, as a matter of course, and as the direct outcome of their relations to God and the Saviour, all else would follow. Prayers, gifts, aid, whatever was required, would not be dependent on success, popularity, meetings, advocacy, but would naturally move toward the desired end and aim, as the stars in their circuits, and rivers to the sea. But our defectiveness justifies the use of methods, that the young and the weak may be educated and trained toward true conceptions of our subject; and that all may do their part, and share according to the light they have, and the means they possess.

Aid and training would best be secured if

SOME SUCH METHODS

as the following were generally adopted:—

1. A missionary auxiliary with a specially appointed treasurer, secretary, and collectors, and a monthly prayer meeting, and annual public meeting, in every place of worship.

2. Missionary boxes with a quarterly address in every Sunday-school.

3. A box and a missionary magazine in every Christian household.

4. A gift or a subscription, weekly, monthly, or annually, from each professing Christian.

MISSIONARY TRAINING.

The training of missionaries nowhere receives the attention it demands. There are spheres where but little training is needed, but there are many more where some, and not a few where much, would be of the highest service. There are principles and methods of action, respecting which all need instruction, seeing that every missionary holds relations more or less close to those who send him, to fellow-labourers, and to the people among whom he lives. Everyone who goes to live and labour in a foreign land is far more likely to retain health and vigour, and commend himself and his message to others, if he knows something of the country where he is to labour, and of the character, state, religion, and usages of the people. And it is of the first importance that a large proportion of those sent to lands where the great, strangely powerful, and intensely though painfully interesting systems of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Mohammedanism dominate over one-half the human race, should have some acquaintance with them. And the more the better, for each one of these religions has features requiring patient and prolonged study, and the better they are understood the more effectively they can be dealt with, since the people are acute thinkers and reasoners, and have an appreciation of learning beyond what is common in Europe, so that a missionary who has the repute of being a learned man, is received with a deference and respect, unfortunately not accorded to such among ourselves.

A desideratum of great importance is a missionary college on a broad, unsectarian, but evangelical basis, not to supersede existing theological institutions, or to teach all that missionaries need to know, but where all accepted by missionary bodies might receive a general missionary training, and a special one relating to the sphere in which they were to labour; where books might be consulted and lectures delivered on all the leading features of heathen religions, and the history, philosophy, principles, and methods of missions, and which might not only be attended by accredited missionary students, but be open on easy conditions to others.

When will the missionary societies combine to found such a college, or unite in encouraging its foundation?

One of the noblest and best uses to which some wealthy men could devote a few thousand pounds, would be to found or initiate the foundation of such an institution.

EFFORT IN ALGERIA.

Mr. A. V. Liley, of Mostaganem, Province of Oran, Algeria, writes:—I have been invited to give lessons in arithmetic to the 'imam' and students in the great mosque, and I am much encouraged by the influence I have thus been enabled to exert. By patient kindness and attention I have removed a great deal of prejudice; now the Mohammedans quietly and reasonably discuss religious matters, whereas formerly they would scarcely deign to listen to the infidel.

Another theme of thanksgiving is the coming out to Algeria of my wife's sister, who hopes in future to live and witness for Christ in North Africa. She has gone up to Tlemçen to study Arabic for a year, there being greater facilities for study in that town than at Mostaganem. We hope in due time she will return to this town and work among the Arab women and children.

We continue to carry on the Sunday-school for the Spanish children, who come in good numbers, notwithstanding the opposition of the Roman Catholic priests. Some of the children attending our school are being prepared for their first communion by the priests, who have also threatened to excommunicate them if they come to us. On my bicycle several journeys have been made into the country. At this time of the year a great number of Spaniards are employed in repairing the roads, and with many of these I have had conversations and have given them copies of the Scriptures.

OPEN DOORS IN ITALY.

At Revere, near Mantua, nearly 200 people are weekly listening eagerly to God's Word; at Brescia our brother Dr. Gay is succeeding in his evangelistic work, greatly encouraged by a good audience. It is the same in Turin, Genoa, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Palermo, and we hope for a very rich harvest. In September we inaugurated the first Protestant Refuge in Italy for Aged Christians, and in November a very nice little church at Piedicavallo, at the foot of the Alps. True, clericalism is awakening in Italy, but faithful Christians are not sparing their strength, and read and work with energy and faith. C. A. Tron.

Turin.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.—The purest and sweetest and tenderest thing upon earth, is the over-hanging heart of a mother upon the cradle that has in it the little nothing which we call a babe that receives everything and returns nothing. Yet the love of the mother is but one drop of the ocean as compared with the love of the great Father of mankind—infinite, infinite!

The Evangelist.

"IN THE THIRD WATCH OF THE NIGHT JESUS CAME."

BY HENRY VARLEY.

I was sitting in the house of some friends with whom I was staying in London. I had just returned from Singapore. It was in May of 1892. A servant entered. "If you please, sir, there is a gentleman in the dining-room who particularly wishes to see you." "Do you know who he is?" I inquired. "No, sir. I only know that the same gentleman called early this morning. I told him that you were in the north of England, but you were expected to return this evening."

It was Saturday night, not far from 10 o'clock. The earnest purpose of my visitor struck me. I found a man of gentlemanly bearing, who inquired, "Am I addressing Mr. Varley?" "You are," I replied. "Oh, sir, I am so glad to see you. Thank God for this hour. I have longed to see you, and now God has granted my heart's desire. Excuse my warmth of feeling," he said, as he grasped and held my hand; "but, under God, I owe all that I am and have to you."

The strong form and open, hardy face of the second officer of one of England's great commercial fleet stood before me, and I replied, "I am indeed glad to see you; but what is the cause of the blessing of which you speak?" "Why, sir," he rejoined, "I count this one of the most blessed hours of my life, to have been permitted to see you. I have come direct from Antwerp, where my vessel is lying at anchor; I told our captain that I must go to London. My earnest desire was to find you out, and I have done so, praise God."

"What!" I rejoined; "do you mean that you have come all the way from Antwerp to find me?" "Yes," he replied; "and if the distance had been three times as great, I should have done so." "Well, this is remarkable. Why, we reside in Melbourne, and it is quite an exception that you should have found me here. Tell me, now, how you have been helped." "Well, sir, I never saw you before, but about two years since some friend sent me a copy of your pamphlet, 'The Curse of Manhood.' I'll never forget the effect produced by reading that lecture so long as I live. It roused me up thoroughly. It showed me that I was all wrong, and I tried my hardest to live a different life. The more I tried the worse I found I was—just a miserable captive, constantly overcome by the tyranny of my evil passions and sins. I was almost driven to despair.

"Of course, I could not go on as I had done. The fear of God began to influence me, and I soon ceased to swear at my men, which, I am ashamed to tell you, I used to do. All on board began to see a difference, and that something had happened to me, but I was still in awful bondage to my sins. I kept on, however, crying to God, for I was in terrible darkness of soul. Thus many weeks passed. Well, sir, on November 1 last, we were rounding the Cape of Good Hope. It was my watch on deck from midnight to 4 a.m. It was a very dark night, but the darkness of my heart and mind was far more dense. I cried to God in great agony as I paced the deck, and in one brief minute Christ Jesus was suddenly revealed to my soul by the blessed God, and from that hour to this I have been a free man. The Lord be praised for all his goodness and mercy to me, and oh! sir, I do thank you for the blessing and complete change which has come to my soul."

Need I say that we rejoiced together. "Can you not stay over the morrow? I am to preach Christ in one of the churches near by, and we should be delighted to see you?" "No, sir. I am going to Liverpool by the mail, and I return to Antwerp as quickly as possible." "Why do you go to Liverpool?" I inquired. "To see my father, to tell him that I am a saved man and that Christ has been revealed to me." "Is your father a Christian?" I asked. "I am not sure, sir. He is a Methodist, but whether he has received Christ is what I want to know."

It was delightful to mark the surprising intelligence of this man, regenerated by Divine power a few months before, amid the darkness of the sea. Surely his path is in the deep waters, his footsteps also where welcome human ministry is not available. "And how have you been progressing since that eventful night?" I inquired. "Praise his name, well," my friend rejoined. "Of course, sir, the change was observed by others, and the third mate, who occupies part of my cabin, soon became impressed. We read the Scriptures and prayed together, and the Lord Jesus was revealed in him also."

"Well, this is deeply interesting, and full of cause for joy," I remarked. "Yes," said the officer, "the Lord is indeed a wonderful Saviour, for in a little the chief, who had evidently noticed the work of grace in our hearts, became interested also. Whether at first he was pleased or not with what he saw I am not sure; but one day he came to my cabin. Addressing me by name, he said, 'I have been reading in the New Testament where it says, "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven." Now, sir, your righteousness is no better than that,' he said, with some warmth. 'Chief,' I replied, 'my righteousness is first rate,' and then you know, sir, I told him of the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all, and upon all them that believe, for there is no difference, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.

"Well, sir, in a little the same wonderful Saviour was revealed to the chief officer also, and now we are all three on the Lord's side. We are not ashamed to tell in the forecastle amongst our men what the Lord has wrought, for He has done great things for us, whereof we are glad." It was now nearing 1 p.m. I could not longer detain my newly-found friend. With hearty and fervent commendations to the God of all grace we parted on that eventful night to meet again in the morning of the day "without clouds" when Christ shall appear and we shall be like Him.

Then will we take up again our converse concerning this unseen but effectual ministry amongst those off the Cape, "who go down to the sea in ships, to do business in great waters." These shall tell of the wonders of his grace made known when tracking many a dark and despairing experience. These also shall tell how, whilst rounding the black cliffs of apparent destruction, they found Him who "giveth liberty to the captives," who breaketh in pieces the oppressor. He hath said it, and shall He not make it good." If the Son shall make you free, you shall be free indeed.

Whether the castle of grim Giant Despair, or the Lord's Cape of Good Hope, there is and can be no failure where He is, of whom it is written "God hath raised up his Son Jesus, and sent Him to bless you in turning every one of you from his iniquities." Captives of sin and Satan, be of good cheer, there is strength with Him who guides the stars in their courses, for that He is strong in power, not one of these faileth.

THE DISTRESSED SOUL.

"Let the sighing of the prisoner come before Thee."—Ps. 79, 11.

Is it indeed too late, too late?
Does truth retain no open gate?
Is there no way to enter in?
No expiation for my sin?

Is there no heart to brave the worst?
No hand which will my fetters burst?
O human love! O love divine!
Have ye no chords to answer mine?

O smitten Rock, thy sacred cleft
Invites no other refuge left;
Tho' none had tenderness beside,
In thy great tenderness I hide.

Here, from the sacred crimson stream,
The broad, bright belts of mercy gleam,
Here, from the deepest depths of shame,
Is found forgiveness "through the Name."

Give me, O Living Bread, to feed
On Thee, and satisfy my need.
Touch with thy piercèd hand my chain,
And not a fetter shall remain.

O Lord of Lords, O Light of Light,
Faith climbs to thee from death's dark night,
Thyself the antidote of care,
The sweet "Amen!" to life's long prayer.

LUCY A. BENNETT.

A LARGE PUBLIC MEETING, under the auspices of the British Women's Temperance Association, was held at Clapton Park Congregational Church, on Friday, Dec. 7. Several pledges were taken and new members gained.

"SO AS BY FIRE."

BY DR. T. J. BARNARDO.

IN his January issue of Night and Day, which is about to be published, Dr. Barnardo thus tells the story of one of his recent rescues:—

"In a vile and noisome den—the abode of a thief and his paramour—two fair little children were discovered a little while ago. They were not the offspring of the degraded couple who had them in charge. The owners of these innocents were arrested, and their dwelling searched for stolen goods, and so the children were found. The little ones were mere infants, having scarcely reached their fifth and sixth years respectively. They had been in the custody of these people, so far as it could be discovered, for at least eighteen months, but where they came from previously no one knew.

"Their physical condition beggared description. Clad only in fœtid rags, worn to skeletons, hollow-eyed and shrivelled, they looked more like monkeys than human beings. It was ascertained that both children were insured, and that the insurance money had been regularly paid. There could be no doubt, as the judge said, that this hardened and wicked pair had compassed the death of the unfortunate children who were in their care. It was not through their kindness that the little ones had escaped thus far. The misery in which the children were found reached deeper down than clothing or outward appearance, for both the unhappy little mites had been deliberately taught lessons of the vilest profanity and obscenity. Had they been older, the stain would have been ineradicable.

"It is difficult to portray fully a case like this. One cannot, in a decent journal, set forth all the facts. Assuredly, however, the children were 'saved as by fire.' No fireman ever did worthier work than in that rescue, nor were children ever more certainly redeemed from the power of the grave. After a few weeks of proper food and care and decent clothing and kindly attention, the physical change which took place in them was hardly short of miraculous. The fair little creatures, with gentle looks and loving affectionate ways, were literally transformed. It was difficult to believe that the awful photograph taken of them on admission could possibly represent the couple of sweet little children now enjoying the tender care to which such infants have a prescriptive right.

"Up to the time of writing I have only received one or two responses towards enabling me to claim four challenge gifts. But it is 'early days,' for I am writing necessarily a long time in advance, and I earnestly hope and pray that these proposed offerings may be laid upon the hearts of my helpers far and near, so that these gifts may every one be added to our needy treasury early in 1895. These gifts were as follow: Mr. T. A. Denny offered £100 if nine others would each give a like sum; Beta offered £50 if nineteen others would do likewise; Miss X. offered £25 if twenty others would do the like; and Mr. Howard Williams offered £10 if forty-nine friends would each do likewise. These challenges await friends to take them up. Who will do so, and do so promptly?"

18 to 26, Stepney-causeway, London, E.

GREENLAND.—The Moravian missionaries settled here report last winter up to the end of April as characterised by extreme severity. The Danish missionaries are still hard at work on the translation of the New Testament. From a comparison of the statistics for the thirty-one years ending 1891, it seems that the Greenlanders are not slowly dying out, as is generally believed. In a population of more than 10,000 the births exceeded the deaths by 583. A new Arctic mission has been opened by Rev. Edmund J. Peck, of the Church Missionary Society, on Blacklead Island, about forty miles from the entrance of Cumberland Sound, among the Eskimos who there help the whalers.

THE LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE SOCIETY (20, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.) is appealing to the public for funds to meet the heavy costs entailed by the recent law suit to determine the legality of certain Sunday amusements at which a charge is made for admission. The secretary, Dr. Peake, writes:—"We succeeded in proving their illegality, but the Courts held that the persons we were advised to prosecute are not legally responsible. The costs of the action will therefore fall on us; but we appeal for help in order that the ordinary funds of the society, and the general work to which they are devoted, may not be crippled by this adverse decision."

UNITED PRAYER MEETINGS.

On Friday last three meetings were held in St. Martin's Hall, Trafalgar-square, organised by a union of Protestant and Evangelical societies for humiliation and prayer to God. In all forty-four agencies joined in the invitation, which indicated the terrible spread of Romanism and ritualism, infidelity and indifference, as calling for urgent prayer. The weather was very unfavourable, but the meetings were numerously attended. Brief addresses were given, and the petitions were, for the most part, pointed in character and fervent in tone.

In the morning, Mr. W. H. Seagram presided; and Prebendary Webb-Peploe, having read Eph. vi. 10-20, delivered an address on the teaching of the Epistle in general. Coming to the concluding chapter, he showed that the first three weapons in the Christian's armour seemed to touch upon the persons of the Trinity, and the last four upon the experimental or personal side of things. There is, first, the truth of God; then the righteousness of Christ; and, thirdly, the peace which comes through the Holy Ghost. The last of the other four is "all prayer and supplication," and he felt almost disposed to defy anyone to give a full, clear, and perfect explanation of the reason and meaning of man being told to pray. God is waiting to give; salvation has been purchased by Christ; the Holy Spirit is ready to grant us a realisation of the heavenly blessings. Yet we must pray! Though we cannot fully explain prayer, we might say that it stirs up believers, quickens the spiritual life, and binds the Church together; if so, then, though we cannot understand the rationale of prayer, we should make strenuous endeavours to "pray at all seasons in the Spirit, watching thereunto in all perseverance."

The speaker went on to say that it is his habit every year to stimulate Bible study among the young people connected with his church. During the vacation this year he asked them to find out what the Bible tells us about prayer, and the result was quite a surprising collection of facts and testimonies. It seems that the Bible records, irrespective of the Psalms, 667 cases of direct personal prayer for a specific purpose, and 454 answers to those prayers were discovered. Further, it was found that no less than thirty-five different conditions were attached to successful prayer—conditions to be fulfilled on our part. Having intimated that he intended publishing these lists in the January number of his parish magazine, the speaker emphasised the importance of persistent prayer.

In the afternoon Sir William Willis presided, and an address was delivered by Rev. F. B. Meyer, founded on Acts iv. 23-33. At the outset, he compared the state of the Church of God in England in our own day to the condition of things in the primitive Church in Jerusalem, though, instead of the persecution which then prevailed, we have to deal with the forces of ritualism, materialism, and infidelity. There is a tendency among men to put God's power back into the past or forward into the future; but the Apostles realised that the power that wrought in creation and inspiration still works in the Church.

Materialistic disregard of God and his interposition in human affairs is to-day found not only among the masses who take no interest in Divine worship, but also in circles in which the Scriptures are perversely criticised, and their integrity and authority disparaged. It seemed to him to be an important mission of the Church to-day, to bring men back to a belief in the supernatural. To this end there must be the twofold witness of the Church and the Holy Ghost (Acts v. 32). In conclusion, Mr. Meyer spoke of the union of the Church in her Head, and urged hearty co-operation in earnest testimony, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

In the evening Colonel Morton presided. Dr. Newman Hall, in his address, bore testimony to the steady spread of sacerdotal ritualism, both in towns and villages. Three weeks ago he saw in a Midland town a large poster at a church door announcing a requiem service at 7 a.m., and another in the evening, on All Saints' Day, and also a dedicatory service on the occasion of erecting in the church "two large stone figures" of St. Mary and St. Stephen. The test of Romanism was the doctrine of the Priesthood. Those who recognised Christ as the sole priest of mediation and all believers without distinction as priests together of service, were fellow Protestants whatever their variety of ritual and government; while they who also recognised an intermediary priesthood, with power to convey spiritual benefits; to transmute bread and wine into the body of Christ, to offer this as a sacrifice to God, to demand confession and to bestow absolution, were in reality Romanists, though not in visible union with the Pope. To expose and resist their assumptions was to assail, not the Church of England, but its secret foes and betrayers.

Let believers of all denominations concur in prayerful efforts to maintain Scriptural Protestant Christianity; this would best promote and illustrate real catholicity. Let all believers recognise their Scriptural priesthood—holy in heart and life, offering the sacrifices of prayer and praise, of self-denying philanthropy, of obedience to God, of teaching every one his neighbour to know the Lord, of warning sinners of their danger, and assuring the penitent in Christ's name of absolution through the sole merits of Christ, the remission of sins by the blood of the Cross; then the claims of a false priesthood would be best refuted, all Christians living a priestly life and zealous in priestly works. It was true loyalty to the Church of England to resist the sacerdotalism which was at variance with its true character, which hindered its usefulness, and which endangered its very existence.

"NON INFERIORA SECUTUS."

(I seek not things below.)

"Margaret of Valois, sister of Francis I., seeking in nature symbols that might express the felt want and desire of her soul, chose for her emblem (says Brantome) the sunflower, which in its flower and leaf has most resemblance to the sun, and turning follows its course. She added this device signifying that her actions, thoughts, purposes, and desires were directed to that exalted Sun—namely, God. Whereupon it was suspected that she had imbibed the religion of Luther. In fact, the Princess shortly after experienced the truth of that word, 'All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.'" (Vide Merle-d'Aubigné's History of the Reformation, Vol. 3, page 485.)

The Princess Margaret mused within her bower
In mood between a yearning and a calm,
Tracing the legend round her emblem flower
And whispering with a sigh, "Ainsi mon âme."

Pure glistening pearl, set lustrous and alone
In the gay ring that Francis round him drew!
There scarce a heart turned heavenward save thine own
To its celestial "King and Brother" true.

Yet what if now a fairer, wider day
Be dawning in the long veiled skies of France,
With hymn-note sweeter than Provençal lay,
And nobler triumphs than of old romance.

What if once more her watchword be the Cross—
No thing of art by cunning carver made,
Nor such as o'er hot plains of blood and loss
Her knightly Louis bore in fierce crusade.

What if she wipe out from her fleur-de-lis
The stain of St. Bartholomew's dark night,
Weep for her oar-chained exiles of the sea,
Her trampled sons—the slain, the lost by flight!

What if her soil, sown with the Church's blood—
The blood even of its tender infancy*—
Should bear a bounteous harvest unto God,
Fruits of old martyrdoms, long crowned on high!

Oh! what if France, drawn by the beams of grace,
Like the flower still with damps of darkness wet,
Turn to those gladdening rays her tear-stained face,
Irradiate with a Sun that ne'er shall set!

(Mrs.) A. R. Cousin.

* The martyrs of Lyons and Vienne.

SHEFFIELD.—The annual report of the workmen's meetings and P.S.A. states that men are reached who never darken a church or chapel door. The past year has been one of great success. Every Sunday the Montgomery Hall is filled twice, while the two other halls have been used as overflows. A small hall in Ball Lane is open every night. The P.S.A. flourishes greatly, in fact the whole work is active and fruitful. The spiritual results are marvellous. Every Sabbath evening, and often during the week, when the Gospel has been preached, men and women have been convinced of sin, and in the after-meeting have publicly renounced it. The president is Mr. A. S. O. Birch, St. Peter's Close, Sheffield.

THE LATE W. I. PALMER.

The very interesting article on the late Mr. Palmer, of Reading, contributed by Mr. William Noble to the Friends' Quarterly Examiner, has been issued in separate form (4d. West, Newman, & Co., Hatton Garden). It embodies many personal recollections that reveal in a vivid way the truly noble and unselfish nature of the man. We append a few extracts:—

"He never spared himself or his wealth in the public and private demands which were constantly made upon him. His philanthropy knew no bounds; he literally poured his money into the Lord's treasury. When the question of purchasing Hoxton Hall came to be considered, it was proposed to raise the money by public subscription, but when the negotiations were completed, he paid the whole sum required—an entirely unsolicited action. Wherever you turn in London and the country, you meet with the results of his generosity, both as regards individuals and institutions. He was literally a prodigal in philanthropy. I have known him to spend an unheard-of sum of money in trying to save one victim from the drink. After failing in the attempt, he would try again and again. He would make the strictest inquiries respecting individuals, and in the face of most discouraging reports strive to discover their 'bright spot.'

"Instances have been known where persons have gone to him in the strictest confidence to inform him of objectionable features in cases he was interested in. He would often reply that he 'knew of it.' A friend met him one day and said, 'Do you know that X—— is deceiving you?' This was meant in the sense of robbing. 'Yes,' replied William Palmer; 'I know it. The responsibility rests with him. It pays to be robbed sometimes.' Some of us may not appreciate the ethical fitness of this remark, but it offers food for thought, and suggests the man better than any analysis.

"Quite an army of persons in all grades of society whom he helped comes before me, and not all failures by any means. During my travels in Canada, America, Africa, and the Australasian colonies, I came in contact with men and women who had been helped to a better life, thus proving that his efforts were constantly bearing fruit, in spite of many discouragements. He often repeated, 'It is ours to do the right and leave results with God.' Many of his methods of giving cannot be understood by some people. For instance, to stock a man's shop with goods is one thing, but to pay for them twice over by giving money to someone to buy the goods back might be considered anything but a prudent course. One thing is certain, his motive was to do good and his heart was tender. He was constantly devising fresh methods of helping people. He has been known to make a farm tenant a present of cattle, and thus reduce his rent.

"One feature which always impressed me was his knowledge of and love for the Bible. He believed that the Old Testament, when devoutly read, had a marked effect in building up character. During the closing years of his life he gave away a large number of copies of the Revised Version, with a request that they might be studied.

"One of his leading characteristics was his broad charity and forgiving spirit. Some did not understand him, because he lived above the common plane, and I believe his life was one prolonged prayer. He was diplomatic to a degree, but with pure intention. He would sacrifice money and his own comfort rather than take sides in a quarrel, even when he knew where the wrong existed. In fact he would do anything short of sacrifice of principle to yield a point."

THE BAND OF HOPE UNION announce that the sum required for a five years' village campaign has been secured, and that Mr. Adkins is now at work in Lincolnshire, hoping later on to visit villages in Sussex, Berks, and Devon.

FRENCH BARGEES.—Madame Cadot (née Tilly, of Cardiff), writes from Chawny, Aisne, France, that she has been enabled to commence a quiet work of visitation and evangelisation among those living in barges that frequent the canals in that district. The canals are freely used, and sometimes 200 boats pass through in the course of twenty-four hours. Always on the move, the boat-dwellers have no spiritual opportunities such as they would have on shore. Madame Cadot says they are simple, kindly folk, with apparently no religious prejudices; they willingly listen to God's Word, and join reverently in prayer.

IN THE CANADIAN CARS.

By J. E. BUDGETT MEAKIN.

"Glad to see you show your colours so bravely." "Yes, we found it very helpful in our parish, but I thought of discontinuing it abroad."

The two speakers, wearers of blue-and-white ribbons on their coats, stood on the platform of a Canadian Pacific railway car, en route for Vancouver. Strangers no longer, their conversation soon drifted to topics that showed them to be linked by more than temperance principles, for both were children of the King. Fellow-Christians were soon discovered on board, including eight lady missionaries of different societies bound for China, and some earnest farmers going West to settle, as well as a Christian Jap. A still more pleasant surprise was the discovery of a dozen or more among 150 Chinamen on board who professed Christianity, and as many more who had been Sunday scholars in the States.

No time was lost in making arrangements for meetings during the week of the trip, and by the courtesy of the successive conductors these were held regularly in the dining car—Bible and prayer meetings for Christians in the mornings, services of song for the Chinese and public Gospel meetings in the afternoon, while on one evening a costume lecture on the Moors was given by the writer. Altogether, the journey which had been looked forward to with dread by many, judging only from experiences in our little island home, passed all too quickly, for we had blessed times. One needs, however, some idea of the geography of these luxurious American trains, on one of which I write, to understand the possibility of such experiences as we have had, and the enterprising Canadian Pacific line is well to the fore with every improvement. The corridor system being universal, intercourse among the hundreds on board is unrestricted, and between meals the dining cars are always available for entertainment. It is a wonder that they are not more often requisitioned for Gospel work by Christian travellers; perhaps the experiences here narrated may afford suggestions to others. Many saunter into the meetings out of curiosity, or to while away the time, whom it would be difficult to induce to attend a regular place of worship, and those who come cannot fail to be blessed. Many of the train employés said it was quite a treat for them, their opportunities of attending services were so scant. An American Bishop recently described before an English audience the work accomplished in his cathedral, the smallest known, a specially built car, 90ft. by 10ft., followed by the one in which he lived.

As far as Winnipeg the party of Christians included Rev. Louis Byrde, of the Student Volunteer Missionary Union, who is addressing various American colleges on his way to take up mission work in Hawaii and the S.P.G. The Americans of the party were from Mr. Simpson's "Christian Alliance" in New York. Later on, an American Methodist missionary and his wife, returning to China, joined the party, and as several more are to meet at Vancouver to cross in the same vessel, a continuation of these good times is confidently expected.

Some most encouraging testimonies were contributed by passengers picked up en route, and several testified to blessing received. One old farmer told how "It warn't no long sermons as brought me in, but jest what I heard an old Methodist brother say in a prayer-meeting once, when I was a lad of seventeen. I knew times were bad for him, with a large family and what not, and when I heard him stand up there and say how good the Lord had been to him, and the tears running down his dear old wrinkles, and I knew he meant it, says I to myself, 'That's summat like a religion, and there'll come a time as I shall be wantin' it too.' So I made sure of it there and then, by just taking God at his word. And I tell you what, boys, I ain't sorry for't yet, nor ain't likely to be."

At the Sunday afternoon service, one of our fellow-passengers, a young man, gave his heart to God, but he was not the only one helped.

At one point a German minister came on board, who joined in, in his mother tongue, and related how three years ago last August he had fallen in with another band of missionaries westward bound, in charge of a venerable gentleman whose name he knew not, who had sung all day in the cars. God grant that many more such may follow in their footsteps. One old gentleman declared that he could never tell the good done to his own soul by contact with the young ladies who were leaving their happy homes to bear the Gospel to the heathen; he had spent his days for the most part far away from Christians, and the time passed on that train would never be forgotten. Another, who returned with added zeal to his work as a result of these times of refreshing, was a Baptist missionary to the Indians. None of us failed to enjoy and benefit from our somewhat novel experiences in a railway train.

British Columbia, November 10.

AGGRESSIVE WORK.

Last year I was staying a short time at the pretty little village of Ingleton, in the land of waterfalls, "with its fountains and streamlets and grottoes." It lies about twenty miles east of Lancaster. One Sunday evening, when all right-minded people had wended their way to the house of prayer, I strolled through the village in search of opportunities of usefulness. The short, narrow streets were silent and almost empty, but when passing along a fine rising road towards the outskirts, I suddenly came on a company of about twenty working men clad in their Sunday best. They were lounging about and sitting upon a substantial wall about four feet high, from which they had rather a picturesque view over the valley and stream below, and across the country to the distant hills.

It was a fine balmy evening, and this was evidently the customary resort of the men before me, in preference to darkening the church doors hard by. Immediately I brought myself to a standstill, feeling convinced I had found my work for the evening. I said, "Well, friends, I wonder how many of us have got our souls saved?" They all looked at me, and one replied, "That's a pretty hard question to answer." I said, "If it's hard to tell, then God cannot have treated us fairly, and therefore is not a God of love. Now, I think we all believe He is a God of love, consequently He must have made it a simple matter; and if we think it hard it is because we have neglected it. 'How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?'"

I believe more men are going to hell by neglect than anything else. We read that, "The way of transgressors is hard," and "The wages of sin is death," but the way of salvation is so simple that Isaiah says, "wayfaring men though fools shall not err therein"; and when the Philippian jailor asked Paul, "What must I do to be saved?" he did not tell him to do his best and not do anybody any harm, but he told him to "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Nothing could be simpler, as believing is trusting in Jesus, and surrendering to Him.

Another man said his religion was to do to his neighbour as he wished his neighbour to do to him, and if he did that he thought he would not be far wrong at last. This appeared to meet with general approval. But I went on to show that none of us did it, and even if we did it could not save us, or Christ lived and died in vain; that God did not send us into the world to save ourselves by doing our best, but "the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world," and we must, in our helplessness, just let Jesus save us by trusting in Him; that this could be done at once if we were willing, for "Now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation." Another said he did not believe in instant salvation; and another thought the whole affair was a matter of opinion; and yet another said he did not believe in carrying his religion about on his coat-sleeve, and those who did it were generally the worst.

However, I dwelt upon each point suggested, and invited further questions, remarking that I was not a parson but a business man, having to work for my living as they had, yet I would try and answer any questions they put to me. I told them that I had been a saved man for nearly thirty years, and it had filled my life with sunshine; consequently I could recommend it to all who wanted a joyous, gladsome, happy life. They seemed to like the idea of my being a business man, and not paid for preaching. Some of them were hard-headed, thoughtful sort of men, so that I was busily engaged answering such questions as, "Where were heaven and hell?" "What was the brimstone and fire?" "Did I believe in a personal devil?" "Why did God allow sin to come into the world?" "If God were all powerful, why did He not save everybody?" "What was to become of Mohammedans and Hindoos?" "Was it fair for God to punish an innocent man like the Saviour?" "Where did Cain get his wife?"

I received their quiet, thoughtful attention as I answered these various questions, and afterwards I remarked that some of my hearers were daily committing the greatest of all sins and did not know it. They failed to guess what this sin was, and I told them it was the rejection of Christ (Jno. iii. 18, mar.); that the judgment for salvation and condemnation was going on now, and so on.

The congregation increased as time went on, but at length their stock of difficulties became exhausted and all was quiet. We had been talking for about an hour, and then I left them and walked further up the road, but having to return that way a quarter of an hour later, I found most of them still there, and a man met me, saying, "some of the men had been hit pretty hard and were not feeling very comfortable; that there would be some good results, as a straightforward talk like this was the very thing they needed."

D. M. Drysdale.

Liverpool.

PERSECUTIONS IN BOHEMIA.

My Dear Sir,—The Evangelical Continental Society have received from Rev. Albert W. Clark, D.D., of Prague, a painfully interesting communication, informing them of the recrudescence of religious persecution in certain portions of Bohemia. Dr. Clark says:—

"The Free Reformed Church of Bohemia has for some years enjoyed a limited toleration—'house worship with invited guests.' But now in two counties (Bezirke) there is a different interpretation of the privileges of this religious body. According to the head officials in these respective counties, the Church in question is limited to actual members. All guests, even special friends of the members, and members of other Evangelical denominations, must be strictly excluded. For not enforcing this rule to the very letter, one preacher, K. Wolf, has been imprisoned, and afterwards fined. A second preacher has been fined twice by the same official.

"At Husinetz, Southern Bohemia, Paul Zelinka, the Free Church preacher, and the members there, are bitterly persecuted by bigoted officials. Prayer and Bible study are dangerous and criminal. Husinetz is a small town of 2000 inhabitants. Until recently there was hardly a Bible in the whole place; now 200 people have purchased the Scriptures. Many of these new Bible readers begged an invitation to attend the private Bible services of Preacher Zelinka. A limited number were invited. The head official of the county sent a policeman, who broke up the meeting. All present were summoned before the chief magistrate. Mr. Zelinka was fined. Some young people desired instruction in singing, and begged at the same time for some general information about the Bible. They were instructed in a private room, nor was there even a prayer at such gatherings. This, too, was regarded by the official in question as dangerous and criminal, and Mr. Zelinka was again fined. Placards were posted up at the street corners threatening with fine or imprisonment anyone not a member who attended prayers at Mr. Zelinka's. When this preacher holds a simple Bible service for the eight members a policeman marches before the house, and with musket and bayonet he holds at a distance any soul seeking light and instruction from God's Word. Mrs. Zelinka has also been fined for holding a little sewing circle for girls.

"True, brave souls, holding up God's light in a very dark place, they are not discouraged, but they ask for your sympathy and prayer. For miles around people are talking about the old truth that has come back to the birthplace of Huss, the great reformer."

In addition to the places referred to in Dr. Clark's letter, the Society has long carried on good work at Libschitz, Horjitz, Krabschitz, Laun, Schlan, and elsewhere. In this time of difficulty and depression, persecution and privation, our Bohemian brethren turn wistfully to England for succour and sympathy.

—Yours faithfully,

George H. Giddins, Secretary.

Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, London, E.C.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23.—LUKE V.

Captain (1-11).—When Christ comes on board all must do his behest. He tests us by asking us to do a little thing before we are bidden to put out into the deep. Happy they whose nets are clean, ready at any moment to let them down. (5) We often must act contrary to the dictates of human wisdom in our literal obedience to the commands of our Lord. "Thy word," settles everything. (7) Times of revival are days of co-operation. When Christ uses aught of ours He pays liberally. To be near Christ is terrible until we are cleansed from sin. (10) Faithfulness in our earthly calling is often our apprenticeship for wider ministry to the souls of men.

Priest (12-16).—Luke's practised eye detected the stage of the disease, full of leprosy. The leper's instinct was truer than Peter's. He, too, was aware of his sinfulness, but embraced the nearness of Christ as opportunity for cleansing. The sinless can touch the unclean without contracting taint. (14) Born under the ceremonial law, our Lord maintained it until on the cross He said, "It is finished."

Son of Man (17-26).—He has power to heal and to forgive. We know that He has the latter because we have seen the effects of the former. That the man himself had faith in Christ is clear, since at the command of Christ he arose, took up his couch, and went home. He evinced his faith by rising before he felt the flow of life, and as he obeyed he found himself able to obey.

Friend of Sinners (27-39).—Some follow Christ of their own accord, to others He says, "Follow." It is not difficult to forsake things for a person. Our Lord could not be restrained by the conventional distinctions of the Jews. The love which He brought into the world, must reveal itself after its own fashion. New modes are the necessary out-growth of each new discovery of the love of God. We must take great care that our life yields itself to those mighty Pentecostal forces, which are stronger than the wine which of old burst the skins. Let us remember that we are the children of the bride-chamber, and demean ourselves as such.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 24.—LUKE VI.

Sabbath-keeping (1-11).—The one day of rest in seven is an eternal law. But the question of which day and of the observance of the day vary, as between Judaism and Christianity. As Son of Man, and therefore representative of man, our Lord could alter either the day or the method of observing it. His authority in this respect was foreshadowed in the case of David, where the need of hunger overbore ceremonial distinctions. These two episodes suggest the true method of observing the rest-day. Great human needs and works of mercy should determine our behaviour in every case.

All Night in Prayer (12-19).—These nights in prayer compensate for the busy haste of days of teaching and miracles. How constantly Christ's prayers must have turned upon the twelve. It was thus, and by personal influence, that He transformed them from disciples into apostles.

Blessedness and Blessing (20-38).—For the first time poverty, hunger, tears, and reproach, are canonised. When such things are borne in the Spirit of Christ, they create capacity for receiving more of Him, and to have Christ is heaven. How great the woe of those who try to satisfy capacities for God with the earthly and human. (27) Those who receive from God, of his full hand, are able to give out unstintedly. (35) We are to despair of nobody (R.V.). The releasing of debt, giving to need, meting good measure, for the Lord's sake, are the true signs of our sonship.

The Fruit and Foundations of Christian Life (39-49).—Let us deal carefully with our own faults, that we may be able to help others in combating theirs. To abide in Christ is the only secret of fruit-bearing. Words betray the heart, therefore keep thy heart with all diligence. Christ is the living Rock, therefore let us dig deep till we touch Him, and are built into Him.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 25.—LUKE VII.

Christ's Generalship (1-10).—Because the centurion was under authority and obedient to it, he was able to exercise authority. Because Christ was obedient to the will of God, He was able to speak to disease and demons as so many servants. Let us learn that there may be great faith where least expected, and outside the confines of the Church. That faith will show itself in love and charity and humility. They who possess the great faith do not count themselves worthy.

Christ's Sympathy (11-17).—Christ meets every mourner, and has compassion on those that weep, whether in the zenanas of India or in the streets of our great cities. He can touch death without defilement, because there is no sympathy between Him and sin, the parent of death. To all young life Christ says "Arise!" When we are right with Christ we are given back to those who love us.

Christ's Commendation (18-35).—At the very moment that we should suppose John had forfeited all claim to Christ's encomium the Lord gives it in unstinted measure, showing that He judges us by the main current, and not by the eddies of our life. His works are his best evidence, not simply for these features, but tenderness and benevolence. Pillar-like strength, indifference to luxury, a divine mission, these three characterise the true prophet. Let us welcome him whenever he appears, though where we least expect, that we may not thwart the purpose of God.

Christ's Forgiveness (36-50).—He forgave, not because of her love, but because of that state of heart which betokened itself by her tears, and gifts, and sorrow. He read her heart, and knew that it was in a condition that only needed Him as priest to pronounce the words of absolution. The religious formalist, the true penitent, the high priest, meet here.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26.—LUKE VIII.

Lost Seed (1-15).—The Lord teaches us to expect that three-fourths of our efforts will be lost, nor for our fault, but because the ground is either hardened by many feet, shallow, or beset by weeds. The Lord veiled his meaning in parables that He might not increase the condemnation of his hearers by statements which they could not misunderstand. He knew that they were not prepared to receive his words.

Hidden Light (16-21).—Inconsistency, uncharitable words or acts will prevent our light from shining. Let us be careful to let our character speak for Christ, as clearly and widely as possible. (19) The closest kinship to Christ is not that of nature, but of devotion to thewill of God. Let us not hear it alone, but do it.

Storms Within and Without (22-25).—That storm-swept lake imaged the tumult within those troubled hearts, but our Master is Lord of winds and waves.

Demons and Swine (26-39).—If demons when they possess a man can fill him with such might, with what power might not the Holy Ghost possess us. The evil spirit dreads to be unclothed, and would rather tenant swine than go into the abyss. Take care lest by yielding to unclean desires you set the door ajar for such a tenant. But Christ is mightier than a legion of demons; all hell is under his feet. Alas! that men love their swine better than Christ. The delivered soul must be the emissary of the love of God to others.

The Child and the Afflicted Woman (40-56).—The stoppage to heal the woman was in the Father's plan, and Jesus knew it. He knew that though the child should die there would be power to restore her. And so it befel. Never suppose that God puts more into your life than He is willing to afford power to accomplish. If by staying to do his will complications ensue, He is willing and able perfectly to deliver. The healing of the woman must have been a great incentive to Jairus' faith. Christ's power works best in the hushed silence of the chamber of the heart.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27.—LUKE IX.

The Twelve and the Crowds (1-17).—The Lord was so full of spiritual power that He became a cistern from which others might draw. He was eager that his Church should be an unworldly body, depending on spiritual supplies only: hence his exhortations about the slender provision for material want. Besides, He desired that his servants should live by faith. (7) Herod's conscience told him that he had not done with John. How many haunted men there are. (12) The twelve had much to learn, which could only be taught in the school of Christ. One lesson was that, however great the crowd, or their needs, there was always a supply in Christ. All that had to be done was to lay meagre supplies at his feet.

The Christ of God and Son of Man (18-27).—What a subject is suggested by the questions of Christ, whether of friends or foes. Here He would bring them to a point. Their floating opinions must be crystallised. There is a sense in which the cross is still erected, and Christ suffers in his members. To those who know Him He is Son of the Highest, to others only a suffering martyr.

The Mountain and the Plain (28-46).—Perhaps He might have crossed the threshold at that moment, and passed into the land of glory, but He turned his back on the radiant vision, and went down to help and die for men. Note (43 R.V.) that the majesty of God is as apparent in the expulsion of the demon as in the light of Transfiguration. Always bring your sorrows to Christ. He can deal with them and deliver. "Bring hither thy son."

Reasonings and Rebukes (47-62).—Each disposition of temperament demands and gets its special treatment at the hand of Christ. He knows what is in man. His face is ever set towards new efforts, tears, and sacrifices for the world.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 28.—LUKE X.

The Mission of the Seventy (1-16).—He sends us before Himself. Our work is to sow, his to give life. Do we pray often enough for more labourers? So urgent is our mission, we have no time for prolonged courtesies. The dove of peace returns to the heart from which it went. We must learn the secret of being empty as well as full. But it is not wise to linger on a spot where our ministry is definitely refused.

Their Return (17).—Let us more often use the precious name of Jesus. Nothing can stand against its spell. If He could give them so much authority in the days of his flesh, how much more now that He is ascended and is clothed with the power He had with the Father before the world was made? (21.) It is a gladsome thing to hear the Man of Sorrows rejoicing. He is glad that the Father has put his choicest gifts on such low shelves, that babes may take them. (21) Christ's life was a perpetual affirmation to the Father. (22) Oh that He might will (R.V.) to reveal the Father to us, since our hearts are childlike and humble.

The Perils of the Highway and the Delights of Home (25-42).—Bethany was on the way to Jericho. He sheltered there with Lazarus and the sisters. One cared for his wants to distraction. The other sat at his feet and knew his heart and anointed Him after to the burial. Whether we serve Him, or sit at his feet, it is well. But how brave and true He is to venture forth, as a good Samaritan, to look for those who are lying wounded on the world's highways, that He may come where they are, minister to their needs, and bring them home.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29.—LUKE XI.

The Art of Prayer (1-13).—It is the perennial need of us all to learn to pray. Jesus is Master in the blessed science of prayer. He indicates that the best prayer is intercessory. As friends we must plead with God for our poor friends who have nought. (10) We may argue from man to God. This "how much more," lifts us from every act of ove, given or received, to the Father's heart.

Three Stages of the Heart-House (14-28).—The palace built for the King has been usurped by his greatest foe. Sometimes this terrible usurper seems for a little to relax his hold, only that he may return with redoubled energy. It is best when he is driven out by the stronger. O strong Son of God, oust him from our hearts, and keep him out! (27) The passion of a mother's yearning heart speaks here. She blessed his mother, but He blessed all who keep the word of God.

Contention and Strife (29-54).—Like angry breakers, men cast themselves against the Son of Man, but He was strong in the power of the Holy Ghost to resist them. He frequently took weapons from the Old Testament armoury—Jonah, Solomon, Abel, Zechariah. He loved the teaching of natural and domestic processes—the lamp, the cup and platter, the hidden graves. He would have the single eye, the lamp with its light shining, almsgiving from within, humility and mercy. Let us beware of his woes, as sailors of reefs and headlands, and let us keep in the mid-channel of his blessed grace.

---

BRIGHTON RAILWAY MISSION.—The eighteenth anniversary of this branch of the Railway Mission was held at the Pavilion on Friday last. The work is going forward hopefully in its new home, which Mrs. Gates announced to be already nearly full. A tract fund has been started, and with an active band of outdoor workers, it is already doing good aggressive work for Christ.

Congo Training Institute, Colwyn Bay, North Wales.

Under the Distinguished Patronage of His Gracious Majesty LEOPOLD II., King of the Belgians; H. M. STANLEY, Esq., Hon. M.R.G.S., Ph. D., &c., &c.

The object of the above Institution is to give Religious and Industrial Education to the most promising of the African Converts in this country, and to establish branch Institutions on similar lines in Africa. An earnest appeal is made for £5000 in order to develop the work both at Colwyn Bay and in connection with the five Institutions already founded in the Dark Continent. The Committee is anxious to train hundreds of the natives in the African Colleges, and to have ultimately under training at Colwyn Bay 50 Students at a time.

£1000 wanted by the end of this month, December 31st, when the financial year closes, to meet all liabilities in connection with the Institution at Colwyn Bay and the branch Institutions in Africa.

URGENT OBJECTS.

1. To wipe off an existing debt of £400.
2. To publish 5000 Copies of Dualla Hymn Book for Native Christians at the Cameroons.
3. To purchase a Sawmill, value £100, for Dr. Scholes at New Calabar, West Africa, in order to help to make the work there self-supporting.
4. To develop the work in Liberia at Ricks' and Russell Institutes.
5. To provide for the scores of applicants from Africa for admission into the Colwyn Bay Institute.

NOTICE the following kind words from a friend in London:—"Whilst staying recently at ———, I heard of the Congo Training Institute, and as the idea of training African natives to be Missionaries commends itself to my heart, I have pleasure in forwarding you a donation of £50 (Fifty Pounds) towards the funds of the Institute, and wish 'God speed' to your work."

Will some of the Readers of THE CHRISTIAN cheer the hearts of the African Students and their friends at Colwyn Bay by showing similar sympathy before Christmas? "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine saith the Lord of Hosts." HAG. ii., 8. May He provide.

Any contribution will be most thankfully received by the Director—

Rev. W. HUGHES,

Congo Training Institute, Colwyn Bay, North Wales.

The Snowdrift.

There are few persons who have forgotten the terrible snowstorm which swept like a blizzard over this country some thirteen or fourteen years ago. Its effects were terrible. In the deeper railway cuttings trains were entirely snowed-up and had to be literally dug out, while for days locomotion in many other places was entirely stopped. I shall never forget that awful visitation.

I left my office about seven o'clock that night to walk home—for riding was out of the question. As I wended my way along the main roads the majority of the shops were already closed and in darkness, while others had their doors securely shut; and the feeble light which came from the few gas jets that were burning seemed but to add to the deep gloom of the night. The wind swept along in piercing gusts, whirling high overhead the fine particles of dry snow in almost blinding eddies, while in places the drifts were heaped up several feet. It required great care to pick one's way through this blinding storm, especially in crossing the junctions of the bye streets with the main roads. It was not without a feeling of profound thankfulness to Almighty God for the comforts of warmth and shelter that I stood at last at the door of my own home.

A MIDNIGHT CRY.

Late that night a timid knock was heard at the door of the Open-all-Night Refuge near King's Cross, and the person in charge, on the alert for the first poor young woman or girl in distress, at once responded to it. A howling gust swept in at the open portal, and through the mist caused by the light of the gas falling upon the blinding particles of the descending snow, there emerged from the darkness a shivering and emaciated child! I say a child, for although she might have been fifteen or sixteen years of age, she was small in stature, and miserably thin and careworn, though very child-like with it all.

No questioning was needed before taking in this poor waif from such a terrible scene, nor did it require much experience to discern that the unhappy girl was in a weak and sickly state of health. She was comforted with some warm food, and put to rest, but it was some little time before she was able to leave her bed again. She was too weak to give much account of herself, but from all that could be ascertained, she did not appear to have anyone belonging to her, and so she got to be called

THE SNOWDRIFT.

When able to leave the Refuge, not much was seen of her for a year or two, and then she returned once more to the worthy matron who had received her on the night of the awful storm. The matron took the tenderest motherly interest in the poor child, who was very ill, and would often go to her for a few minutes as she lay in bed to see how her little charge was going on, or to speak a few encouraging words of sympathy to her, and the tears would well up in the eyes of the girl whilst the kind matron feelingly related the Old Old Story of how the Good Shepherd endured untold weariness and suffering to seek and to find the lost and wandering sheep. Probably eternity alone will reveal all that was done by that mother's love to lead poor "Snowdrift" to the precious Saviour. A part of it I subsequently learnt from fragments of conversations I had with the matron as I visited the Refuge morning by morning, and made inquiries after her young charge.

One day the poor girl seems to have been thinking about the awful night when Providence guided her to the door of the Refuge and she was taken in. "Oh, matron!" she said, "whatever would have become of me that night if there had not been this place to receive me! and I wonder what other poor creatures did who had nowhere to go!"

The matron repeated the well-known words, not so often heard now as formerly:—

"Wher'er I take my walks abroad,
How many poor I see;
What shall I render unto God,
For all his gifts to me?"

and then the very thought of what might have been caused the tears to flow down the young girl's flushed cheeks as she thanked God for his goodness to her.

HOME AT LAST.

After a time she was removed to the Infirmary where I went to see her on one occasion, and was very much impressed with her cheerfulness and calm spirit of resignation; for, unhappily, she was suffering from an incurable complaint. She lingered, however, very much longer than was anticipated, and the good matron who strove to lead the poor girl to the Saviour was herself called to give an account of her stewardship before the summons came for poor "Snowdrift" to go home. It came, however, at last, and one day I met a lady who visited the Infirmary who told me the poor suffering young woman had passed away.

It had always been my intention to follow her remains to the grave, but the news of her death came too late. It matters very little, however, whether or not her frail body was placed in the silent grave with no mourner's eye looking on, for I believe her soul, redeemed with the precious blood of Christ, is with the Spirits of the just made perfect, and "without fault before the throne of God."

The memory of that poor waif, however, remains, and has ever tended to increase my faith in the value of the mission to the Friendless and Fallen.

---

The Open-all-Night Refuge, referred to in the above narrative, is a branch of the London Female Preventive and Reformatory Institution, which sustains three Preventive Homes for respectable young women and girls, four Rescue Homes for the reclamation of penitent outcasts, and, with the Refuge, which is kept open all night, provides accommodation for 240 inmates.

During the thirty-eight years that have elapsed since the Institution was founded nearly 40,000 poor young women and girls have been received. Many are sent by the clergy, ministers, prison and workhouse chaplains, and magistrates, but the majority are either brought or sent by the agents of the various missionary societies engaged in work among the "lapsed masses" of our huge population. They are received without payment or admission fee of any kind, although upon the managers of the Homes there rests the entire burden of the cost of maintenance, and the responsibility of finally placing them out in respectable service, and providing the necessary outfit for the purpose.

The Society is so well known, however, that it is no uncommon thing for young women to apply on their own behalf. Some little time ago one wrote and said, "Do please help a poor fallen woman," and another, "I will be longing to receive an answer." Still more recently a girl wrote, "I write to ask if you could do anything for me....I could never endure the life that I am leading. If you can do something for me I shall be very thankful." Another said, "If you will give me another chance I will make the best use of it. I pray you will not refuse me; this is my last hope." The helping hand was in every instance stretched out to snatch these poor creatures as "brands from the burning." If the Divine Master Himself does not break the "bruised reed" or quench the "smoking flax," His servants can do no less than provide a place of succour and repentance for those who thus earnestly seek to be saved from a life of degradation and sin—the end of which is death, both of body and soul.

The inmates are all engaged in industrial occupation such as is most likely to fit them for spheres of usefulness when they go out again into the world, and there are many trophies of Divine grace as the result of the religious services that are conducted in the Homes.

Perhaps one of the most hopeful signs in connection with this work of mercy is the increase of what are technically called "preventive" cases; that is, young women and girls of respectable moral character who are found in dangerous circumstances or vicious surroundings, and rescued before they have drifted to swell the ranks of the outcast.

Those who are admitted to the benefits of the Homes are fed, clothed, housed, instructed, and finally placed out in respectable domestic service, or otherwise suitably provided for. These benefits are absolutely free; neither creed, class, nor country being a barrier to admission.

The supreme object in view is the eternal salvation of everyone who is received, and every year there are over 2000 Gospel services, Bible, temperance, and other classes, conducted by a large staff of voluntary workers, ladies and gentlemen, for the purpose of seeking to win the inmates for Christ. This object has been steadily kept in view ever since the Institution was established in 1857, and it is sincerely hoped the standard will never be lowered.

A work so thoroughly in harmony with the spirit of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ ought not, one would think, to be continually straitened for want of money to carry it on and increase its powers of doing good, but there is now an actual deficit to be made up independently of the daily expenses connected with the maintenance of so many Homes and inmates. Every year during the autumn months, when people are away seeking rest and recreation, this work of mercy is going on. Those who are in the Homes have to be maintained, and the applications for admission are as numerous then as at any other time of the year. Immediate succour is an absolute necessity in order to save from ruin friendless young women and girls in circumstances of distress and moral peril, or to rescue penitent outcasts seeking to forsake an evil life. Therefore, all through the autumn months the work of seeking and saving has been vigorously carried on, although daily expenses have very far exceeded daily income.

A CALL FOR HELP

is made to the Lord's stewards who are enjoying the privileges of happy Christian homes to remember the great need of this Institution for the Friendless and Fallen, and they are most earnestly asked to contribute liberally at this season, so that all the liabilities incurred in helping the poor and needy, the erring and the outcast, may be met before the close of the year. Contributions will be thankfully received by Mr. William J. Taylor, at the Central Home and Office, 200, Euston-road, London, N.W.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these...ye have done it unto Me." "The Thirty-seventh Annual Report," "London; its Sins and Sorrows," "The Open Door," "A Morning at the Open-all-night Refuge," and other publications of the Institution, may be had on application to Mr. W. J. Taylor as above.—[ADVT.]

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30.
REVIEW OF QUARTER'S LESSONS.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Heb. xiii. 8.

THE second year of our Lord's ministry is covered by this series of lessons. The record of the work done as given in the Gospels is only partial, as suggested by the frequent reference to "many other miracles." With Jesus deeds of kindness and helpfulness accompanied, and gave power to, his preaching. One of the first lessons of the series is to us as teachers, that "word and work" may be combined in us.

One fact which comes into special importance in this series is the growing opposition of men. Explain it as we will, this fact is one of solemn significance. Granted that the people were misled by the priests and elders, yet this does not excuse them for being willing to follow. Both the words and the works of Jesus had impressed them. Yet, rather than incur the wrath of those who were in power, they consented to oppose Jesus against their own convictions. Human nature is still the same, and there are many who repeat their sin. Everyone who is convinced of the claims of Jesus, yet dare not yield to Him, is showing the same spirit. Are there none such in our Sunday-schools?

The Saviour's treatment of these opposers is also suggestive. First, He did not allow them to stay his work. That was impossible. Canute might more successfully attempt to command the incoming waves than the enemies of Christ to prevent the completion of the work he had come to perform. The persistent opposition of men in all ages only serves ultimately to advance the kingdom of God. Hence the proverbial phrase, "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church."

Next, our Lord varied his style of teaching. The parabolic form was adopted in consequence of this opposition. A man who wants an excuse for rejecting the truth can easily find one in the fact that this style of teaching is used. He may refuse to look beyond, and behind, and beneath, the natural picture intended to convey the truth. Yet others, desiring to learn, would by this method be quickened to more earnest and patient inquiry. Such teaching was calculated to separate the willing from the obstinately unwilling, as the cloud separated the Israelites from the Egyptians. Does not the Bible do so to-day? "I can make nothing of it," says the man who does not want its teaching; while "if any man wills to do his will he shall know of the doctrine."

The new plans our Lord adopted are also instructive. The Twelve were called to Him (Lesson VI.), that by being under his influence they might be fitted to perpetuate his work. Special privileges were announced to those who followed Him, and solemn warnings spoken to arrest those who opposed Him. Neither knew the full significance of their action. The first were admitted to tenderest possible relationship, and to a position more exalted than that of John the Baptist, while the second were shown the awful peril they ran by persistently closing their eyes against the light (Lessons VIII. and IX.).

At the close of the quarter, the study of this series finds some of our scholars with the opposers, others with the followers. Press the question, "Which side is best?" And the further question, "Will not those on the wrong side on this last Sunday of the year change it for the right?"

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, Stowmarket, Dec. 20; W. Kensington Dec. 28; Sydenham, Dec. 29; Winchester, Jan. 6; Walthamstow, Jan. 7-11; Mr. Arrowsmith, Southwold, Dec. 29-30; Bedford, Jan. 5-20; Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Sheffield, Jan. 17-25; Mr. J. S. Tyler, Littlehampton, Dec. 27; East Preston, Jan. 2; Brighton, Worthing, and neighbourhood, Jan. 3-16; Mr. H. Hankinson, Finsbury Park, Jan. 15; Mr. H. Falkner, Sidcup, Dec. 20; Pertenhall, near Kimbolton, Jan. 24; Luton, Jan. 27-28; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, Clifton, Dec. 29 to Jan. 12; Mr. Pewtress, Regent's Park, Jan. 6-10.

Holiday services for schoolboys at Clifton, by Dr. C. F. Harford-Battersby and A. G. Dodderidge, Trinity College, Cambridge, assisted by Oxford and Cambridge men, Dec. 29 to Jan. 12.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending Dec. 29.—Sun., Dec. 23, Jude 1-13; Mon., 24, 14-25; Tues., 25, Psalm lxxii. 1-20; Wed., 26, xcv. 1-11; Thurs., 27, xcvi. 1-13; Fri., 28, xcvii. 1-12; Sat., 29, xcviii. 1-9.

BARCELONA.—Miss Lawrence writes from Caldas de Montbuy, in the province of Barcelona:—"Mr. Uhr a Swede, and twelve Christians from Sabadell, came over on December 2 to show their sympathy at a service at which nine Spaniards (two women, six men, and a boy) and our brother Tom were baptized. We afterwards remembered the Lord's death. You will understand my joy at seeing these happy results, though only the firstfruits of our work in this place."

For the Young.

ROSIE'S CHRISTMAS WISH.

IT was Christmas Eve. Outside, the wind was piercing cold, but within the Burtons' happy home at Thorne Cottage everything told of peace and comfort. The parlour was tastefully decorated with holly and mistletoe, and the children had finished practising their Christmas carols. As they gathered round the cheerful hearth, Rosie, the youngest member of the family, seated herself on a low stool at her father's feet. Laying her little hand upon his knee, and looking up into his face with an earnest expression in her soft grey eyes, she said, "I wish I had been one of those shepherds of Bethlehem; don't you, papa? "Well, child, you do have odd notions," replied Mr. Burton in surprise. "Why do you wish you had been one of the shepherds, Rosie?" "Because no one has ever heard such beautiful singing as they heard that first Christmas. And, you know, though we sing the angels' words in our Christmas carols, we cannot sing the least bit like the angels. Besides, the angel told the shepherds where to find Jesus, and I would like so much to have seen Him, too. Don't you think, papa, that they must have been the very happiest men who lived in those days?"

Mr. Burton knew not how to answer his fair questioner. While he was a kind and loving father, he seldom, if ever, spoke to his children about the Lord Jesus; had it not been for the wise and gentle training of their mother they would have been sadly ignorant of "the old, old story."

Rosie's question came so unexpectedly that the others were all amused, and wondered greatly what their papa would say in reply. Mr. and Mrs. Burton had, however, exchanged glances, and the latter asked, "Do you think, Rosie, that the shepherds were happy because they saw the angel, and heard the heavenly host praising God, or because of the message the angel brought?" "Why, mamma, that's a funny question to ask. I think they would be happy because of both." "Well then, Rosie, you can be almost as happy as those shepherds of Bethlehem were," replied Mrs. Burton. "While the angel proclaimed 'good tidings of great joy to all people,' it was because of the other part of his message, 'unto you is born a Saviour.' The angels themselves are perfectly pure and holy, and therefore do not require a Saviour; but it is different with us." "Mamma, can boys and girls be God's angels now while they live?" cried Rosie, turning round towards Mrs. Burton. "I thought I could never be like an angel until I died, and went to heaven. Do, please, tell me, mamma, how I may be one now."

During this conversation, Mr. Burton had taken up the book he had previously been reading, but anyone might have noticed that he was very long in turning over the leaves. The truth was, he felt deeply interested in his child's questions, and though he did not attempt to answer them, he was listening to all that passed. "We may all become angels in this world," answered Mrs. Burton, smiling at Rosie's eagerness. And she told out the simple story of the Saviour's love; when she had finished, more than one in that happy family circle resolved to try to copy the example of Him, "who though He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we, through his poverty, might be rich."

Next morning everyone was more happy than another. Christmas greetings were exchanged, from the oldest to the youngest, and it would have puzzled the genius of an artist to paint the mingled expression of surprise and pleasure that overspread each face when they discovered that some favourite book, or some other thing long wished for, was now their very own. What questioning and cross-questioning there was as to how each had so successfully guessed the other's secret!

After breakfast our little friend Rosie set out to visit with a basket well filled with good things. She made her way first to the home of a widow named Mrs. Weston, or "Old Nancy," as she was familiarly called. Old Nancy lived partly by the allowance she received from the Parochial Board, and partly by knitting. On reaching her door Rosie tapped loudly, and on hearing the words, "Come in," lifted the latch, and entered the widow's clean and tidy room. "Good morning, Nancy," said Rosie, in her sweet childish voice, "I've come to wish you a happy Christmas." "A happy Christmas to you, dear, and may you see many of such," replied the old woman kindly. "It is very good of you to remember a poor creature like me. You should rather have been away seeing some of the grand sights that's always to be seen at this season of the year." "Oh, there's plenty of time for that," replied Rosie. After asking how Nancy had been keeping, and listening intently to her oft-repeated story of how at Christmas time she felt both sad and happy—sad, because she missed the love of her husband and two children more than ever; and happy, because she knew that each Christmas was bringing the time of their reunion nearer.—Rosie at length rose to go. As she did so, she opened her basket, and, taking out a parcel, gave it to the widow, saying, "This is a present of tea and sugar from mamma." Then producing another packet, which she had concealed under her cloak, Rosie said, placing it in her lap, "This is my Christmas present to you. I hope you'll like it, Nancy."

When Nancy untied the string, and removed the outside wrappings, she beheld a pretty, large-print Bible. "Oh, child!" she exclaimed, "however did you think of giving me this? I couldn't have got anything I've longed for more, and I do not know how to thank you for your gift, my little angel." "I am very glad you like it," replied Rosie, blushing at the old woman's grateful words. Rosie was about to wish Nancy good morning, when she observed such a wistful look upon her face, that she asked, "Is there anything I can do for you, before I go, Nancy?" "Perhaps I'm selfish in wishing to keep you longer," the old woman replied, "but, I'd like you to be the first to read a few verses out of this precious Book." Rosie at once complied with her request, and, sitting down, she opened the Bible at the second chapter of St. Luke's Gospel, and read the story of the Saviour's birth, as announced by the angels.

When she had finished reading, old Nancy said, "Aye, child, wherever we read of an angel appearing to man, he always brought good news, but never such 'good news' as when on that night those wondrous words were uttered to the shepherds: 'Unto you is born a Saviour.'" "Whatever should we do without our blessed Saviour!" mused old Nancy, partly to herself. As Rosie stood beside her she took her hand in hers saying, "I'm sure you love the dear Saviour too, don't you?" Rosie gave for reply one of her sunniest smiles, and wished Nancy good morning.

The pleasure Rosie felt, after paying this and other visits, lived in her heart all that day, and for many a long day afterwards she enjoyed the happiness in store for her, all the more seeing that she had been the means of carrying joy and gladness to others.

When bed-time came, Rosie whispered in her mamma's ear, "It is so nice to be a little angel that I'm going to try to be one every day." Rosie kept her resolve, and though she could not always act in the same way as she did on that happy Christmas morning, she found many an opportunity of doing little services of love to those around her.

M. I. J.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

CHILDREN, you who love the story,
How the Lord and King of all
Left his home and throne in glory,
For a stable cattle stall;

How a band of shepherds lowly,
Watching o'er their flocks by night,
Saw the angels, pure and holy,
Heard them tune their harps of light;

How at once to Bethlehem hieing,
They did seek his cradle bed,
Found Him in the manger lying,
Even as the angels said;

How wise men of wealth and learning,
By his beauteous star were led,
Till it shone with lustre burning,
O'er the Infant Saviour's head;

How they found Him, Earth's Desire,
Christ the Babe of Bethlehem fair,
Worshipped Him, their King Messiah,
Brought Him incense, gold, and myrrh—

Nearly nineteen hundred pages
Of Time's book have since been read;
Shepherd swains and Magi sages
Long since slumbered with the dead.

But the Christ-child ever liveth;
He, who in the manger lay,
Christmas gifts eternal giveth
To all those who Him obey.

HARRIET JULIA EVANS.

Christmas Poems.

Christ came of old, the Christ who through the ages
Since earth's creation, had his children fed;
Long, long foretold, by prophets, bards, and sages,
He who alone could bruise the serpent's head;
He who had led them by the hand of Moses,
The true Shekinah, and the great "I am,"
Through desert wastes, to wheat and palms and roses,
Where doves coo, blent with bleating of the lamb.

He came, but how? Not as the King of Glory,
But the poor Babe that in the manger lay,
On Mary's bosom—O how sweet the story
Of the fair wakening of that Christmas Day.

Not unto Israel's prophets, priests, or kings,
But those who vigil kept, her shepherd swains,
Came the glad rustling of those angel wings—
The songs that woke those dim Judæan plains.

He comes again, though we may not behold Him,
The Christ Incarnate, with these mortal eyes,
Or virgin fair unto her heart enfold Him,
And hush to sleep with tender lullabys.

He is the same Emmanuel, Saviour, Jesus,
Who trod the furnace with his faithful three,
The Son of God who loves, and knows, and sees us,
Who raised the dead, and stilled the stormy sea.

He comes to us; say shall we not receive Him,
Unto Him yield our love, our life, our powers?
"I will come into Him"; say shall we not believe Him
Who pleads an entrance in these hearts of ours?

He comes again, all radiant with love's beauty,
The Risen One, though once the Crucified.
O welcome Him, then shall life's daily duty
Become his service, life a Christmastide.

Harriet Julia Evans.

---

The winds of dark December roar,
The hail beats on the window-pane;
Pile up the fire, throw wide the door
To welcome Christmas back again—
A light on life's dark wintry tide
To brighten every fireside.

It comes with many a glad surprise,
And loving tokens rare and sweet—
Perchance good angels in disguise,
With friends we long had sighed to meet:
And hands and hearts unite again,
After the parting and the pain.

While children of the merry heart,
Are sporting round the Christmas tree,
Amid our smiles a tear may start
For friends afar or o'er the sea;
Or those beyond Time's restless tide,
Who wait us on the other side.

While loving gifts we gladly greet,
'Tis still more blessed to impart
A Christmas boon with kindness, meet,
To some forsaken, lonely heart
At Christmas—Christmas ushered in,
To still the storm of human sin.

Donegal. J. K.

---

Prepare, prepare a royal way,
For royal feet to tread;
Make straight the paths, and over all
Let heavenly peace be shed;
[1296]

The moon bestow a purer light,
The sun more brightly shine,
The stars a holier radiance fling,
And earth become divine.

'Tis near, 'tis near—the illustrious hour
Isaiah did prophesy;
Lift up your heads—behold and see
Salvation draweth nigh;
The earth lies crush'd beneath the law,
Which none could e'er fulfil,
Now comes the pure, the Spotless Lamb
To do the Father's will.

But will the high and lofty One
Descend to human birth?
And will He dwell in very deed,
With mortal men on earth?
The everlasting government
Is on his shoulders set;
And will He come in human form
To pay the sinner's debt?

The vain, the proud, have fill'd their cup
Of pleasure to the brim;
Their house and treasury are full,
They have no room for Him;
The poor in spirit, and the meek—
These, these shall see his face;
The humble and the contrite soul
Shall be his dwelling-place.

And so He came, now ages past,
Yet still we hold it dear—
The blessed day, the matchless day;
And keep it, year by year.
And as again it draweth on,
May every fond heart glow,
And still prepare a sacred shrine,
Where He may dwell below.

Caroline Tickner.

---

"Goodwill!"

'On earth peace, goodwill toward man.' (Luke ii. 14.)

Elta M. Lewis. Wm. J. Kirkpatrick.

1. In robes of white the still earth stands, With clos-ed eyes and folded hands;
2. Bright-eyed the watch-ful stars look down On lone-ly farm and bu-sy town;
3. O earth, ac-curs'd by weeds and thorns, A wondrous Star your breast adorns;
1. The mer-ry streams no long-er leap, The hap-py flow'rs are fast a-sleep.
2. Wher-ev-er fall their gold-en rays They meet glad eyes up-turn'd in praise:
3. The race is freed from heaven's ban—The Son of God's the Son of Man!
p
1. Earth list-ens: all her broad do-main Is hush'd to hear the heav'nly strain;
2. They watch the bu-sy feet that go On Christ-like er-rands to and fro;
3. His smil-ing face shall scat-ter gloom; His touch bring de-serts in-to bloom.
cres.
1. It comes, it comes! her pul-ses thrill With "peace on earth, to men goodwill."
2. And as of old, they list-en still To hear the song of glad goodwill.
3. And ev-er-more His pre-sence fill The earth with peace and glad goodwill.
Chorus.
"Good-will!" the na-tions sing; "Good-will!" the joy-bells ring; From plain and hill, from lake and rill, The earth re-plies, "Good-will, good-will!"

From "Silvery Echoes:" A Christmas Service of Song. (Morgan & Scott, London.)

---

See the night is waning fast,
While, their vigil nearly past,
Thankfully the herdsmen raise
To Jehovah humble praise.

Chorus.—Come ye, Christians, all and pay
Adoration here to-day,
To th' Incarnate Mystic Vine,
Jesus Christ, the Man Divine!

Scarce have they begun their pray'r,
When a vision fills the air—
Angels singing in the heav'n,
"Lo a King to you is giv'n.

"On the earth, goodwill and peace!
Wars and tumults soon shall cease!
Glory be to God on high!
For Salvation now is nigh.

"Rise, ye shepherds all, and seek
Christ, your God, in stable meek,
Wrapp'd in swaddling clothes and laid
In a manger!"—so they said.

Therefore all with one accord
Forthwith rise and seek the Lord,
Guided by the blazing star,
Till they come to Bethlehem far.

At the stable lo! they fall,
Prostrate 'fore the God of all,
Who, in love for all the earth,
Thus submits to lowly birth.

Jesus, child of mother-maid,
Grant us all (for Thou hast paid,
For mankind, his debt of sin)
Heaven's eternal peace to win!

Albyn St. Clair.

---

Again the year is onward fleeting
And I send my Christmas greeting—
Wish for all a happy meeting,
And a glad New Year.

Every hour, God's love enfold thee,
Every moment, Christ uphold thee,
And his Holy Spirit mould thee
To his likeness here.

Keep the Christmas chimes still ringing,
And the angel-voices singing,
Through glad-tidings thou art bringing
To the lost and lone.

For some hearts seem filled with badness,
And some homes with pain and sadness;
Share with them thy joy and gladness;
Be a Christ-child here.

So shall heaven's light glow nearer,
So the Christ Himself grow dearer,
And the Spirit's message clearer,
To the child of God.

M. A. J.

---

O blessèd be the day
When to earth the Saviour came,
When He laid his glory down,
When He took a human name:
And as a child—a little child—
He came to bear our shame.

O woe unto the world,
Which no place for Him would spare,
Save a stable rude and dark,
Save a manger cold and bare:
When as a child—a little child—
He came our griefs to share.

O glory to his Name,
For He comes again to-day
To his humblest servants here,
To each servant who will pray,
"Lord as a child—a little child—
Make me thine own alway."

Grace Creed.

INSTANT IN SEASON.

A FEW weeks ago a lady friend of mine—who is ever on the look-out for opportunities to speak a word for the Master—at the close of a very impressive Gospel service was constrained to speak to a young lady sitting just in front of her about her soul. Very earnestly she urged her to decide for Christ; but apparently without result, only a promise to let my friend write to her. This she did, receiving a few days later the following cheering and encouraging reply:—

"My Dear Friend,—I received your letter; many thanks for the same; I am truly and earnestly speaking when I say I am saved. I feel I must tell you a little about myself. My parents live a long way from here, and they being reduced in circumstances, I was forced to go out into the world to try and earn a living and help my parents. Never shall I forget my mother's parting words: 'Go, my dear child,' said she, 'and may God's Word be a lamp unto thy feet, and a light to thy path.'

"My situation is not an easy one, but it has seemed much brighter since I got 'washed in the blood of the Lamb.' I think it must have been God who led you to speak to me that Sunday; after I left the chapel the words kept ringing in my ears,

'THOU WOULDST BE SAVED, WHY NOT TO-NIGHT?'

"When I reached home I prayed earnestly that God would 'create in me a clean heart and renew a right spirit within me.' It seemed rather hard at first, but, thank God, I got the victory over Satan. That Sunday night will ever live in my memory, and I thank you over and over again for your words. I might even now have been a sinner grovelling in darkness, but, thank God, I see and behold the true light.—Yours faithfully, R. B."

What an incentive and encouragement to speak to anxious ones! How often we have let slip by like opportunities, and many a one has gone further and further into sin, when "a word fitly spoken" might have led them to trust Christ. How often we have heard it said, yea, have even said it ourselves, of a Gospel meeting, "There was no blessing." Whose the blame? The preacher? Nay! very often ours, in not trying to pass on to others the blessings we enjoy ourselves.

F. DAWSON.

FAMINE IN TURKEY.

ADDED to the other horrors of which Asiatic Turkey has lately been the scene, there looms up the prospect of distress and famine during the winter. Rev. R. M. Cole, American Missionary at Bitlis, Kurdistan, Turkey, sends to us an interesting account of his stewardship of the means supplied to him last season for the relief of the famine-stricken people. Most of the contributions sent were from friends in America, but our readers had also some share in this Samaritan work. Mr. Cole tells of the great privations the people had to endure, the expedients to which they resorted to ward off starvation, and the measure of relief he was able to distribute.

As to the future, he says:—"Owing to the thick darkness that looms up on every hand—the price of wheat still more than fourfold, as the new supply is being brought in, the money and credit of the people gone—what can we do but to try and save life, though the task looks more formidable than ever as we face up to the near winter? Heaven pity poor humanity! How they have showered blessings on the head of kind donors who have helped us hitherto! While we stand down amid this dark, we ask that you of the outside world will 'hold the rope,' and hold it hard, by sending on funds, which we promise to turn to the greatest account for poor humanity, arduous as must be the task for us."

THE TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL REPORT of the Leicestershire Temperance Union presents a good record of useful work.

THE LATE

Canon Jackson, Leeds.

MORE than two years have passed since the sainted pastor whose portrait is on this page was called to his rest, at the ripe old age of eighty. His life was one of singular devotion and fruitfulness, and deserves to be had in lasting remembrance. It can truly be said of him that his motive power in life was not fame or ambition or money-getting, but the true well-being of his poorer fellow-citizens and the glory of his Redeemer. The fact that he spent a long and arduous ministry in the place of his birth, and dwelt contentedly among his own people, is sufficient proof of the singleness of heart that animated his career. He even denied himself the comforts and consolations of the married state that he might the more unreservedly consecrate time, talents, and fortune to the service of the Lord's poor.

Born at Leeds in 1812, Mr. Edward Jackson was at the close of his educational course apparently destined to a business life; for some years he travelled as agent for his father's tobacconist firm. Happily, at the age of twenty-one, he was introduced to Sunday-school work at St. James's Church, Leeds, the church which he was afterwards to serve as vicar for nearly forty years. Into this teaching work he threw himself with zest, and his energetic character soon made itself felt. Faithful in this humble but honourable post, he became fitted for the larger influence and more public positions of dignity that awaited him. The school prospered greatly, and Mr. Jackson initiated many useful adjuncts to its thorough efficiency. He interested himself in elementary education, and began day schools that were regarded as models of their kind, according to the educational ideals of the time.

(From a Photograph by Mr. Dinnie, 18, Park-road, Leeds.)

When about thirty years old, he decided to devote himself wholly to the work of the Christian ministry. His first post of service in that sacred calling was as curate to Dr. Hook, of the Leeds parish church. Here he abode for eleven years, working nobly for the elevation and evangelisation of the masses of the people within the parish. Gospel work and philanthropic effort went hand in hand.

In due time he was appointed to the charge of St. James's Church, situated in one of the poorest and most populous parts of the city. Remembering his early and happy labours there in the Sunday-school, he craved the privilege of rendering yet fuller service to the people whom he had learned to know and to love. The stipend was a very small one; as Mr. Jackson had some private means, he could dispense even with that, and devoted his all to the work to which God had called him so manifestly. He lived near his church, and his few simple personal needs were easily supplied. A biographer writing, with full knowledge, at the time of his death says:—

The good done at St. James's by Mr. Jackson, and through his influence, affords one of the finest examples that can be found within even the pale of the Church of England of what a whole-souled man of power and ability with his heart in his work, can accomplish. As years went on agency after agency was added to the machinery of the church, and the potency of St. James's strengthened and became more and more wide-reaching as a religious, moral, educational, and social factor in the life of the borough. And what is equally remarkable, this power was maintained. It was not a temporary growth, following upon spasmodic effort, and collapsing when the novelty had worn off. It has been a permanent influence; it did not wane even with the waning physical energies of the originator as he advanced in years, for he had built up a remarkable organisation, had gathered around him a band of devoted workers, and he was still with them an inspiriting force, though no longer able to do what he had done in the heyday of his powers. And to-day the services at St. James's, and the agencies existing there, form one of the most striking and encouraging features of the religious life of the town. On a Sunday afternoon there are no less than thirteen agencies at work in connection with the church.

Such men are the strength of any church, and the glory of our Christian religion, which finds its highest expression in self-sacrificing endeavour for the salvation and sanctification of the poor and needy.

Having taken a lively interest in matters educational during the period of his spiritual apprenticeship, Canon Jackson continued his labours in this direction, and to some purpose. As an intimate friend and counsellor of the late Mr. W. E. Forster, his influence was distinctly felt in the framing and passing of the Education Act, and the incorporation into its provisions of simple Scriptural teaching, suited to the capacities of the young. Canon Jackson was an active member of the Leeds School Board from 1873 to 1882.

When he died, full of honours, after a short illness, he had attained the patriarchal age of eighty years. The universal esteem in which he was held was seen in the general lamentation expressed on all sides, and the immense concourse that attended his funeral. It was very appropriate that the Sunday-school children of the church, numbering a thousand, should head the procession that escorted his mortal remains to their burial. The influence of such a man does not pass away with his removal from the earthly scene; generations will yet arise to call him blessed, by reason of the good he was instrumental in conferring on their ancestry.

THE SOUDAN.—Bishop Tugwell is deeply impressed with the importance of entering the Soudan, and he suggests, in a recent letter, the possibility of taking a journey to Kano himself, in order to find out the openings for work in that great city of 120,000 souls, which is the commercial capital of Central Africa. Prayer is asked that guidance may be given in this important matter.

JAPAN.—Mr. W. H. Omura, 40, Denning-road, Hampstead, N.W., writes: I shall be glad to accept invitations to meetings specially arranged for giving lime-light lectures on Japan and her people. I have my own slides. The proceeds will go towards the expenses of the Open Air Mission in Japan. I leave England next February very regretfully, and ask the prayers of Christians that I may be a bold witness or Jesus before my own family and people.

SEAMEN'S MISSION, ROTTERDAM.—This mission, conducted on evangelical lines, witnessing to the necessity of the new birth and personal holiness, is in need of financial assistance to enable it to close the year free of debt. The mission is entirely supported by voluntary contributions. It is hoped that those who have the means will be led to help this work for the salvation of British seamen in a port abounding with temptation. The hon. treasurer is S. B. Ortt, Government Harbour Master, Rotterdam, Holland.

THE POOR BROTHER.

It was the week before Christmas in a remote village in Somersetshire, when two old men, sitting before a flickering wood fire in the front room of a tumble-down cottage, might be seen rubbing their palms together in evident satisfaction. They were brothers; that could be seen at a glance—the same pale blue watery eye, straggling grey locks, and toothless gums, distinguished them both. The elder was the first to speak. "Yes, Thomas," said he, as if continuing a conversation, "yes, I do be mighty set on't. Ut's a mortal fine thought to have. What do 'ee say to ut?"

Thomas peered into his brother's face, but could make nothing out of it. He ceased rubbing his hands. "'Ee do be crazed, I believe, Richard, sett'en there wi' thy old eyes a starin' at nothin', and talkin' o' thy thoughts."

"'Tis just this way, brother," said Richard. "They words o' the preacher on Sunday has made a tarr'ble impression on me, like. Do'ee mind as how he said, 'Naked, and ye clothed Me,' meant a doin' jest what us could for some poor creetur as wanted it? We be richer nor many, brother, and I ha' getten the notion to make the Lord summat to keep un warm this bitter weather. That's my thought."

"'Tis as I said," replied Thomas, "'ee do be crazed! As if thy poor old hands could do anything for the Lord! We be that poor in our old age that we ha'nt clothes of our own to keep the cold out. 'Tis a profane thought o' thine, too; to think as the Lord 'ud want any o' thy charity."

"But I don't put it that way, brother," answered Richard. "I ha' two coats, and that poor maid o' Marlitt's is well-nigh dead wi' coughing. I asked her what she might be doin' for't, and she said she had gi'en herself a paper plaster to keep ur warm! I ha' two coats, and that maid's to ha' one o' them!"

"'Tis the first time I ha' heard o' thy two coats," said Thomas.

"Here they be," said Richard, opening his coat and showing an undervest of grey coarse wool, "Coat's enough for me, seein' as the Lord is in want o' this here weskit."

Now that the old man had parted with his secret he grew bold, and, taking off his singlet, he tightly buttoned his coat about him with many grunts of satisfaction.

"What be'est going to do?" inquired his brother.

"I be going to begin at once, but I do want 'ee to ha' thy share in this little gift to our Lord," Richard replied.

"I tell 'ee thee's a fool! Get thy death o' cold a-takkin' off thy weskit for that wench o' Marlitt's; then who'll care for thy silly, frozen old carcase?" asked Thomas.

"He will, Thomas. Thee be'est forgettin' 'tis for the Lord." His trembling hands were holding the vest close to the blaze on the hearth while he examined it closely with eyes and fingers. "A—h—h!" he sighed on making the discovery. "There be two rents i' the thing! That's unfortnit, but you'll ha' to try and fill 'em up, Richard," talking to himself. "Eh, but there's a way out o' the bush, and thee'll ha' to be washed, too." Here he apostrophised the well-worn garment.

Thomas began impatiently beating the brick floor with his feet; he looked askance at his brother with pity. "'Naked, and ye clothed Me,'" continued Richard. "Lord, I be an old man, but I never knew that till the preacher tell'd us last Sunday. Think as I'd let 'ee starve wi' cold this weather! Not while I've two coats, and a maid o' thine needs one o' them."

The next day the poor old man got soap and water, and immersed the under-garment. His hands were palsied, and the water was cold, but he rubbed away with soap, and felt he was preparing a coat of mail against sleet and blast for the King Himself. He rubbed on, and when he felt he had cleansed his gift, he surveyed his work proudly. "'Tis true I beant first-hand at washin', but, Lord, Thou'lt take the will for the deed. 'Tis said cleanliness be next to godliness." With these comforting assurances he began his long task of drying the shrunken, soap-filled garment. For hours he held it in the feeble glow of the wood-fire, turning it, wringing it, smoothing it out, until only one process, to his thinking, remained. He took his gift to bed with him, and lay upon it shivering all the night. "'Tis a good plan," said he, "to air it so, and saves the ironing I can't give it. Thee'll know, Lord!"

Then he proceeded to fill in the worn places with strands of brown wool he had drawn from a pair of woollen cuffs he was wearing. A few rows from one cuff sufficed, and a borrowed needle helped him to complete his work. He was very proud of it when he laid it across his poor, stiff knees, and rubbed his worn hands down it for pleasure. "Brother," said he to the indignant old man who scorned his work from the other side of the fireplace, "'Tis nearly as good as new. I wish 'twas new, for Him, that I do! Seems I can hardly stand to-day for tremblin'. Should ye say 'twas the satisfaction o' the thing, brother?"

"'Tis more like to be a fit o' the ague!" quoth Thomas.

"Thee'll ha' to take it to the poor wench, brother, I am thinkin', for 'pears as if my old pins won't carry me that far to-day. I've had a sight o' joy out o' my bit o' work for the Lord. 'Tis his reward to a feeble servant."

"Thee's just rantin'. What's come o' thee i' thy old age! If 'tis thy dotage, say so, for I'm afeared o' thee."

The other laughed with a happy, childish chuckle. "Thee's never jealous, Thomas? Nay! But do 'ee take it to the maid—'tis a good maid—and that 'll be thy part." After much persuasion, Thomas was preparing to start on his errand, when a dry hacking cough made known the presence of someone outside the door.

"'Tis the lass, sure 'nough!" cried Richard excitedly. A girl of unprepossessing appearance entered the room.

"Master's sent me down for the rent," said she, "he won't be satisfied till he has me in my long box!" Here a painful fit of coughing almost doubled up the speaker.

"Dear, dear, 'tis a bad cough!" cried Richard, anxiously. "But, see here, maid"—he held up with triumph the work of his trembling hands—"'tis a cure for the cough, and 'tis for the Lord's sake. Say thou'lt wear it, lass!"

"Aye, that will I, Master Richard, an' I'll remember, when I get to Kingdom-Come, to tell 'em as you showed me the way,"

"Lass, lass!" cried Richard, "'tis a light way to speak o' heaven."

. . . . . .

It was New Year's Eve, and all the village was attending a double interment. The rector was paying the cost of burial, for he had heard the story. "And," said he, "I cannot allow a pauper's grave to cover such holy remains."

One woman was talking to another after the event. "Yes, old Richard took a chill through want of his vest; and then lying on it all night, and it only half dry, finished him." "'Twas a cruel shame the poor lass wore it. They say 'twas caked wi' soap, and as damp as death, even when they took it off her. But they do say as she had an easy dying, and made some wonderful prayers, and said as how old Richard had shown her the way to heaven," said the other gossip. Just then Thomas appeared. He looked dazed with grief, but he spoke to the women, "Aye, Richard and the maid'll spend New Year with the Lord! 'Tis the best go first, we may be sure o' that; but if I be spared, I'll serve the Lord, aye, tho' 'tis a late repentance." "Better late than never," said the preacher, joining them. "I have learned a lesson from that poor brother," pointing towards the open grave; "I shall never forget I preached, and left him to practise. He gave his life for another, just as his Divine Master did, and he has his reward."

Some months later a little tablet was put up in a village church, "To the memory of a poor brother. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me.'"—Matt. xxv. 40.

M. Butler Gerds.

REACHING THE MASSES.

The following account of an "Experiment in Church-filling" appeared in a recent issue of The Independent:—

In a comparatively small town, a few miles from the metropolis, the notice-board of the Congregational church has this singular announcement, following the notice of morning service: "Evening service and all other meetings in the Lecture Hall." Thereby hangs a tale, which is a substantial testimony to the value of the truth and of "Sankey's Hymns" well sung. It appears that nearly eleven years ago the little chapel was thinly attended. In the hope of reaching outsiders the pastor announced an evangelistic service on the last Sunday in the month, at which "Sankey's Hymns" would be sung. Small bills were also left at a large number of houses. There had been the usual hesitation in adopting "Sankey's Hymns"; but the prejudice was overcome by the pastor urging the choir to try them, and to do them well for Christ and humanity. The choir have never regretted it, but have earned the reputation of singing those hymns as they are seldom sung. To the surprise of all, the church was so filled on the first occasion that a few, not caring to stand in the aisles, left the place. That was the first and last special evening service held in the chapel.

Having a large lecture hall near by, it was at once urged to hold the next monthly service there. The increased attendance on that occasion led to the request that the service in the hall be held fortnightly instead of monthly. It was done, and after a few services, the building, holding nearly 600 people, was so well filled that it was decided to close the chapel, and hold the evening service there. The special service now became the regular service, but with "Sankey's Hymns." It has continued for over ten years, and is to-day as much appreciated and as well attended as ever.

Now what has been the result? Some left because it was deemed improper to receive the Lord's Supper in a lecture-hall. A few dislike the service, while admitting its usefulness, and seldom or never attend it. But it has led to many conversions, largely added to the membership of the church, and so increased the attendance at the morning service in the chapel, that on a fine morning the deacons have difficulty in finding accommodation for the worshippers, and are seriously considering the ways and means of enlarging their borders. The success of the experiment convinces us all that the Gospel fully and heartily proclaimed, with "Sankey's Hymns" well sung and for the sake of others, is a sure means of reaching the masses. It should perhaps be added that the hall is in a good position and attractive in appearance; the deacons, moreover, stand in the lobby presenting hymn-books and giving a hearty welcome to all who attend. There is not an element of sensationalism about the service, and never a clap trap advertisement respecting it. It has, moreover, led to the establishment of two largely attended children's services in the basement of the building, carried on during the service above. It is a work which has gladdened our hearts, but which places us in considerable difficulty, having outgrown the capacity of the chapel for morning worship, and lacking men of wealth who could easily help us over the difficulty.

The Pastor.

A GOSPEL TEMPERANCE MISSION has been held at West End, Southampton, by the Blue Cross Brigade.

KILBURN.—An iron building in Cambridge Avenue, Kilburn, seated for 700, has been opened by the brethren who formerly met in Kilburn Hall. The inaugural meetings were interesting and full of good promise for the future. The speakers included Messrs. C. S. Thorpe, J. L. Stanley, Levermore Garrioch, Cook, W. Dudgeon, Dr. Brookes, Max Reich, and Marshall, of Glasgow.

"STEP GIRLS" IN NORTH LONDON.—For some years Mrs. R. Brown, of 2, Mount-villas, Crouch Hill, N., has interested herself in these poor little maidens, who in many cases earn their own bread and help to keep homes together by cleaning the doorsteps of terrace and villa residents. The aim is, not only to provide them with adequate clothing, but specially to train them for occupations less precarious and less exposed to moral danger. Several girls have been helped into domestic service, and more might be done if Mrs. Brown's efforts were substantially seconded by benevolent ladies. Communications should be directed to the address given.

List of Books Handsomely Bound in Leather, etc., suitable for

CHRISTMAS & NEW YEAR PRESENTS.

"Golden Treasury" Birthday Book.

With Beautifully Illuminated Frontispiece.

PRESENTATION EDITIONS: French Morocco, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.; Rich coloured Leather, Padded, Gilt Edges, 4s. 6d. Each Copy in a neat Case.

Can also be had, elegantly bound in Cloth, Bev. Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

In this Edition of "BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY"—arranged as a Birthday Book—four additional pages are introduced at the close of each month's portions. These extra pages are arranged with blank square spaces, one for every day. Each space is adapted for receiving four entries, consequently the total number of names which can be inscribed in the "Birthday" Edition amounts to OVER FIFTEEN HUNDRED.

Beautifully printed in Carmine and Black. Morocco, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

The King's Palace.

A Series of Instructive and Spiritual Readings for each day of the Month.

By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. Can also be had in Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s.

"All that art, taste, and skill can do to make the theme attractive has been done by the well-known publishers. The result is that, within and without, THE KING'S PALACE is simply perfect."—Irish Congregational Magazine.

Be Lovers Still!

Friendly Hints to a Bride and Bridegroom.

In Beautifully-illuminated Cover, Gilt Edges, 6d.; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 1s.

"A dainty booklet, the contents of which are 'a choice blend' of good will and common sense. Miserable wedlock might have been happy, happy wedlock might have been happier, under the dominion of such 'Hints.'"

Marriage and Home.

A Volume of Wise Counsels for the Newly-Married.

In Elegant White Cloth binding, Gilt lettering on side, and Gilt edges, 2s. 6d.; in handsome Leather binding, Gilt lettering on side, and Gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

"A gem, both in print and binding, and full of wholesome counsel to those about to enter on the battle of life."—Gospel Magazine.

Sacred Songs and Solos

(750 Pieces).

Music and Words.

Old Notation, Large Type.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| FF 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 7 | 6 |
| FF 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 10 | 6 |
| FF 6. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 14 | 6 |

Old Notation, Cheap Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| HH 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 4 | 6 |
| HH 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 6 | 6 |
| HH 6. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 9 | 6 |

Tonic Sol-fa Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| RR 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 4 | 6 |
| RR 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 6 | 6 |
| RR 6. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 9 | 6 |

Quarto Edition.

For Use at the Piano, Organ, or Harmonium.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| MM 3. | Leather, burnished red edges | 12 | 6 |
| MM 4. | Persian morocco, boards, gilt | 17 | 6 |
| MM 5. | Best Turkey morocco, boards, gilt | 25 | 0 |

Words Only.

Ruby Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| AA 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 1 | 0 |

Nonpareil Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| BB 3. | Leather, burnished red edges | 1 | 0 |

Pocket Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| CC 4. | Leather, burnished red edges | 2 | 0 |
| CC 5. | Morocco, gilt edges | 3 | 0 |
| CC 6. | Morocco, yapp, kid-lined, gilt edges | 4 | 6 |

Large Type Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| DD 5. | Leather, burnished red edges | 3 | 6 |
| DD 6. | Morocco, gilt edges | 4 | 6 |

Extra Large Type Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| EE 5. | Leather, burnished red edges | 4 | 6 |
| EE 6. | Morocco, gilt edges | 6 | 6 |
| EE 7. | Morocco, yapp, gilt edges | 9 | 6 |

Sacred Songs and Solos

(750 Pieces) AND

The Christian Choir (79 Pieces)

829 PIECES IN ONE VOLUME.

Words and Music.

Quarto Size.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| XM 3. | Leather, burnished red edges | 15 | 0 |
| XM 4. | Persian morocco, boards, gilt edges | 20 | 0 |
| XM 5. | Best Turkey morocco, boards, gilt edges | 27 | 6 |

Small Type Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| XB 5. | Leather, burnished red edges | 2 | 0 |
| XB 6. | Morocco, gilt edges | 3 | 6 |

Extra Large Type Edition.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| XE 5. | Leather, burnished red edges | 5 | 0 |
| XE 6. | Morocco, gilt edges | 7 | 6 |
| XE 7. | Morocco, yapp, kid-lined, gilt edges | 10 | 6 |

New Hymns and Solos.

A Collection of 138 New Pieces Compiled by Mr. SANKEY.

Words and Music.

IN OLD NOTATION OR TONIC SOL-FA. Morocco, gilt edges, 7/6.

Tastefully bound in White Parchment, with Carmine lettering, Antique style, 5s.

Out of Egypt.

A Series of Addresses and Bible Readings on the Exodus of Israel, and its Spiritual Lessons. By Rev. Dr. PENTECOST. Can also be had in tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth limp, 2s. 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"We know of no book more excellent for a gift to young people; yet the oldest may draw instruction from it."—The Record.

A CHARMING PIECE OF AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

The Bells of Js:

or, Voices of Human Need and Sorrow.

Large Octavo Size: Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT OF REV. F. B. MEYER, AND SEVEN OTHER FULL-PAGE ENGRAVINGS. Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

PRICES.

Cloth Boards .. .. .. .. .. .. 2/6

Presentation Edition, Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges .. 3/6

From The Freeman

"This volume reminds us of Dr. John G. Paton's Autobiography in its freshness and charm, in its frankness yet reticence, in the success with which personal narratives are denuded of all unpleasing egotism, and are made to redound to the glory of an all-sufficient Saviour."

Elegantly Bound in Coloured Morocco, 3s.

Choice Sayings.

A Collection of over 800 Striking and Profitable Comments on almost every subject relating to Christian Faith and Practice. By ROBERT CHAPMAN. Can also be had in Tinted covers, 9d.; Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth bds., 1s. 6d.; Cloth, bev. bds., gilt edges, 2s.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON wrote of Mr. Chapman's book:—"This volume is really original. It handles its materials in a new manner, putting them often in a striking way. Some of these brief 'Sayings' contain whole sermons."

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

THREE VOLUMES,

Handsomely bound in Cloth Boards, and specially suitable for CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR PRESENTS, PRIZES, SUNDAY SCHOOL REWARDS, P.S.A. PRESENTATION VOLUMES, etc., etc., offered at

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

THE

Herald of Mercy,

A SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED VOLUME

Of bright, interesting, and profitable reading.

Containing:—

STIRRING NARRATIVES,
CHOICE EXTRACTS,
BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES,
PAGES FOR THE CHILDREN,
&c., &c.

QUARTO SIZE. 384 PAGES.
ABOUT 200 ILLUSTRATIONS.
Handsomely bound in Cloth Boards.

PUBLISHED AT 4/- OFFERED FOR 1/6 NET.

If sent by post, 1s. 10½d.

Percival's Picture Gallery.

By A.L.O.E.

Author of

"Rescued from Egypt," "Exiles of Babylon," "Pearls of Wisdom from the Parables," &c.

With attractive Frontispiece in colour, and carmine border to each page.

Tastefully bound in Cloth, Bevelled Boards, with gilt edges.

PUBLISHED AT 2/- OFFERED FOR 1/- NET.

If sent by post, 1s. 3d.

James Scott,

The Glasgow Evangelist.

By Dr. Andrew A. Bonar.

Author of "Life of R. M. McCheyne."

WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAITS OF DR. BONAR AND JAMES SCOTT.

Handsomely bound in Cloth, Bevelled Boards, gilt edges.

PUBLISHED AT 2/6 OFFERED FOR 1/- NET.

If sent by post, 1s. 3d.

SPECIAL OFFER:—

THE ABOVE-MENTIONED THREE VOLUMES { THE HERALD OF MERCY, PERCIVAL'S PICTURE GALLERY, JAMES SCOTT. } PUBLISHED AT 8/6 WILL BE SENT TOGETHER POST FREE, FOR 4/- NET.

Early application, accompanied by remittance, should be made to the Publishers, MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London.

Or to any Bookseller in the Kingdom.

THE LIBRARY OF SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY, and all the other Volumes mentioned on this Page will form specially acceptable and handsome CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR PRESENTS.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT.

A NEW VOLUME OF SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY
BY
REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Jeremiah:

Priest and Prophet.

Just Published.

Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

With Nine Full-page Illustrations, Specially Prepared and Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

PRICES.
Cloth Boards .. .. .. 2/6
Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Top 3/6

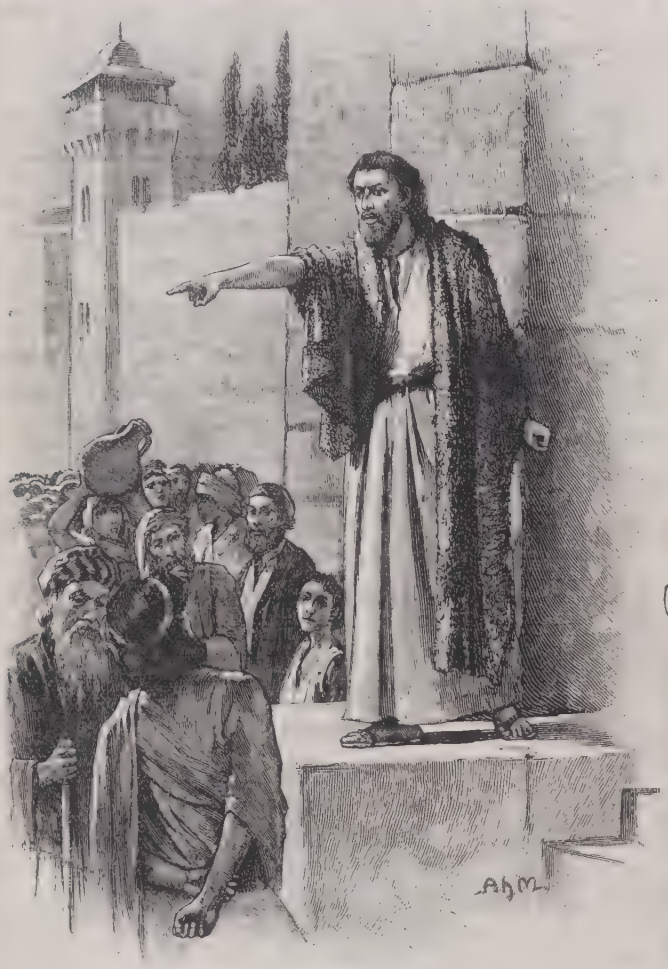
EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

JEREMIAH has always a fascination to Christian hearts, because of the close similarity that exists between his life and that of Jesus Christ. Each of them was "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief"; each came to his own, and his own received him not; each passed through hours of rejection, desolation and forsakenness. And in Jeremiah we may see beaten out into detail, experiences which, in our Lord, are but lightly touched on by the evangelists.

It is by no means an easy task to discern the true order of Jeremiah's prophecies. The clue to their present arrangement seems lost. Probably the chapters are grouped more according to subject than to chronology, those touching on the same topic being grouped together. In this book I have endeavoured, as far as possible, to follow the chronological sequence.

There is an especial message in the ministry of Jeremiah for those who are compelled to stand alone, who fall into the ground to die, who fill up what is behind of the sufferings of Christ, and through death arise to bear fruit in the great world of men, which they passionately love.



JEREMIAH PREACHING REPENTANCE.
One of the Illustrations in Rev. F. B. Meyer's New Book, "Jeremiah."

Uniform with "JEREMIAH."

SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHIES
By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Abraham:
Or, the Obedience of Faith.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Record.
"A delightful book; full of experimental religion, and a most suitable present for any pure-hearted young man or woman whose desire to devote life to the service of the Great Master is sincere and fervent. The volume is a very decided help in climbing the steep and rugged path that leads to the land of delight."

Israel:
A Prince with God.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Primitive Methodist.
"Mr. Meyer has done his work well. He not only gives us the outward facts of Jacob's life, but he leads us to the inner springs from which they flowed. The book grips us, and helps us to understand ourselves. Fathers and Sunday-school teachers will do well to buy a copy for their boys."

Joseph:
Beloved—Hated—Exalted.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Friend.
"We can heartily recommend this book as full of helpful teaching happily and forcibly conveyed. Mr. Meyer speaks of the special charm which Joseph's life has had for him, not only for its intrinsic beauty, but because of its vivid anticipation of the Life that lights all lives. This thought is exemplified in a great variety of ways, and forms a prominent feature of the book."

Moses:
The Servant of God.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Methodist Times.
"An exquisite series of vignette studies in the life of the great Prophet and law-giver of the old dispensation—devotional in their character, and yet based upon the latest knowledge of criticism. This volume will be of especial service to much-pressed lay preachers, class readers, and Sunday-school teachers."

Joshua:
And the Land of Promise.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Irish Congregational Magazine.
"Mr. Meyer's book on Joshua is worthy of being placed beside the best book that has been written on the subject; it is calm, dignified, thoughtful, and deeply spiritual throughout, full of great truths, and avaluable companion for busy workers."

Elijah:
And the Secret of his Power.

With Nine Specially Prepared Illustrations.

Cloth Boards 2/6 | PRESENTATION EDITION: Cloth Bev. Bds., gilt edges 3/6

From The Sword and Trowel.
"Good, exceedingly good. Mr. Meyer is a great gain to the armies of evangelical truth; for his tone, spirit, and aspirations are all of a fine gospel sort. In all his books there is a sweet savour, and in 'Elijah' it is specially prevalent."

THE F. B. Meyer LIBRARY OF # Scripture Biography.

Consisting of the undermentioned SEVEN VOLUMES, each containing Nine Full-page Illustrations, and attractively Bound in Library Style, in a handsome Case,

PRICE 14/6 NET.

If sent by Post 1s. 4½d. extra.

ABRAHAM ISRAEL JOSEPH MOSES JOSHUA ELIJAH JEREMIAH
MEYER MEYER MEYER MEYER MEYER MEYER
Library of
Scripture Biography.
F.B. Meyer, B.A.

CONTENTS OF THE LIBRARY.

ABRAHAM: or, the Obedience of Faith.
ISRAEL: A Prince with God.
JOSEPH: Beloved—Hated—Exalted.
MOSES: The Servant of God.
JOSHUA: And the Land of Promise.
ELIJAH: And the Secret of His Power.
JEREMIAH: Priest and Prophet.

Any of the above Volumes may be had separately—

In Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Cloth, Bev. Bds., Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

LONDON: MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

JEWISH NOTES.

NORTH AFRICA.

In an interesting account of work among Algerian Jews, from the pen of Mr. F. Spiro in The Jewish Intelligencer, reference is made to a good work now being carried on by Miss L. Trotter, and those associated with her, in the town of Algiers. Every Saturday a large Moorish house is well filled with Jews and Jewesses of all ages and ranks, and separate classes are held for young girls, for boys and youths, for women, and for men. The attendance is steadily increasing, especially in the girls' and women's classes conducted by Miss Trotter. Most of the Jews reached at Algiers are ignorant, not only of the Gospel but even of the first rudiments of their own history and religion.

NEW YORK.

Missions to the Jews are on the increase in this city and throughout America, and the work of New Testament distribution, so earnestly advocated by Rev. John Wilkinson during his tour there, has been set on foot. We learn from The Hebrew Christian that Mr. Warszawiak still continues to preach Christ to hundreds of Jews, and many inquirers after truth visit him at his house, while letters received from Jews testify to the fact that the seed so abundantly sown has not been sown in vain. Nevertheless, the numbers attending the Saturday afternoon services are not so great as formerly, and this may partially be accounted for by the proximity of other Jewish missions, which have more recently come into existence.

One hopeful development of Mr. Warszawiak's mission is the work among Jewish children, the pastors of the De Witt Memorial Church, which is in the heart of the Jewish quarter, having kindly granted the use of the building for children's services, at which the attendance has lately very largely increased. Mr. Leopold Cohn, who formerly assisted Mr. Warszawiak, has now removed to a suburb of Brooklyn, where he has opened a mission among some five or six thousand Jews.

SOUTH AFRICA.

The November issue of The South African Pioneer, the organ of the South Africa General Mission, contains an article in which a general survey is taken of the spiritual condition of the Jews in South Africa, especially those in Johannesburg, which now contains thousands of the ancient race. Mr. Albert Day writes: "Altogether, the picture presented by South African Jewry is one of a people deeply sunk in materialism, not even having that mistaken zeal of God, which, while it was opposed to saving faith, did at least give religion an interest in their eyes, which it no longer possesses."

But, notwithstanding the prevailing materialism, Messrs. Day and Malbert were encouraged by finding some who feared God, and who listened most attentively to their message. One of these turned to Christ during their visit in January last, and is standing fast in the Lord, in the face of opposition. It is now proposed to establish a permanent Jewish Mission in South Africa, and the matter has been brought before the Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church, with a view to obtaining support for a missionary to the Jews at Johannesburg. Mr. Malbert is hoping to return to Johannesburg as soon as possible, should the way be made clear. Inquiries on this subject may be addressed to Mr. A. S. Day, Lancaster-road, Wimbledon.

TORONTO BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL.

This school has been established on lines somewhat similar to those at Chicago and Glasgow. The great design is the training of consecrated men and women as pastors' assistants, and as city, home, and foreign missionaries. It is intended for those who believe they have been called of God to Christian service, and who, from age or other reasons, cannot pursue a full collegiate and theological course of study. Special provision is also made for Sunday-school teachers and others who desire a better knowledge of God's Word.

The council, officers, and lecturers of the school represent the different leading Evangelical bodies, and it is, therefore, interdenominational in character. For the present the classes meet in rooms of the Walmer-road Church, specially fitted up for the purpose. Members of Evangelical churches who have a real desire for Christian work will be welcome to all the classes.

Applications for admission and all correspondence should be sent to the secretary, Mr. W. Ferguson, 55, Walmer-road, Toronto.

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS.

The work of the Barbican Mission to the Jews is of an all-round character, embracing efforts among young and old, and including home visitation as well as public ministry. Saturday and Sunday are devoted to evangelisation and instruction of the young; and every evening of the week a Bible class is held. In the winter months the attendance at this class is sometimes so large that the hall has to be used instead of the reading-room. The New Testament is a book of marvellous freshness to the attendants; its pages are read with care, and its story and teaching shown to be the Divine fulfilment or complement of the writings of Moses and the prophets. Each attendant uses the translation of the Scriptures which he can most easily read, some German, others Polish, some Russian, others English; while the explanations given, either by the director, Herr C. T. Lipshytz, or his assistant, are in Yiddish, or the Jewish jargon which all can understand. The privilege of asking questions is readily granted, and as a rule there is discussion.

A very useful adjunct of the work is the circulation of the monthly Gospel paper, Berith Am ("A Covenant of the People"—Isaiah xlii. 6; xlix. 8). Two thousand of these pointed publications, in the Yiddish language, are distributed every month; and as one page gives particulars of the operations of the Mission, and extends a cordial invitation to Jews, it has influenced many to attend the various meetings. New inquirers are as a rule extremely cautious, "for fear of the Jews"; and often the interested or anxious one makes his way by night to the Mission House. Quite recently Jewish ministers have been helped in their inquiries concerning Christ. The reading-room is furnished with daily and weekly newspapers in many languages, and, coming from almost every country of Europe, the Jews of London are forcibly attracted to read them.

The work among Jewesses is superintended by Mrs. Lipshytz, who also takes a share in the labour of the Sunday-school. The extent to which old-time prejudices are being broken down, was illustrated at a recent Scripture examination, when one of the questions put to the little ones was: "How do we know that God loves us?" One child, remembering the hymns she had learned, replied "Jesus loves me this I know, for the Bible tells me so;" but another answered with more point: "God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." Another useful agency is the Home for inquirers, which has at present five inmates. Great care is exercised in the admission of inmates, and every endeavour made to put them in the way of earning their living as consistent disciples of Christ. Further particulars may be had from the director of the Mission, Mr. C. T. Lipshytz, 33, Finsbury Square, E.C.

MR. MOODY IN TORONTO.

Writing to the New York Independent about Mr. Moody's three weeks' mission in Toronto, Dr. Witherow says:—

The whole city was profoundly stirred. The largest hall, holding 4,000 people, was completely filled at nearly all of the forty meetings, and often hundreds were turned away. On many nights overflow meetings were held in the adjacent Metropolitan Church, the largest in the city. Nor did the interest wane as the term of his visit was extended; indeed, it seemed to increase to the end. Although the meetings began at eight o'clock, hundreds were at the hall at half-past six.

The results of the meetings cannot be tabulated in figures. Many hundreds have resolved to lead a new life, a large proportion of these being among the unchurched classes who seldom enter the doors of a place of worship. The nature of the services was the simplest conceivable. There was a great deal of singing, and a great many very brief prayers. The chief characteristic of Mr. Moody's talks was their simple, colloquial style; their numerous incidents and illustrations from his own wide experience; their intense moral earnestness; their genial, brotherly kindness, and their pungent, personal appeals. Mr. Moody paid a high tribute to the strict Sabbath observance of Toronto—not an electric car wheel turns, not a cab is on the stand, not a saloon or a store is open, nor is a paper printed or sold. He thanked God for the existence of such a Sabbath-keeping city on the American continent.

MR. HENRY DENSMORE.

In May, 1866, a young man, pronounced a hopeless consumptive, and given three months to live by his physician, entered the service of the American Sunday School Union. He died October 24, 1894, after a short illness, and with a record of twenty-eight years of good work. During that period he organised 450 new Sunday-schools, gathered into them 15,000 scholars and teachers, visited and aided as many more, called upon 5000 families, distributed over 3000 Bibles and Testaments, and travelled over 200,000 miles, most of his journeys being taken with a pair of Indian ponies.

Mr. Densmore was born near Cleveland, Ohio March 3, 1822, when Cleveland was a small village. He moved with his parents to Michigan with an ox-team in 1830, when Michigan was a wilderness occupied by Indians. The family soon became familiar with all the hardships and privations of pioneer life. They had no schools or churches for a time, but the parents being of Puritan stock they had a Christian home and a Sunday service. In due time the Sunday-school missionary came along and organised a Sunday-school, and at the age of sixteen this boy, without a common school education, was chosen superintendent, which office he held for twenty years in that and other schools. His ardent love for children and the help of the Sunday-school missionary gave him great success in the Sunday-school work, so much so that he was urged to become a Sunday-school missionary.

He did not recognise the Divine call to this work until given up to die by the doctor. Then he remembered the half-promise he had made to an old Sunday-school missionary that if he ever got out of business he might go on the Sunday-school field, and immediately wrote him, saying: "I am now ready for the missionary work; come at once." The missionary came, but was surprised to find the invalid apparently so near the grave, and said: "Too late, too late, my brother!" But now the sick man "pressed the matter" and said: "If I have but three months to live, it belongs to the Lord; and if I die, I would like to have the harness on." The open-air life and the piny atmosphere did wonders for him, and Henry Densmore gladly devoted his spared life to the Lord's work.—N.Y. Observer.

VISITING HEATHEN FESTIVALS.

We recently visited the Doorgah Festival at Parboy, near the Rajah's residence. A band of Santhal preachers and schoolboys were with me. We took with us Gospels, Bibles, tracts, Santhal musical instruments, and medicine. Our journey was pleasant. We spoke to many persons on the roadside, and gave medical aid to sick ones.

Arrived at the festival, we got a shady place under a tree close to the "Idol-house," and began our music and singing. Soon we had a crowd. Our simple, earnest Santhal preachers helped to tell out the wonderful words of Life; the schoolboys also helped in singing and playing the cymbals, which was a great attraction. One man seemed to be greatly touched, and one young priest, very angry, tore up a tract which I had given to him.

The next day we visited the festival at Baskutia, east of Bethesda. The first place was ten miles north-west. God helped us to witness for Him before hundreds of Hindus and Santhals, who listened well. We disposed of many Gospels and tracts, sang and spoke of God's love and mercy in giving his beloved Son to die for sinful men, to offer salvation to all, this salvation being through his blood, and not the blood of goats and buffaloes, which were being killed before the heathen idols.

On Sunday, October 28, after our morning service, a goodly number of Santhal pastors, teachers, and other Christians had dinner with us; then we united in praise and prayer, and started off for the Kali Festival, south of Bethel, at Phatepore. A large crowd heard the Gospel. The following day thousands came and went to dance, drink, and commit all kinds of vice in the name of Kali. May God show them their folly and wickedness.

Ten men and women were baptized recently at Bethel. Pray for us, and for more labourers.—Yours, in the love of Christ,

W. A. Barlow.

Bethel Santhal Mission, N. India.

[1901]

A MISSION IN STOCKPORT.

About six months ago it was decided by the Stockport and District Congregational Association to suggest to the churches in connection with it the desirability of holding a united mission. The suggestion was most favourably received, and the Baptists readily accepted an invitation to join in the effort. Eleven churches took part, seven in the town and four in the district. By way of preparation several united meetings of a devotional character were held, and a weekly united prayer-meeting was instituted. The town was mapped out into districts for visitation, and one of them was allotted to each church. Three distinct visitations of the whole town were arranged for, and the visitations were carried out with very considerable thoroughness.

The mission itself commenced on December 2, and concluded on December 9, missioners from various places having been secured to conduct the services. Several workshop meetings were also held, and there was a united daily prayer meeting. It has been felt to have been a time of great blessing in all the churches participating. The spiritual life of the members has been greatly quickened, and many have been led to declare themselves on the Lord's side. The churches have been drawn into closer fellowship with each other, and have experienced much joy and profit in their inter-communion. A feeling of deep thankfulness prevails, and it is hoped that a stimulus has been given to spiritual religion in the town which will long be felt. J. S. Machin.

Stockport.

THE OPIUM CRUSADE.

In the course of their campaign against the evils of opium and vice in the East, Mrs. Andrew and Dr. Kate Bushnell recently addressed a large assemblage in the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, over which Professor Simpson presided. Both ladies gave rousing addresses, based on their experiences in the East, and a strong resolution of protest was passed by the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Man Sukh Lal have recently addressed meetings on this subject at Peckham, Camberwell, and Bunhill Fields.

A correspondent states that the Auckland (New Zealand) District Association of Baptist Churches have discussed the question of India's opium trade with China, and have strongly protested against it.

The Archbishop of Dublin presided over an influential meeting in the city on Thursday last. After addresses by Mrs. Andrew and Dr. Kate Bushnell, there were speeches by Messrs. Swift McNeill, and T. W. Russell, members of Parliament, and others. Resolutions against the traffic were heartily adopted.

TEMPERANCE IN IOWA.

The Murphy brothers, T. E. and W. J., have closed a great meeting in Davenport, Ia. Mr. T. E. Murphy and his wife held the first meeting October 7. From the first it was evident that a new note had been struck in the great temperance agitation in Iowa. Fearless but frank, abusing no one, preaching the Gospel of love for the individual, and relying only upon the Gospel to save him, Mr. Murphy presented the whole subject in new and attractive lights, and, with a logic that was clear and invincible, coupled with an abundant use of elocution and wit, captured the people, and hundreds signed the pledge at the very beginning of the work.

This work continued for three weeks, during the last of which Mr. W. J. Murphy was present a few evenings. In all, about 4000 signed the pledge, and the unanimous verdict of press and people is that it is the most successful mission of the kind ever held anywhere in this vicinity. The victory is all the more wonderful when we remember that the meetings were conducted in the midst of a great political campaign, when many would hesitate on account of possible political interests at stake.

It is expected that Mr. Francis Murphy will be secured to continue this work. Mr. T. E. Murphy and wife go to Hartford, Conn., hoping to return to Iowa in the early winter. Mr. W. J. Murphy began a campaign in Maquokita, November 4.—N.Y. Independent.

WINTER MISSIONS IN INDIA.

1. The Committee.—The following form the committee:—

2. The Objects.—To send out winter missioners to India, men full of the Holy Ghost and power.
   (a) To cheer and encourage missionaries of all denominations.
   (b) To hold conferences amongst the European and native Christians for prayer, praise, and holiness.
   (c) To preach by interpretation or otherwise to the heathen as opportunity presents itself.

3. The Plans.—(a) That the missioners should be sent forth two and two, according to our Lord's plan.
   (b) That to each two missioners an interpreter should be attached, taking care that he is full of loving sympathy.
   (c) That each of the two missioners shall work in the towns and villages of a certain province where one language is spoken.
   (d) That the committee shall fix the way of the missioners, and prepare the place for them, having first submitted the proposed plan to the missioners.
   (e) That the whole expense of the missioners and their outfits shall be met by the Special Winter Mission Fund.
   (f) That no one missioner's outfit and expenses shall exceed £150 for the winter, except under special circumstances.

4. The Reasons.—(a) That India in the providence of God has been given to England.
   (b) That out of the 286 millions of persons in India, scarcely one million are professing Protestant Christians.
   (c) That partly through mixing with Europeans, and partly through the education received in the Government schools, the great mass of the Hindus (220,000,000 in numbers) are losing faith in their gods and priests, and are to-day groping in the dark after a new religion, and therefore they run after the teachings of Roman Catholics, agnostics, infidels, or any austere fakeer.
   (d) That the next quarter of a century, if the Lord tarry, appears likely to be most important in the religious history of India. There is a great religious upheaval, and now or never India must be won by the Gospel.
   (e) That probably twenty-five years hence the Church of God will not have to fight with idolatry in India, but will have to grapple with a far more difficult evil in the garb of infidelity.
   (f) That the door is wide open all over India, for the preaching of the Gospel, and an educated Englishman is listened to with rapt attention, because he belongs to the country that governs India.

5. The Funds.—That a fund is opened for the above objects, and any lovingly and prayerfully-given donations and subscriptions may for the present be sent to the "Special Winter Mission Fund," at the Wilts and Dorset Banking Co., Salisbury, or to any one of the committee.

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

Mr. F. C. Mills, J.P., presided over a conference of East-End workers in the Stepney Temple, Commercial-road, on Wednesday week. There was a goodly gathering of Ragged School workers and friends interested in the Home Cripples' Band. Mr. Bruce, M.L.S.B., expressed his sympathy with the work, and referred especially to the kindergarten instruction given by Miss Smith to the "shut-ins" at their homes. Mr. Varney, the R.S.U. superintendent, gave a succinct account of the work done during the year—there were seven centres where drift meetings had been held regularly, with an average attendance of 200 children. The visitation of the cripples in their homes had been sustained, and numbers of such sufferers were constantly being found.

Miss Coles pleaded for more help, both personal and in kind, whilst Mr. Simeon Clayton detailed the benefits derived by the children when staying at the Cripples' Holiday Home at Southend throughout the year.

MRS. JOHN RIPLEY has conducted a week's temperance mission at Redruth.

IF BUT OUR EYES WERE OPEN, we would see, in the person of every little forlorn waif of the streets, the Christ-child himself stretching out his hands for our pity and our love. Who among us has the open eyes to see the Divine Visitant, even in humblest guise? And which of us has the heart to feel and the hands to succour? Surely, eye and heart and hand will not be lacking in this great service to Christ.—Dr. Barnardo.

HYDE PARK HALL.

Mr. Charles Cook recently conducted a week's mission to young men at the Y.M.C.A., Bayswater, attended by much blessing. Afterwards a meeting for praise and prayer was held in Hyde Park Hall, at which some remarkable testimonies were given. The experience of one was thus expressed; "On Monday I was a blasphemer, a gambler, a drunkard, and a smoker; to-night I am a child of God, and saved from all these things."

Another man said: "For six years God has been striving with me, but I have hitherto refused to submit. I now surrender, and take Christ to be my Lord. My wife has long prayed for me, but little does she expect what I shall tell her when I go home."

Women as well as men joined in petitions as well as thanksgiving. A middle-aged woman said, "I want to thank God for my own conversion, and several others in the same house." Another said: "In the house where I live, seven have been saved. Thank God for his blessing." The meeting was a refreshment to many believers, and the Saturday prayer-meeting became doubled in size, and was followed by a special mission, at which souls were blessed night after night. Among the speakers were Lady Hope, Mrs. Amanda Smith, and Mr. Cook.

On Saturday last another praise meeting was held. A lady gave thanks to God for nine in her house that had been blessed; and a young man for four in his home. Many of the employés in the large firms near by were led to accept the Saviour, and gave thanks. For two hours and a-half a continual stream of praise went up to God.

TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

A little woman-child, a growing girl, a young maiden, is still so much under her mother, that to think or speak of the one is to think or speak of the other. And just what the mother is, just that, at all these early stages of her life at any rate, her daughter is.—Dr. Alex. Whyte.

In the experience of many a parent it has come to pass, and was said by one of old, "While thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone." The child was with us yesterday. We could do almost as we would with him. But the man must take his own course, and answer for himself.

It is so easy to spoil a child. Wait on him, and fly when he calls. Let him whip auntie because she will not get him a sugar-plum. Let him understand that the house is his realm, and that he is its ruler. Give him everything he cries for. Then, mother, wait, you will not have your sorrow to seek.

A Turkish proverb says, "The nest of the blind bird is built by God." Have you ever seen a blind child in her home? Those sealed eyes, those tottering feet, those outstretched hands, have a power to move parents to labour, care and sacrifice, such as the strongest and the most beautiful of households do not inspire.

How will they build, those little hands?
Upon the treacherous, shifting sands,
Or where the rock eternal stands?
And will they fashion strong and true
The work that they shall find to do?
Dear little hands, if I but knew!
Could I but see the veiled fate
Behind your barred and hidden gate!

ROBIN DINNER MOVEMENT.—On Thursday, December 27, the Robin Dinner Fund will inaugurate its sixteenth season by a large gathering in St. Martin's Town Hall, Charing Cross-road, W.C. At six p.m., between 800 and 1000 robins, from the slums lying between the Strand and Oxford-street, will have a hearty Christmas meal, the beautiful hall having been kindly lent for the occasion by St. Martin's Vestry. The brass band of the National Refuges will play during the dinner, and an entertainment will follow. Tickets, admitting to the galleries (2s. 6d. each), can be had from the hon. secretary, Mr. C. Ashton Bullock, 7, Paternoster-square, E.C., to whom other communications regarding the movement may also be addressed.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For Bank Holiday meetings (December 26) at Rainham, Essex, and a special Mission, from January 13, to be held by Mr. Bacon in the Gospel Hall, Rainham.—For special services now being held at Salem Chapel, Englishcombe, near Bath, by Mr. Opie Rodway.—For special services by Mr. William Forbes at Sheffield from next Sunday.—For special services being held in the Assembly Rooms, High-street, Leytonstone, led by Messrs. Borton Bros.—For a special mission by W. R. Lane at Sidcup.—For blessing on special mission to young men in City warehouses from 7th to 11th January, in connection with the City of London Bible-class Union. PRAISE.—For great blessing given during a Mission to Children at Earlham Hall, Dalston, conducted by Mr. Charles D. Smith

Letters to the Editor.

MAN AND GEOLOGICAL RESEARCH.

Sir,—Having read with much interest the papers on "The Ascent of Man," which appeared in your issues of November 8 and 15, I should like to draw attention to Sir J. W. Dawson's recent book, "The Meeting-place of Geology and History." This book contains a chapter on the world before man which opens thus:—"Man is of recent introduction on the earth. For millions of years the slow process of world-making had been going on, with reference to physical structure, and to the lower grades of living animals. Only within a few thousand years does our globe seem to have been fitted for its highest tenant."

Brief pictures of the geological periods of creation are then given, showing how parallel these periods are with the six days of creation given in Genesis. Then the author says:—"No geologist would expect to find any remains of man or his works in the periods represented by our five earlier pictures, because in these periods the physical conditions necessary to man and the animals nearest to him in structure do not appear to have existed, and their places in nature were occupied by lower types. . . . Nor, for similar reasons, would we expect to meet with man in the earlier part of that last, or cenozoic period in which we still live; and, in point of fact, it is only in superficial deposits of the later part of this last great period of the earth's history that we actually meet with evidence of the existence of the human species.

"If there is based on this fact a question as to the actual date of man's first appearance, the physical considerations indicate about twenty millions of years for the whole duration of the earth. Setting apart, say, a fourth of this time for the early pre-geologic condition of the world, the remainder may be roughly estimated as five millions for the archæan or eozoic, six for the palæozoic, three for the mesozoic, and one for the cenozoic. Of the last, the later part, in which there is a possibility of the existence of man, will be limited to less than a quarter of a million; and within this the certainly known remains of man, whether attributed as by some to the latest inter-glacial period, or to the post-glacial—a mere question of terms, and not of facts—cannot be older, according to the best geological estimates, than from seven thousand to ten thousand years. This, according to our present knowledge, is the maximum date of the oldest traces of man, and probably these are nearer in age to the smaller than to the larger number. . . . . It may be said that all this is mere assertion. It fairly represents, however, the conclusions reached on the latest geological evidence.

"It may also be objected that if, as held by some evolutionists, man was slowly developed from lower animals, and if his earliest-known remains are still human in their characters, he must have had a vastly longer history covering the periods of his gradual change from, say, ape-like forms. This is admitted; but then we have as yet no good evidence that man was so developed, and no remains of intermediate forms are yet known to science. Even should some animal, either recent or fossil, be discovered intermediate in structure between man and the highest apes, we should still require proof that it was the ancestor of man, by the occurrence of connecting forms or otherwise. As the facts now stand, the earliest-known remains of man are still human, and tell us nothing as to previous stages of development."

I have quoted so fully in order that the bearing of the last paragraph upon the general question might be clearly understood. It is to geology that we have to look for light upon the question of the evolution of man, but it tells us nothing of such a progression upward from lower types. The remains of man which have been found show not only a high physical development, but also high intellectual character. Referring to human skeletons found at Cro-magnon, on the River Vezère, a tributary of the Dordogne, and elsewhere, our author says:—

"But mute though they may be as to the details of their lives, the man of Cro-magnon and his contemporaries are eloquent of one great truth, in which they coincide with the Americans and with the primitive men of all the early ages. They tell us that primitive man had the same high cerebral organisation which he possesses now, and we may infer the same high intellectual and moral nature, fitting him for communion with God and headship over the lower world. They indicate also, like the mound-builders, who preceded the North American Indian, that man's earlier state was the best—that he had been a high and noble creature before he became a savage. It is not conceivable that their high development of brain and mind could have spontaneously engrafted itself on a mere brutal and savage life. These gifts must be remnants of a noble organisation degraded by moral evil. They thus justify the tradition of a Golden and Edenic Age, and mutely protest against the philosophy of progressive development as applied to man, while they bear witness to the similarity in all important characters of the oldest prehistoric men with that variety of our species which is at the present day at once the most widely extended and the most primitive in its manners and usages."

Hoping that these extracts will be thought of sufficient general interest for publication, and apologising for so long a letter.—Yours faithfully,

H. C. Mathias.

5, Orlando-road, Clapham, S.W.

MISSIONARIES ON FURLOUGH.

Dear Sir,—May I address a few words to Christian friends in England and Scotland, asking them to be a little more humane in their treatment of missionaries home on furlough?

Most missionaries are sent home on account of their health. They have been working—chiefly mentally—for perhaps eight or ten years, and require rest, not so much for their bodies as for their minds and nervous system. Unfortunately for them, nervous exhaustion does not produce so much visible weakness as invisible; hence, when they arrive, with faces bronzed by a tropical sun, one of the first thing which greets their ears is, "How well you are looking!" just as though the home friends had expected to see them as emaciated as one convalescent from typhoid fever.

They are almost immediately booked for meetings. "Don't trouble to give an address, but just say a few words about the work," is often the form of request; but a meeting is gathered, and the audience expect nothing short of an address. The speaking at meetings, however, is not the only tiring part. The speaker stays with a host who invites friends to "come and meet Mr. ——— from abroad." The missionary is then more or less overwhelmed with questions from the time he enters the house till the time he leaves. These are pleasant gatherings for all concerned, but are far from restful. I have before me a list of seventeen meetings within seventeen consecutive days, which one missionary, not long returned from abroad, is now addressing, including conferences, addresses, and three services on one Sunday. Besides these he would probably be asked to take family worship, and have the fatigue of travelling to and fro.

Soldiers home on furlough are not set to military work, nor students on their holidays to their books. Why should missionaries not rest from that very work which has been the cause of their return home? They might refuse to take meetings, but probably enjoy them at the time, and do not like to say "No" to these friends who have been so kind to them. As far as I have noticed, none are received by Christians at home with such warm-hearted hospitality as are missionaries, and our family has received kindnesses on every side, which we can never be too thankful for, and still less repay. But to their hospitality and kindness I would ask friends to add this: that they grant to those sent home for a rest that rest which they so much need, at least for the first few months. Thus they will follow the example of Him who said, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest awhile."—Yours sincerely,

A Missionary's Son.

WORK IN PUBLIC-HOUSES.

Sir,—I notice in your issue of November 22, a letter respecting evangelistic work in public-houses, in which a correspondent, "C. H. B." says, "The London City Mission. . . . might give us valuable hints." I beg to say that we have, at the present time, twenty-seven men engaged in visiting some 10,000 out of more than 14,000 houses within the Metropolitan area which are licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors, besides a large number of coffee shops and cocoa-rooms. The work is most encouraging, and we shall be happy to furnish details to any persons interested in our operations.—Yours faithfully, T. S. Hutchinson, Clerical Secretary.

London City Mission, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

WOMEN'S MINISTRY.

Dear Sir,—With reference to your note in this week's Christian on Dr. Gordon's article on the ministry of women, may I be allowed to make a suggestion? Is there not a danger of running to extremes in this as in other questions? Some who desire to close women's mouths entirely seem to make such passages as 1 Cor. xi. 5 of none effect. Others who are for giving women full liberty seem to make void such passages as 1 Tim. ii. 12, and 1 Cor. xiv. 34, 35. But is this rightly dividing the word of truth? Do not the first-named passages show clearly that there are occasions when women may minister in the manner indicated, and the last named that there are occasions when they may not?

As to the interpretation which Dr. Gordon and some others give to the Greek word translated "speak" in 1 Cor. xiv. 34, 35, namely, "ask questions of an interrupting character," some might be interested to notice, if they have not already done so, that the same word occurs in twenty-two other places in this same chapter, once of God speaking (v. 21), and twenty one times of the exercise of the gifts of tongues and prophecy. Would it not be rather arbitrary to assume a meaning for the word in vv. 34, 35, which it would not bear in the rest of the chapter? May the Lord give us all more subjection to his Word, and a right understanding in all things.—Yours faithfully, W. Hoste.

23, Sussex-square, Brighton.

CHRISTIAN "MADNESS" CONCERNING MONEY.

Dear Sir,—I have been much disappointed at finding no rejoinder to the important letter of "An Inquirer" in your issue of Nov. 22. I have felt for a long time the certitude of the conclusions which he has come to, but puts in the form of a query, and I have looked in vain for any strong convictions among Christians in general on this subject. And yet the more I think of it the more I feel sure that the comparative disregard of Christians to the perfectly plain commands of Christ about the accumulation of wealth is by far the weakest of all weak spots in the Christian life of our times.

It seems to me to be the very acme of worldliness, compared with which the pleasure-seeking which is so vigorously denounced by many "moneyed Christians" (in a strange collocation, surely!) is almost innocent! For its aim is an economically-miscalled "independence," which is contrary to that dependence upon God taught and practised by our Master, and utterly subversive of that dependence upon one another which is, or should be, the very essence of church life. What little meaning can there be in praying "Give us this day our daily bread" when we have taken good care to provide for it for years and years to come by big-dividend bearing investments and a good balance at the bank! What a hollow thing this "independence" has made the modern idea of what a "church" should be!

Banish it from the practice of Christians, and what results would follow? (1) More money for Christian work. (2) More work for the unemployed. (3) More real dependence upon our Father and his workings in nature. (4) The realisation of the original idea of a Christian Church, in the revival of associated living among Christians and in the support by every Christian Church of its own sick, aged, and out-of-works.

For the prohibition of saving, which would, if obeyed, land every isolated Christian in the workhouse, is intended to bring about a community of life among Christians in which all who can work will work, not only for themselves, but for all who cannot. Thus the "Body" of Christ, which in nineteenth-century Christendom has little more actuality than a ghost, would become first a fact and then a power.

In conclusion, I will only add that the enormity of the system of private saving—on account of the horrible evils of poverty, starvation, and misery that result from it to others—is corroborated by the conclusion of the modern school of political economists. And the social conditions prevalent in the Roman world in Christ's day were most significantly parallel to those of present-day civilisation. Henry Bazett.

Dover.

Dear Sir,—The error which some of your correspondents seem to have fallen into arises from overlooking the fact that laying up treasure is not forbidden, but doing so for "themselves" is. Capital is a privilege and a responsibility not to be shifted on others, and a blessing when devoted to God.

We read if we honour God with our substance as well as our increase (capital and income), our barns will be filled with plenty. If having our barns filled with plenty is a sin, it seems a strange reward for honouring God.—Yours truly, Nemo.

THE Y.W.C.A.

A branch has been formed at Newent, Gloucestershire, and about thirty members have been enrolled. Meetings are held at the Town Hall twice a week. The affairs of the branch are managed by an influential committee. Miss Marriote is the secretary.

The association at Rutland-square, Dublin, continues to experience much blessing in their new home, No. 26, but consequent on their removal from No. 8, a debt of some £40 was incurred, towards which a friend has kindly promised £10 if the remaining £30 is collected by January 10. This excellent institution, which is doing good work for the Master, deserves the sympathy and support of all interested in such benevolent and Christian efforts.

THE Y.M.C.A.

Fifteen men confessed Christ at a recent men's meeting at Terre Haute, Ind.

Mr. W. Clarkson Wallis, of Brighton, has accepted the honorary secretaryship of the South-Eastern District Union of Y.M.C.A.'s.

Rev. Alexander Patterson has conducted a series of meeetings, extending over a week each, at the colleges at Albion and Olivet, Michigan.

Mr. Ferdie B. Allen, of the Liverpool Y.M.C.A., has been appointed general secretary at Walsall, to succeed Mr. R. D. Pringle, who sails for India on the 27th inst.

Rev. L. Byrde, on his way from England to Hawaii, where he will enter upon missionary work, spoke before various Associations in the United States. He is going out under the auspices of the Student Volunteer Movement.

Mr. George S. Avery, well known as an Association worker at Boston, Mass., has accepted a call to become pastor's evangelistic assistant of the Central Presbyterian Church of New York, Rev. Wilton Merle Smith, D.D., pastor.

A series of special song services for men at the Clinton, Mass., Association has been productive of much good in bringing the work also more prominently before the people. They have been used of God for the winning of souls.

The four Sunday-night services arranged for and conducted by the Bristol Y.M.C.A. having been successful in attracting to the People's Palace, Baldwin-street, over 2,000 of the class who throng the streets on Sunday evenings, it has been decided to continue the service for at least another month.

The services of the week of prayer at the Harlem branch of the New York City Association have been the most successful, and produced the best results of any series of meetings ever held in the branch. The success of the meetings was largely due to the fact that Mr. F. T. Pierson, the evangelist, had charge.

The Anglo-American Association, 160, Rue Montmartre, Paris, had a lecture recently by Rev. Egerton R. Young (the famous dog-canoe traveller), illustrated by limelight views. The Association and the Y.P.S.C.E. are arranging that solitary young people (British and American) shall spend a happy Christmas Day in the gay city.

The National Council have voted a sum of £50 in furtherance of the appointment of a travelling secretary for the North-Midland District, to enable it to co-operate with the Midland District in securing the services of Mr. F. C. Bennett, who, as travelling secretary, has rendered valuable help during the past three years in the Midland and South Wales Districts.

On Tuesday, the 11th inst., the members and friends of the Association at Stafford Rooms Edgware-road, met in an informal gathering of a social character, and took leave of Mr. A. A. Martin, a very active worker in the Association for some years past. Regret was expressed at the loss the Association sustained by his removal; but this was accompanied by an expression of deep interest in his future in connection with the London City Mission.

The Y.M.C.A., Dublin, has been stirred up of late to take a still deeper interest in foreign missionary work by the consecutive visits of Mr. Raynor, of the Zambesi Industrial Mission, and Dr. Robert Kerr, of the Central Morocco Mission. These friends were very earnest in their appeals to the hearts and consciences of the members, and as a result some three or four have decided to offer themselves for foreign missionary training. Already nine members of the Dublin Y.M.C.A. have gone forth into the field, and they are remembered weekly in prayer at the meetings of the Association.

New Brighton Y.M.C. Association and Christian Mission held its annual meeting last week. Alderman James Smith occupied the chair. Mr. T. A. Leigh read the annual report, which gave an encouraging account of the work carried on by the Association. The chairman spoke of the good work which was being done for the lifeboatmen and fishermen. He also referred to the large number of Bibles and Gospel books sold by the colporteur. Revs. Thomas Puddicombe, C. H. H. Wright, D.D., Alex. Gordon, Dr. Bowman, James Eaton, Edmund Morley, and Mr. Robert Comyn delivered addresses.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

The large place given to the junior work at the State conventions in America this autumn has been quite noticeable.

At the recent crowded convention of the Auckland Provincial C.E. Union of New Zealand, a call was made for those who would volunteer for mission work during the year, if opportunity offered. More than fifty Endeavourers stood up in response.

South Australian societies have sent seventeen of their members to foreign mission fields. They are to be found in India, China, and Africa; and though most of them are Baptists, the Congregationalists and Wesleyans are also represented.

It goes without saying that Dr. F. E. Clark. "Father Endeavour Clark," as he is popularly called—is receiving a right hearty welcome from the Christian Endeavour Societies in Great Britain. Before these lines are in type the 2000th branch of the British section of the Christian Endeavour Societies will have been registered. The last addition from Lancashire is Queen's Park Church, Manchester, which stands No. 1975 on the roll.—Manchester Guardian.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

Rev. John McTavish, of the East Free Church, Inverness, has celebrated his ministerial jubilee.

The Border Counties Tent Mission has done good work during the past season. The evangelists report a spirit of earnest inquiry among the people.

Dr. Clark, of the Christian Endeavour Society, addressed a public meeting in the Edinburgh F.C. Assembly Hall last week, giving an interesting sketch of the progress of the movement.

The Association for the Religious Improvement of the Highlands and Islands is doing a good work in supplementing the educational deficiencies in the remoter parts of the Highlands, and in helping young students for the ministry.

"The Church and the Churchless" was the subject of an earnest discussion by the Dundee F.C. Office Bearers' Union last week. The evils of abstinence from church privileges were deplored, but the remedy is not so easy to find.

The Glasgow branch of the B.W.T.A. held its annual meeting recently in the Christian Institute. A strong opinion was expressed that the adoption of the Gothenburg system in this country was inadvisable, and the principle of local veto was supported.

A contributor to The Dundee Advertiser gives an interesting sketch of the Stirling Home for Destitute and Orphan Children, superintended by Miss Croall. The children are kept till they are twelve or thirteen, and in many cases sent to Miss Stirling's receiving Home, Nova Scotia.

In the Christian Institute, Glasgow, a public conference took place last week on temperance legislation. The Bishop of Chester attended, and described his scheme on the lines of the system in force in Sweden and Norway. Bailie Chisholm spoke in favour of the Local Veto Bill of Mr. John Wilson as against the scheme of the Bishop.

ST. PAUL'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This Society, in connection with the establishment of Messrs. Hitchcock, Williams, and Co., was privileged to hold its fifty-second annual gathering on Friday last. Mr. F. G. Williams took the chair, in the regretted absence of Sir George Williams.

The report having been read by Mr. J. Henderson, one of the secretaries, Canon Fleming gave a very practical and helpful address. He exhorted the members to more devotedness in the Christian life.

An interesting address followed by Rev. G. H. Bonfield, of the London Missionary Society, who has been labouring for seven years at Hong Kong. Notwithstanding many hindrances the work has grown, and he had seen the numbers of native believers increase from nine hundred to over nineteen hundred. Rev. G. D. Sawday, late of Toomcore, India (and at one time a member of the establishment), gave an interesting account of the orphanage of five hundred boys which he was privileged to found, and which became one of the most encouraging features of his work. He also spoke in encouraging terms of the Church work in Toomcore.

OBITUARY.

DR. H. M. STORRS.

Dr. Henry Martyn Storrs, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Orange, N.J., died at his home on December 1, from pneumonia. A native of Ohio, he was brought up by his uncle, R. S. Storrs, father of the well-known Brooklyn minister of that name. After working some years as a teacher, he entered the ministry, and served Congregational churches in several important centres. In 1872 he was elected secretary of the American Home Missionary Society, and held this position till 1882, when he was called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church at Orange, N.J. Dr. Storrs was a trustee of Marietta College, Ohio, and a member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

MR. JAMES BLOODWORTH, CHELTENHAM.

This devoted servant of Christ passed on Tuesday ast week to his rest. The news will cause mourning in many a heart and home to which he had proved a blessing. Among all sections of the people he was highly esteemed; but it was among the young that the name of James Bloodworth had become a household word. His long and active association with Cambray Chapel won for him well-deserved renown. His Young Men's Bible Class was known throughout the length and breadth of the land as a training-school for Christian workers. To its influence more than one well-known minister owe not only their spiritual influence, but, under God, their spiritual being. It is stated that Rev. William Cuff, of Shoreditch Tabernacle, is one of the converts of this Bible-class ministry of Mr. Bloodworth.

MRS. C. WILSON, BLACKHEATH.

Many who know Rev. Charles Wilson and his faithful work at Blackheath will deeply sympathise with him in the sudden and painful bereavement he has suffered. He has resigned his charge at Blackheath to go to Torquay, and on Monday week a farewell meeting was held, bringing to a close a pastorate of twelve years. A large number of friends gathered to take farewell of him and Mrs. Wilson in view of their departure for Torquay. At the close, Mr. Wilson rose to pronounce the Benediction, when a lady was seen to leave her seat and pass to the vestry in a fainting condition. The Benediction pronounced, Mr. Wilson inquired who it was, and found to his painful astonishment that it was his wife, and that she was dead. Death seemed to have been instantaneous as soon as she had passed the vestry door. Throughout the country the intelligence will be received with great regret.

PASTEUR ERNEST DHOMBRES.

A great void has been caused in the ministerial ranks of the Reformed Church of France, by the death of M. le Pasteur Dhombres, for forty-five years an active Christian teacher. The son of a pastor, he studied at Geneva and Strasburg, and laboured in several important spheres. For upwards of thirty years his duties kept him in the French capital, where he first worked in association with Pasteur Vermeil and then with M. Jullerat. He afterwards undertook the duties of the parish of Saint-Esprit, which he discharged until the end of his life—during a period of about a quarter of a century. He was long regarded as one of the most powerful preachers in Paris. He had his trials, among the most acute being the total loss of sight; but without murmuring he still continued during years of privation to preach and teach in the name of the Lord. He was a member of the most important Protestant and Evangelical Societies of France; and published several volumes of sermons and reflections.

MRS. L. C. SCOTT.

The death is announced of Mrs. Leoni Chute-Scott, of Palmur, Deccan, India, aged thirty-five. She was a daughter of Mr. Edward Chute, an active Christian at Strathroy, Ontario, and left Canada seven years ago to assist her brother in mission work. In eight months she acquired the language so far as to take up village effort with a Bible-woman, and her zeal ever surpassed her strength. A "Baby Organ" was her constant companion as she toured with her brother over the rocky hills and through wild jungles, and accompanied her voice in singing the Glad Tidings in hundreds of villages. Miss Chute was married to Mr. W. G. Scott a little over a year ago, since which event her activity has been lessened by ill-health, although she has toured four months with her husband during the year. When a child Mrs. Scott suffered from symptoms of convulsions, and on Nov. 14 she was seized with convulsions, from which never recovered consciousness. The best medical care was at hand, but the devoted lady never saw her baby boy. The sad news rapidly spread into remote parts of the field, and the villagers have not yet ceased to mourn the loss of "Missama," and rehearse her works of love.

PERSONALIA.

Professor Marchant, head-tutor of the Pastors' College, has been laid up for several days.

Dr. James Spurgeon has for some weeks been suffering from an attack of quinsy, and is still far from well.

Rev. John McNeill is expected soon to visit Calcutta on his way back from Australia. Earnest preparations are being made.

Mr. Robert Wilson, so well known to all who resort to Keswick, has been ill; he is now, we are glad to say, improving in health.

Rev. James Baillie.—Great satisfaction is felt by the Bloomsbury Baptist church at the decision of their pastor to decline the invitation to King's-road, Reading.

Mr. John T. Dorland, who is widely known as a leader in the Adult School movement and secretary of the Friends' First-day School Association, has become editor of One and All, the monthly organ of the movement.

Mr. J. M. Goodchild, travelling secretary of the N.E. Metropolitan Y.M.C.A. Union, writes:—"I am still, after being laid aside for more than two months, extremely weak. The heart's action still continues to cause much anxiety."

Sir George Williams, having in a measure recovered from the serious indisposition from which he has been suffering during the past few weeks, journeyed on Tuesday to the South of France, where he will probably spend the coldest of the winter months.

The late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon passed away on January 31, 1892. Lord's Day, January 27, 1895, is, appointed to be held as Memorial Sunday by those who cherish his memory. Dr. J. A. Spurgeon appeals for a collection on that day on behalf of the Stockwell Orphanage.

Pastor Archibald G. Brown has already given two daughters to the missionary cause; now he gives yet another in Miss Lucy, who, having been trained in the London Hospital, has been married to Dr. J. H. Bennett, whose medical missionary adventures in Labrador we have already noticed, and who is going as medical missionary to China.

Pastor Chiniquy, writing from Montreal on November 29, says:—"For six weeks I have been suffering from a severe illness. The Jesuits and priests have made desperate efforts to come near my bed, but by the mercy of God we have driven them back, and they have not yet been able to reach my room. Through Christ we hope to be conquerors, and to obtain the victor's crown."

Esther Abraham, accompanied by her two children and Rev. W. and Mrs. Shedd, arrived safely at her home in Geog Tapa, Oroomiah, Persia, on October 30. The journey was a difficult one, and proved very trying to all, but journeying mercies were graciously given. Will all friends of the Orphanages kindly bear them and the Deacon up in their prayers, that they may have grace to labour amidst their many difficulties.

Rev. Dr. C. H. Wenyon.—Many have heard with surprise that this devoted missionary, while travelling through Turkey, en route for China, was arrested and imprisoned. Last week Rev. G. W. Olver stated that he had just received a letter from Dr. Wenyon to the effect that on his way to China, in passing through Central Turkey, he had been arrested by Turkish officials on the false charge of active sympathy with the Armenian Christians, and for three weeks had been imprisoned. Through the good offices of an American missionary he had been liberated, and the Governor admitted his arrest was a mistake.

SANITARY MEASURES IN INDIA.

A Blue Book, just published, contains a remarkable paragraph by the Army Sanitary Commission on venereal disease in the army in India. They have arrived at the conclusion that the evil had been very slightly mitigated in India under the Lock Hospital system, and that the re-introduction of the system on sanitary grounds could not be recommended. They append a statement showing the amount of venereal disease in the home army during the six years preceding the repeal of the C.D. Acts, and the six years succeeding their repeal, and they say: "From these figures it will be seen that the ratio of the admissions per 1000 has decreased since the Acts were abolished. These figures suffice to show how very little influence the Acts could have had in diminishing venereal disease under conditions more favourable to their operations than those which exist in India."

This condemnation of the system of regulation not only in India but in England by the highest army sanitary authority, ought to put an end to those exaggerated and ridiculous statements, to which currency has recently been given, with respect to the results of repeal.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Dr. L. W. Munhall has experienced much of the power and presence of God in a recent mission at Hackensack, N.J., when nearly 300 persons professed to accept Christ.

Ramsgate.—Mr. Wm. Forbes recently conducted a week's mission in the Primitive Methodist church, Denmark-road, Ramsgate. His addresses were highly appreciated.

Liverpool.—Mr. James Wharton, through the Evangelisation Society, has concluded an eight days' mission at Beacon Hall, Liverpool Town Mission, in which there has been very decided blessing.

Falfield, Gloucestershire. — An evangelistic mission has been conducted by Rev. George White, of Liverpool. The services were well attended, and much interest was felt. Similar meetings are being held this week at Cromhall and Rangeworthy.

Mr. T. W. Canning, of the Evangelisation Society, has concluded a mission in Pittenweem, Fife, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. The interest increased as the meetings went on, and many anxious ones were dealt with, not a few deciding for Christ.

Mrs. Horton and Miss Parker are conducting a mission at Bodford, Sandy. The Primitive Chapel proving far too small for the Sunday evening service, Rev. G. H. Jones placed the Baptist church at our disposal, and it was packed. W. Norman.

Rev. Thomas Waugh is always sure of a hearty welcome when he visits Birmingham. He has concluded a most successful mission at Belmont-row Chapel. There have been large gatherings, and the hard-headed working-men have hung on the utterances of the missioner, and many have been led to Christ.

Mr. Moody is holding a series of meetings in Lowell, Mass., U.S.A. On the first Sunday, in spite of the severe storm, the great Moxie factory was filled immediately upon the opening of the doors. In the afternoon and evening large overflow meetings were held. Mr. Moody preached to Christians at both services. At the evening overflow meeting a number rose for prayer.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has concluded a special mission in the Pevensey-road Congregational Church, Eastbourne. The services have been crowned with the Divine blessing, resulting in a large number of persons, both old and young, giving themselves to Christ. The Pastor (Rev. G. Thompson) and his flock have been greatly cheered, and the mission has given fresh impetus to their future work.

Rev. B. Fay Mills has held a fortnight of evangelistic services in Manchester, U.S.A. As a result of the meetings about 2000 persons have signed cards. The revival has been genuine, as shown by its several characteristics. The "mid-week Sabbath" was a day of special interest, since business in the city was largely suspended.

Dunlop, N.B.—Most hopeful tidings are to hand of continued blessing being experienced in this district. The special Gospel meetings have ceased for the present, but the usual prayer meetings are largely attended. An impetus has been given to the work of the Y.M.C.A., and a Christian Endeavour Society is to be formed. One of the leading agents in the movement, Mr. Symon, of the Established Church, has been laid aside with illness, but he is now recovering.

Kilburn Hall.—The services being conducted by Mr. J. J. Sims at Kilburn Hall are creating much interest, accompanied by blessing both to believers and the unsaved. At the after meetings many have professed to decide for Christ. At the Thursday evening meetings of January, at 8 o'clock, Mr. Sims will give a series of lectures on "The Revelation." These will no doubt prove of interest to Christian workers and Bible students.—C. Russell Hurditch.

Plumstead.—An eight days' mission, conducted by Captain Tottenham in the Cage-lane Mission Hall, came to a close on Sabbath evening. The Holy Spirit worked in the hearts of many. It was a most impressive scene, when, after a powerful address, the evangelist asked those who had accepted Christ or wanted to be his, to stand and sing the refrain. Hundreds responded. It should be noted that the name of the street in which the mission is situated having been changed, the Cage-lane Mission must now be known as the "Lakedale-road Mission."

Rev. John McNeill in Sydney.—A clever writer in the Sydney Presbyterian says:—"It is a matter of profound thankfulness that Mr. McNeill has been able to attract audiences of such dimensions to listen to the most scathing denunciations of the sins of Sydney society, and that the voice of this nineteenth century prophet has been heard thundering against selfishness, snobbery, swindling, swilling, slandering, sensuality, Sadduceeism, sweepstakes and other sports that ruin the soul; and that, along with these thrilling diatribes, there has been the fullest presentation of Jesus as the Saviour and helper of men."

Dorchester.—Mr. Newton Jones has conducted a mission for five days in this town. Afternoon Bible readings were held in the Y.W.C.A., and children's services in the evenings in the Town Hall. These proved immensely attractive to the young people, who assembled in hundreds to listen to Mr. Jones's illustrated Gospel lessons. The interest deepened every evening; the numbers attending the after prayer-meeting increased, and at the closing service one teacher told of seven of her class who had decided to serve Christ. There were other cheering tokens of blessing.

Cambridge.—An evangelistic mission has been held in Cambridge under the most favourable conditions. The Nonconformist churches decided to unite in an attempt to reach the indifferent. Three mission preachers were invited—Revs. J. F. T. Hallowes, Marshall Limon, and C. B. Sawday, and three chapels were selected as mission centres. No missioner was planted in a church of his own denomination. A special meeting of members of the University was held in the St. Andrew's-street Lecture Hall, when an address was given by Mr. Hallowes. The closing meeting in the Guildhall, under the presidency of Rev. W. F. Moulton, D.D., was crowded and enthusiastic, in every way a fitting close to a memorable series of services. One of the conspicuous features of the mission was the demonstration which it gave of the living unity of the churches. Denominational differences were submerged by the tide of brotherly love.

MR. W. R. LANE AT RAMSGATE.

The visit of this servant of the Lord has brought much blessing to the town. It is an acknowledged fact that Ramsgate is a hard place to move. Many seemed to be Gospel-hardened; so the evangelist found during the early days of the mission. The meetings were held at first in St. George's Hall, but this was found unsuitable for reaching outsiders. In answer to prayer, the way was opened up, so that the theatre was placed at the disposal of the evangelist and his helpers for Sunday and four remaining days of the mission. To this place the people flocked by hundreds, so that both the services on Sunday were crowded, and many were unable to get in.

Mr. Lane's denunciations of sin on Sunday night will not soon be forgotten, and many a sinner was made to tremble. At all the services there were "droppings" which told of a coming shower, and on Wednesday night, when Mr. Lane spoke on Pilate's question, "What then shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ?" many were pricked to the heart, and several decided for the Lord. But it was on Thursday night, the last night of the mission, that the showers came. Mr. Lane told the story of his conversion.

The theatre was packed with people, who listened with rapt attention. The greater part of the audience stayed to the after-meeting, and all over the theatre men and women rose, asking for prayer or declaring that they then and there accepted the Lord. This meeting was closed after 10 p.m. by singing "God be with you till we meet again," and any who so desired were invited to adjourn to St. George's Hall for a continuation of the meeting. Although the hour was so late, about 400 availed themselves of this opportunity, and a very blessed time of thanksgiving and testimony was spent.

Mr. Lane has left Ramsgate followed by the prayers of many of God's people, who have real cause for thanking Him for sending his servant into the town. Since Mr. Lane left, we have heard of several who were brought to decision for Christ.

Geo. Greenway.

Rev. T. Hancock also writes:—"Members of the local churches ardently co-operated, notably those of Christ Church (Episcopal) and Cavendish Church (Baptist). A host of helpers sang the Gospel, served as stewards, and scoured the district to 'compel them to come in.'

"As a minister of the town, I feel sure that the Mission has been sound and solid throughout, and that immense good must have been accomplished. Mr. Lane is sure of a warm welcome whenever he again labours in Ramsgate. Local Christians are giving much time to help inquirers, and to gather the fruit into garners, and all alike thank God for the visit of his servant."

NOVEL RELIGIOUS SERVICE.—On Monday a "boot service" was held in the Congregational Church, Watney-street, Commercial-road, E., in connection with the philanthropic work of the London Congregational Union. The "service" consisted of a gratuitous distribution of between 200 and 300 pairs of boots to needy children of the locality. The boots were of special manufacture, and the recipients of this practical benevolence were loud in their appreciation of such a welcome Christmas gift.

The Book World.

Bubbles (3s. 6d. and 5s. 279, Strand) is the title of the first volume of Dr. Barnardo's attractive magazine, "Our Bubble." It is produced with great taste, its special feature being an abundance of richly-coloured illustrations. Our young friends will esteem it a treasure.

Baptist Hand-book, 1895. (Clarke & Co. 2s.) This book of reference is simply indispensable to Baptists and those interested in denominational matters. Full, complete, and admirably classified information is given in the way of lists and statistics bearing on the affairs of the Baptist body.

Threefold Salvation; or, the Way of Life under Various Aspects, a useful little work by Rev. Arthur Finlayson, is now in its fifth thousand in English, and has had the honour of being translated into several Continental languages. (1s. Drammond's Tract Depot, Stirling.)

News from Afar is the title of a new magazine, issued by the London Missionary Society, designed to supplant the Juvenile Missionary Magazine, and to form a link of connection between the foreign mission field and the elder scholars of Sunday-schools, members of guilds, Societies of Christian Endeavour, etc. (1d. John Snow & Co.)

Little Miss Muffet. By Rosa Nouchette Carey. (3s. 6d. Religious Tract Society.) A capital story for girls. Miss Muffet is a wild tomboy girl when we first make her acquaintance, but she finds her way into all hearts in spite of her escapades. It is a healthy, bright little book with plenty of "go" in it, and also sound spiritual teaching.

Hagar. By M. H. Gimlette. (1d. George Croker, Mall, Waterford.) This little poem, telling afresh the story of the banished bondwoman, embodies the night thoughts of a dying saint, the widow of the godly Rector of Dunmore, who, while waiting on the brink, enjoys sweet communion and meditation. The booklet might well be circulated widely.

Memorials of James Boorne. (Wilmhurst, Blackheath.) Twenty-one years' faithful and fruitful labour at Devonshire-road Baptist Chapel find here a modest memorial. Such records interest those most who know the subject, but we wish the book a wide circulation, for the story of God's dealings with his servant is likely to touch many hearts.

Rambles in Bible Lands. By Rev. Richard Newton, D.D. (2s. 6d. Gall & Inglis.) A very useful and interesting sketch of an extensive tour in Bible lands. It is replete with incidents, and its copious allusions to Scripture scenes add greatly to its value, by refreshing the memory of the reader, and associating with each place its Biblical history.

Three Crowns: the Crown of Love, the Crown of Suffering, and the Crown of Life. By L. A. H. S. (2s. C. J. Thynne, 6, Great Queen-street, E.C. This little volume outlines the life of Jeanne d'Albret, Queen of Navarre, in blank verse; and gives a portrait of the celebrated Reforming queen, as well as of her illustrious mother, Marguerite of Angoulême.

The "South African Pioneer," the organ of the South African General Mission, is a very readable monthly. The Christmas number, just to hand, contains a report of the "South African Keswick Convention," held at Wellington in October last, including three addresses by Rev. Andrew Murray, and others by Mr. Spencer Walton and Rev. Gelson Gregson.

Notes on Romanism, by Rev. P. Barclay, M.A., is a forcible exposure of some of the errors and excesses in doctrine and practice of the Papal Church. Mr. Barclay evidently follows with care the controversy in its present stage and phases. Any profits from the booklet will be devoted to Dr. Comandi's schools in Florence. (6d. nett. R. W. Hunter, 19, George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh.)

The Natural and Spiritual Man. (2s. 6d. Bagster & Sons.) This is a diagram, nicely engraved, exhibiting the downward progress of the "old man" through lust unto death, and, on the other hand, the transformation of the "new man" after the image of Him that created him in Christ Jesus. It is an interesting study in emblematic teaching, with Scripture references and key, which many will find helpful in ministering the Word.

Whitaker's Almanac is an indispensable handbook for the office or the study, and a useful companion in the home. The bound edition answers a thousand questions that arise on the perusal of the daily newspaper; it gives scores of official lists and historical summaries; and describes foreign countries as well as British possessions in such a way that those who consult it may fairly claim to be "up to date" in their geographical, bureaucratic, and general information.

An Illustrative Scripture Reference Book, by Rev. C. S. Bowes, B.A., is a compilation designed to help preachers and teachers in their work. It presents, in a systematic way, the teaching of Scripture on many subjects, special care being shown in the inclusion of figurative and typical expressions under the various headings. Much diligence is exhibited in the grouping of parallel or contrasted facts. Those whom Mr. Bowes desires to help will find this a very serviceable volume. (6s. Nisbet.)

Kwang Tung; or, Five Years in South China, is a capital little volume by John A. Turner, Wesleyan missionary. (2s. 6d. Partridge.) In seventeen chapters, with maps and illustrations, this book describes missionary life and work in the province of Canton (Kwang Tung), and gives much information regarding the history, religions, and manners and customs of the Chinese. We cordially commend the book to our readers, who may be interested to know that the proceeds of its sale will be devoted to the reduction of the Wesleyan Missionary Society's debt.

Eustace Marchmont. By Evelyn Everett Green. (5s. Shaw & Co.) This favourite author has given us another most interesting book. The story lies at the commencement of the labour revolt in 1830. Eustace Marchmont is one of the leaders of the movement, and seeks to stir up a feeling of discontent with their condition in the minds of the working class. He succeeds only too well. The character of Saul Tresithing is very well drawn, and his death whilst seeking the forgiveness of the one he had injured as he had before sought that of his Saviour, is a finely-written passage.

---

The Protestant Almanac for 1895, is an attractive and useful wall sheet, issued by the Protestant Alliance. (1d. Stoneman.)

Justified; A Word for 1895, is a timely pamphlet by Bishop Ryle (2d. W. Hunt & Co.). Founded on Rom. v. 1, it is a very useful exposition of Scripture doctrine.

The Covenant of Peace is an instructive New Year's address by Rev. N. Dimock, A.M., late vicar of St. Paul's, Maidstone. (Maidstone: W. S. Vivish, 28 King-street.)

It is I; Be Not Afraid, by Rev. F. W. Anderson, M.A., of the Evangelical Union Church of Pera, Constantinople, is a discourse preached just after the alarming earthquake in July last. (From the Author, 31, Rue Yemenidji, Pera.)

Mr. C. Caswell, Edmund street, Birmingham, has published, on a tasteful folded card, a poetical "New Year's Wish," by Mary Gorges, entitled The Lord Send Peace (Judges vii. 24). The lines embody noble thoughts in chaste language.

Nothing is Lost in Christ's Service is the title of Rev. J. T. Wrenford's New Year Booklet (6d. per dozen. Partridge). It is specially addressed to Christian workers; its counsels are sound, and its appeal striking. We trust it will have many readers.

Watchman, what of the Night? (Isaiah xxi. 11). This is an address delivered to the Liverpool Diocesan Conference in October last by Bishop Ryle. It has been revised, with important additions, and it will have special attractions for Evangelical Church people. (6d. W. Hunt & Co.)

Mr. Cheyne Brady's tracts and booklets have been translated into various tongues. Now a leaflet on the Second Advent has been issued in Spanish, through Mr. Armstrong at Barcelona. The message of La Segunda Venida de Nuestro Senor Jesu-Cristo is a new one to most dwellers in Spain. May it be glad news to many who may come to "love his appearing."

CHRISTMAS APPEALS.

Hassett-road (L.C.M.) Mission.—For help on behalf of poor, and to give some Christmas relief.—C. Pateman, Hassett-road, Homerton, N.E.

Carlton Vale Mission.—For help to send parcels of grocery, etc., to poor struggling widows.—Miss E. Norris, Treasurer, 142, Cambridge-road, Kilburn, N.W.

London Medical Mission.—For medical and relief work amongst the poorest in St. Giles and Soho.—Dr. John Latchford, 34, Short's-garden, Endell-street, W.

London Samaritan Society.—The committee are in great need of funds to extend the work. Donations received by John James Jones, 93, High-street, Homerton, E.

Macclesfield-street Mission.—In aid of work carried on by earnest working men, at least £25 is needed at present.—W. J. Collens, 18, St. John-street, Islington, N.

Lissen Grove Mission.—Mr. George T. Hunt, 5, St. Ann's-terrace, N.W., asks for funds for the winter work and for Christmas treats for old and young amongst the poor.

Good Shepherd (late Abbey-street) Schools, Bethnal Green.—To give tea and entertainment to about 500 scholars.—W. Rawles, 477, Cambridge Heath-road, Bethnal Green.

Our Cabmen.—Will friends kindly send some knitted cuffs, crossover shawls and comforters, useful for cabmen out of employment? Address, Miss McLean, Conference Hall, Eccleston-street, S.W.

The Convalescent Hospital, Seaford, near Newhaven (Mr. J. King), would gladly welcome a few Christmas and New Year Scripture cards for distribution among the convalescent patients before Christmas Day.

John-street Chapel, Marylebone, W.—For work, needing £100 to continue its operations, which has been going on with good results for the last twenty-six years.—W. T. Russell, 27, Cambridge-street, Edgware-road, W.

London-street Mission, Dockhead, S.E.—To provide the destitute with a Christmas dinner. Last year we gave a children's treat on Christmas Eve; we hope to do so again.—W. Bustin, Hon. Sec., 13, Priter-road, Bermondsey, S.E.

South London Assn. for Assisting the Blind.—To provide poor blind and their guides with a Christmas treat. These number upwards of 300, principally of the poorest class.—J. T. Edmonds, Hon. Sec., 155, Brixton-road, S.W.

Rescue Work.—We plead for useful gifts for a Rescue Home. Clothes or stuffs for making up, food, old materials for needlework, suitable books and magazines. Articles may be sent to the Hon. L. Kinnaird, 115, Mount-street, W.

Richmond-street Mission.—To provide the poor with a Christmas dinner at their own homes. Last year we gave such help to 285 families, representing 1,155 persons—more than half of these were poor children.—John T. Dunn, 25, Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, S.E.

The Benevolent or Strangers' Friend Society, which employs nearly 200 voluntary unpaid agents in visiting and relieving the sick, ask the benevolent to enable them to supplement the usual relief by a few extra comforts.—The Secretary, 52, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

Distressed Irish Ladies.—Mrs. Power Lalor, Longorchard, Templemore, co. Tipperary, appeals on behalf of the food and fuel fund for ladies now obliged to work hard for their daily bread, and for the home for old and utterly destitute ladies, established at 38, Mountjoy-square, Dublin.

Fox-court Ragged School and Mission appeals for funds to provide a Christmas dinner for many of the poorest families of the district. There is at the present moment a vast amount of destitution consequent upon sickness and want of employment.—Thomas Fagg, 136, Pentonville-road, N.

The Children's Mission hopes to have about 600 children to dinner on Boxing Day; also the free and farthing breakfasts, free soup suppers, and Medical Agency, where the sick and suffering children can get advice and medicine free.—Alfred H. Roe, 251, Southampton-street, Camberwell, S.E.

Christmas Presents for Sailors.—At Christmas we hope to have a great company of seamen at tea in our hall, Shadwell. In former years we have had men representing many nations far from home and friends. These men were made bright and happy.—David Carnegie, Sailors' Institute, Shadwell, E.

North London Aid-to-the-Poor Society.—Last year, besides distributing over twenty tons of coals, and food consisting of meat, bread, potatoes, tea, etc, to 452 families, we gave a tea to 1475 children drawn from the poorest parts of Holloway and Islington.—Treasurer, R. J. Arnott, 1a, Russell-road, Holloway, N.

Friendless and Fallen.—This mission of mercy has had 100 more applications for admission this year than last. 943 young women and girls have been admitted to the Homes and Open-All-Night Refuge. The committee have heavy liabilities to meet before the 31st inst.—Wm. J. Taylor, 120, Euston-road, N.W.

After-care Association for Poor Convalescents on Leaving Asylums for the Insane, appeals for help. Cases are assisted by placing in Convalescent Homes, by obtaining suitable occupations, and by grants of money and clothing.—Secretary, Mr. H. Thornhill Roxby, Church House, Dean's-yard, Westminster, S.W.

Lambeth Walk Mission, S.E.—Around us are many unemployed, sick, destitute, and starving. We want to provide food, coals, clothing, and Christmas dinners to many deserving families. On Boxing Day we invite 300 of the victims of drink to tea and supper.—G. Goodman, 29, Princes-square, Kennington, S.E.

The Irish Society.—Rev. W. F. Fitz-Gerald, 32, Sackville-street, W., appeals for funds to carry on God's work in Ireland. "My father is rector of Achill in the far west of Ireland, and the very name Achill seems synonymous with that of God's work. Surely many will help us to go on in cheer and faith with this work, which we feel God has given us to do."

The Soho Mission, Bloomsbury Hall, Meard-street, Soho, W.—The distress is very severe. Poor women are begging for food and firing. Whole families are often without food for one and two days at a time. Tickets for coal or food of any description would be gladly received. We are arranging to give 400 families a Christmas dinner, etc., as well as other treats.—Wm. Harrison.

Rev. W. Knight Chaplin asks help in giving needy children in East London a Christmas feast at the Poplar and Bromley Tabernacle, and to provide many others with fire and food in their own homes. He is also anxious to begin again the early morning free breakfasts. For several winters they have had 250 to 300 to breakfast five mornings a week.—26, Verne-street, South Bromley, E.

The Parminter-street Mission has much philanthropic Sunday-school and mission work, such as soup kitchens. The members hope to be able to give 200 Christmas dinners to the deserving poor on Christmas Day. The benevolent society is at work relieving the sick poor. Children's dinners are also given twice weekly.—G. W. L. Barraclough, Parminter-street Mission, Bethnal Green, E.

The Gifford Hall Mission, Caledonian-road, appeals for help to provide 350 dinners, and materials for as many teas, to the poor at their homes on Christmas Day. Every care is taken to reach the most necessitous cases. Also to give New Year's entertainments to upwards of 500 Sunday-school scholars; to supply coals and soup to the very needy.—B. Hitjer, Holmwood, Wood-lane, Highgate.

Pastor Philip Gast, 12, Noel-street, Islington, asks for help for the widow, the fatherless, and suffering poor. During thirty years of labour at Spencer-place Chapel in St. Luke's and Clerkenwell the readers of The Christian have kindly helped. The neighbourhood is permeated by infidelity, and needs a witness for Christ in the care of the poor. Clothing or money will be gladly acknowledged.

The Clapton Mission.—Rev. Thomas Jackson, 8, Rushmore-road, Clapton, N.E., writes:—We wish to render seasonable aid to a large number of deserving poor in Clapton and Homerton this Christmas. Our mission is aiding an average of 280 cases per week by the medical dispensaries, 3000 free breakfasts are being given to poor children attending the Board Schools, and our soup kitchens are supplying 500 quarts per week.

Homes for Aged Christian Blind, 77, Hanley-road, Crouch Hill, N.—Mr. and Mrs. Bright write on behalf of their aged blind, who now number eighty-two, twenty-four being between eighty and ninety-six years of age. The general maintenance fund is quite exhausted; winter, with its manifold wants to the aged poor, is on us; expenses are in every way increased, so many of our afflicted ones need to have day and night attention.

Spurgeon's Orphanage.—Dr. Spurgeon urges the claims of the needy children. The task of providing for 500 orphans is a heavy one. The Christmas festivities are very simple, but joyous. "Our funds are barely sufficient for ordinary needs, and will not suffice for the extra expense needed to mark out the day by some special treat to the youngsters. Kindly send gifts to the Orphanage as soon as convenient."—Jas. A. Spurgeon, Stockwell Orphanage, Clapham-road.

The Salvation Army Social Wing asks help to provide a Christmas dinner for 5000 destitute men who are sheltered in the various institutions or visited by the officers. The darkness and despair that hang upon the poor of London can only be understood by those who are face to face with its awful reality, and a little kindness comes as a silver lining—if only a temporary one—to the thick cloud of anxiety and sorrow under which they live.—E. Cadman, 272, Whitechapel-road, E.

Winter and Want in St. Giles'.—We have been able for more than thirty years past to do much to relieve the painful distress around us. I trust that the needs of these wretched ones may so plead with your readers as to lead them to assist us financially, that we may be able to provide as many of the deserving poor as hitherto with food, clothing, firing, and Christmas dinners.—Wm. Wheatley, Superintendent, St. Giles' Christian Mission, 4, Ampton-street, Regent-square, W.C.

The Christian.

☞ To avoid delay it is requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and not to its individual members. Communications for THE CHRISTIAN should be addressed to the Editor, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for THE CHRISTIAN should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 1 of cover.)

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

☞ The Publishers request that all orders for THE CHRISTIAN by post, and remittances for same, be addressed to "THE CHRISTIAN" POSTAL DEPARTMENT, BOUVERIE HOUSE, SALISBURY SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

Cheques and Post Orders to be made payable to Messrs. John Haddon and Co. at that address.

The subscription for one year, including Postage and Coloured Almanack, is as under:—

| | |
|---|---|
| For Great Britain and Ireland .. | 6s. 7d. per annum |
| For India, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Africa, France, Germany, and other European Countries .. .. .. .. | 8s. 10d. " " |
| For United States and Canada .. | 2¼ dols. " " |
| Or including Monthly Copy of HERALD OF MERCY .. .. | 2½ dols. " " |

Subscriptions for THE HERALD OF MERCY.

| | |
|---|---|
| 4 Copies monthly .. .. .. .. .. | 2s. per annum |
| 8 " " .. .. .. .. | 4s. " " |
| 12 " " .. .. .. .. | 6s. " " |
| 24 " " .. .. .. .. | 12s. " " |

Post free to any address at home or abroad.

Remittances to be sent as above. Postcard should be enclosed for receipt or extra stamp to cover postage of same.

Notes and Comments.

☞ We beg to call attention to the Special Announcement made above with reference to Subscriptions for the ensuing year. It will greatly facilitate our work at this season if friends will kindly note the particulars.

☞ Will those of our readers who receive THE CHRISTIAN direct from the Office by post, and who have not recently communicated with us, kindly send their present full postal address—specially Missionaries and others in foreign countries?

Having to go to press with this number some days in advance, owing to the Christmas holidays, late communications cannot be acknowledged till next week.

Many, we trust, are looking forward with prayerful expectancy to the special meetings announced for New Year's Day in St. Martin's Town Hall, Trafalgar-square. These gatherings are intended for united praise and prayer that God would graciously revive his people, cement them in holy unity, and shed forth his Spirit to convict the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment.

The Evangelical Alliance is asking that special prayer may be offered for the persecuted Stundists of Russia on January 9, in connection with the Week of Prayer. In a circular letter Mr. A. J. Arnold, the secretary, says:—

It is suggested that, while not omitting the other subjects included in the programme for Wednesday, January 9, the case of the Stundists in Russia should be very specially brought before the various meetings held all over our own country. These humble, earnest, evangelical Christians have been for years suffering terrible persecutions. While they number perhaps 300,000 altogether, there are about 3000 of them either in prison or exile at the present time. The persecution comes almost wholly from the Greek Church authorities. And now that a new Emperor has recently come to the throne of Russia it is felt to be a very suitable time for much prayer that God would touch the hearts of those in high places, and move them to pity and compassion for the suffering Christians in that vast empire; thus leading to the repressive measures against the Stundists being discontinued. But whether or not the persecutions are stayed, we may earnestly pray to God that the Stundists, who have already suffered so much, may be kept faithful to Christ, even amidst their present trials.

We cannot believe that readers of this paper require to be entreated not to give intoxicating drinks during the festive season to any postman or messenger who comes to his door, but perhaps some may need a word of remembrance as to the wisdom of providing a good substitute for drink, or of dissuading others from placing temptations in the way of the workers. Rather do they want helping to the exercise of self-control which will make them more self-respecting and more independent.

"Work in Darkest England" (noticed on p. 9) gives an account of the social operations of the Salvation Army, with an annual statement of accounts of the Darkest England fund for 1894. Archdeacon Farrar and Mr. Labouchere, M.P., give it their endorsement, and the work of the Army their good wishes. The book is sorrowful and yet refreshing reading, for, while it shows something of our vast needs and suggests more, it shows that something successful can be done in many directions. It shows also, in many ways, a very considerable understanding of the problem to be solved and of the methods by which to solve it.

Should anyone think that soft-hearted gullibility distinguishes the work of the Army, let him read pages 31, 2 on "The Won't Work," and we are sure he will change his opinion. "The Won't Work," we are sorry to hear, is an increasing section of the population; "there is a danger that the thing will be overdone, and that competition will spoil the market." For the reclamation of this soft-hard sinner, Mr. Bramwell Booth proposes that he should be brought before a magistrate, invited to prove some sort of active employment or active efforts to obtain it, and, in default, committed to an agricultural settlement, and made to dig his bread out of the earth. This plan seems to us to have the support of apostolic authority: "If a man will not work neither shall he eat."

In these short, cold days one reads with quickened interest that whereas the casual wards of the entire metropolis house but five or six hundred men a night—the number of women is not given—between five and six thousand persons are lodged in the shelters of the Salvation Army every night, while cheap meals are supplied by the million. What a mass of misery is thus somewhat alleviated, which else might be festering into something dangerous. Still, it should be aided because it is right, and not to avoid a social explosion. The facts are also a marvellous testimony to the superiority of voluntary over official labour; nevertheless, if the official labour can be improved, and it seems reasonable to believe that it can, then it ought to be done. Let the Poor Law learn from Christian organisations how to deal with human beings.

The sketch by Mr. Drysdale, which appeared in our last issue, raises two points of importance—what the ordinary working-man thinks, and how best to deal with his thoughts. Mr. Drysdale came upon twenty working-men idling away a summer Sunday evening, and at once got into conversation with them on personal religion. In Whitefield's days such men would probably have been cock-fighting, or fighting with each other; and probably a religious idea could not have been found in the whole company. But these men were theologians of a sort, and had their intellectual difficulties. They wished to know "Why God allowed sin to come into the world," "Why He does not save all men if he is all-powerful," "What is to become of Hindoos and Mohammedans," and "Whether it was fair for God to punish an innocent man like the Saviour." They had also some critical difficulties about the contents of the Bible. It is well to know that there is an undercurrent of thought, even in the mind of idlers, on the greatest of questions.

Next comes the question of the best way of dealing with it. Mr. Drysdale's is admirable for the time and place for which he writes. But the thought suggests itself whether the method of question and answer could not be more widely applied. It was largely the method of our Lord, and to some extent of the apostles also. It was the method of Socrates, and of some other great teachers. It has to be the method of anyone who accosts groups of loungers. But might it not also become one of the recognised and ordinary methods of all churches? Could there not be special Conversational Services? It would not do for all sorts of people, but would it not at once become a popular way with thoughtful men whose ideas can only be got at as they are got out? To conduct it would require some rare gifts; above all the gift of brotherly love, which would never allow a conductor so to answer as only to confute and silence, but rather to satisfy the mind and win the man.

The agitation caused by the Armenian atrocities is now taking shape in counsel and demand, and there seems to be good ground for believing that something will really be done. First comes inquiry, and though the official inquiry may have many obstacles thrown in its way, the truth will sooner or later practically be in the possession of the public. That it is an offence against the sacred law of Turkey for a Christian to give evidence against a Mussulman, will in itself be a difficulty in the way of obtaining truthful evidence, but the representatives of the Great Powers must see that it is removed by the guarantee of protection to the witness. The Press, we may be quite sure, will do its best to drag the facts to light. But this is only preliminary; the poor persecuted people want some assurance, based on the action of the Powers, that there shall be no more oppression embittering their daily lives, and culminating in unexpected massacres.

Perhaps one of the most valuable observations in Mr. Gladstone's resuscitated paper on "The Evangelical Movement" is that which bears upon worldliness. In accounting for the limitations of the movement he says:—

It had a code with respect to amusements, which was at once rigid and superficial. This code inflexibly proscribed certain of the forms in which the worldly spirit loves to work, while it left ample room for others not less charged with poison, and perhaps more insidious. In lay life generally it did not ally itself with literature, art, and general cultivation, but it harmonised very well with the money-getting pursuits. While the Evangelical clergyman was, almost of necessity, a spiritual and devoted man, the Evangelical layman might be, and sometimes was, the same; but there was in his case far more room for a composition between the two worlds, which left on him the mark of exclusiveness, and tended to a severance from society, without securing an interior standard of corresponding elevation.

Does not this lay the finger upon the weakest place in Evangelicalism? Has not Mr. Gladstone pointed out the hole in the fortress through which the deadliest enemy enters? Evangelical churches are not alone in the risk from worldliness. The Romish Church has been turned by it into little better than a huge worldly kingdom. The High Church party is certainly not without a very serious mixture of the "insidious poison." Indeed, we do not know any fellowship which is exempt from the encroachments of the love of money.

It is said that there are 7000 persons totally blind and as many half blind in England, who would not have lost their sight "if the local authorities had taken the precaution of issuing with the vaccination notices a small printed warning as to the need of taking care of the eyesight of the new-born child." That this ought to be done, we admit, but that the warning would be acted upon in every case is more than could be hoped for. Glasgow and Manchester are as yet the only two cities which act upon this plan, and we are not told with what result. Let us hope that the present quickening of local life among us may lead to this prevention of blindness as well as to other good things.

Dr. Horton contributes to The Evangelical Magazine an article on "The Drift Towards Rome." He seeks to show that "while the causes which favoured the Catholic revival are transitory, and are already passing away, the forces which work against Rome are permanent and crescent. Each decade makes their triumph, in spite of all appearances, more certain." Herein Mr. Gladstone and he agree, at least to some extent, for Mr. Gladstone admits that, whereas the Tractarian movement laid hold, with a powerful grasp, on the intellect of its generation, it has lived to witness a woful change in a severance less extensive, but still very marked, of the minds holding the same relative rank among the young from the pastoral office, "and the inner communion, so to call it, of the Church." If this be so, and Mr. Gladstone writes with intimate knowledge, the falling away of the best young intellect from the Romish tendency is sure to be followed by the crowd. Besides, we do not see how the Romish idea of a church can retain strong minds in a land where the Bible is the heritage of all.

The following words of Mr. Ward, the companion of Carey and Marshman, were written by him in one of his farewell letters, when returning to his work after a visit to England and America. They are valuable as showing the entire freedom from sectarian bigotry which animated him and his two colleagues, and may have a message to many to day :—

As for sects, "a breath may make them, as a breath has made." There is much trash cleaving to us all; but when I see Him, whose right it is to reign, and whose dominion is over all, going forth conquering and to conquer, I must and will rejoice. I am more than ever anxious to know no man as an Independent, an Episcopalian, a Presbyterian, a Methodist, or a Baptist. ... What a sad thing that while our Lord Jesus Christ loves his people because they bear his image, the cause of our attachment should be that they belong to us! ... Let us conscientiously profess our opinions, but let us love the man of our sect but little who possesses but little of the image of Christ, while we love him in whom we see much of Christ, though some of his opinions are the very opposite of our own. ... If I am enabled thus to love all the family "whose names are written in heaven," I have property in all; I have fellowship with all; the gifts of all are mine; the spirituality of all is mine; the success of all at home and abroad is mine.

Dora Greenwell writes, in the "Patience of Hope":—

Mild as is the genius of the New Dispensation, its knife goes closer to the heart than that of the elder one, which we are accustomed to think of as so stern and exacting. . . . It is this very life which Christ asks us to lay down for Him; this life of which He tells us that he who loveth it shall lose it, and he who loseth it for his sake shall keep it unto life eternal.

It seems to us that in the common estimate both of the Old and the New Dispensation there is a large element of error. The former is much more tender than is generally supposed, as a hundred passages testify; and the latter is more exacting, as a hundred passages show. Is not the 103rd psalm tender? Is not Matthew vii. 21-23 stern, even terrible?

Whatever our educational troubles, we are happy in not having any such school inspectors as some who are to be found in France. For instance, an ex-schoolmaster declares that an inspector will come to examine the scholars, and if the word God occurs in the lesson he will hold the name up to scorn, asking mockingly if the child has ever seen Him, and teaching open atheism. "All do not go so far, but many do." The blasphemy of such teaching is shocking; its ignorance is deplorable. The universe is full of things we have not seen. Miss Giberne says in her "Radiant Suns":—

The ether of space has neither been seen nor felt; but that some such medium does exist no reasonable doubts can be felt.

And again, speaking of the dark lines in the spectrum, which are only dark because we cannot see the light that is there:—

It may be that an insect can hear shrill sound-notes which we cannot hear. It may be that many an animal can see dim light-rays which we cannot see.

We know that the sensitive photographic plate receives impressions from the stars which no eye can perceive. How absurd is the philosophy of atheism, which makes a human eye the explorer of the universe.

It is a pleasure to see in a book like Miss Giberne's "Radiant Suns," a book thoroughly up to date, and fit to take its place, and that a very high one, as an exponent of astronomy, that the author is not ashamed to acknowledge her faith in a great First Cause. Her remarks on the wealth of sunbeams with which God has flooded his universe are good science and good theology:—

With only his present expenditure, the sun could most easily light and warm and keep in vigorous life no less than two thousand two hundred millions of worlds such as ours. If all the planets of the solar system, all the moons, all the comets, all the meteors, were brought together, and the whole supply of solar heat and light received by them were subtracted, it would be found to be the merest fraction, compared with the sum total that is flung away into space... That which to us seems like waste need not be waste....God gives grandly to his universe; enough and to spare.

It is an additional pleasure to see the name of Mrs. Huggins, wife of the famous astronomer, linked with such a book; she has written a preface to it.

The last text upon our Almanack for 1894 is this: "Blessing and glory . . . and thanksgiving and power . . . be unto our God for ever and ever." Individual believers may truly say so. The year has had its trials for them, probably very sharp ones, but God's love and faithfulness have not failed. He has not forsaken the work of his own hands. They have been through the fire, but the flame has not kindled upon them. Prayers have been answered; God's promises have been kept. Strength has been as the days, and grace as the need. Whatever faults and sins may mar the human record, the Divine record is stainless, a line of light without one dark blot. To God be all the glory.

A Call to Praise and Prayer

ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE NEW YEAR.

Throughout the course of 1894 there have been many signs of the increase of a spirit of prayer, especially in view of the gigantic evils that jeopardise the well-being of our country; and in many quarters there has been an evident drawing together of earnest men and women, irrespective of ecclesiastical distinctions and divisions. It is greatly to be desired that this tendency should be fostered and strengthened.

With the view of giving expression to the desire which is in many hearts, the undersigned have ventured to issue this appeal: that as much as possible of the first day in the year 1895 should be devoted to praise, confession, consecration, and intercessory prayer, that God would graciously revive His work in the hearts of His own people; cement them in holy unity; and shed forth His Spirit to convict the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. They therefore invite Christians to meet for Prayer at St. Martin's Town Hall, Charing Cross, from Eleven a.m. to Six p.m., with an interval from One to Three; the exercises of the day concluding with a Public Meeting (at which Addresses will be given), from Seven to Nine.

It is not intended that there should be much exhortation at these gatherings; but praise, thanksgiving, confession, humiliation, and supplication.

It is sincerely hoped that this All Day of Prayer may also be a gracious preparation for the hallowed observance of the first week in the New Year, in harmony with the appeal of the Evangelical Alliance.

It is earnestly desired that ministers of Christ's Gospel, together with workers in all departments of Christian activity, may be able to spend part of the day, at least, in these services, either at St. Martin's Hall or in gatherings specially convened in various parts of Great Britain, or in retirement.

KINNAIRD.
WILLIAM SINCLAIR, Archdeacon of London and Canon of St. Paul's.
GEORGE WILLIAMS.
F. B. MEYER.
R. C. MORGAN.
REGINALD RADCLIFFE.
MARTIN HOPE SUTTON.
JAMES E. MATHIESON.

A VISIT TO FINLAND.

THE Lord gave me a ready entrance in Finland, where I spent ten days in happy service, also in St. Petersburg, where my time was fully occupied with Gospel work in Russian, English, and German; and now I have the privilege of meeting with Germans and Esthonians in Reval. There is no difficulty in arranging meetings, they are made known without any public notice, and the people flock together in large numbers, crowding the rooms. I hope next week to visit Riga, to spend a week with Germans and Letts, and by the end of the year I hope to cross the frontier, and to spend New Year's day in Berlin, where my address will be, c.o. Miss T. von Blücher, 81, Hohenstaufen Strasse, W. Pray for the solitary labourers on the continent of Europe, and for me. F. W. BAEDER.

Y.W.C.A.—No less than 1200 young women sat down at the annual festival of the Sydney Y.W.C.A. The guests were members of the Association and its suburban branches, as well as those whom its influences through the weekly visits of its representatives to the workrooms and factories of the City.

Sin, Death, Resurrection.

Sin can be put away only through death and resurrection. The creature once infected with it, dying must die—must surely die. Every thing and every circumstance in outward nature is an object lesson, teaching spiritual truth. Some of the profoundest lessons are the open secrets of common things. Bruise an apple or a peach, and it will go on decaying and dying until corrupt and dead. So the creature whose moral nature is diseased by sin, becomes more and more alienated from the life of God, and that is moral corruption, spiritual death. The wages of sin is death.

In the nature of things the Creator is the only possible King. He may raise the creature to his side, but with this essential condition—"In the throne will I be greater than thou." Sin is the denial of this first and necessary principle. The origin of evil is the opposition of the will of self to the will of God. It is God's prerogative to say "I will." When the creature says "I will," it is equivalent to saying, "I will be like the Most High: I sit in the seat of God: I am God."

It is the creature's place to do the Creator's pleasure, hearkening to the voice of his Word; because on account of his good pleasure they are and were created (Ps. ciii.; Rev. iv.). There cannot be a second will in the place of government; therefore, when the archangel sinned he was cast out of Heaven. There cannot be two wills in the place of communion; therefore, when man sinned he was expelled from Paradise.

For fallen angels no redemption is revealed. He taketh not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham He taketh hold (Heb. ii. 16). The reason why Satan and his angels are unredeemed and unredeemable may be that they sinned after long ages of light and knowledge, while man was deceived to his fall by the subtlety of the Old Serpent, the Devil, and Satan. Just as there was no sin-offering for presumptuous sin, so for those who have sinned willingly after having received the knowledge of the truth, there remains no more a sacrifice for sin, but a fearful looking for of judgment and of fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries; as there is a sin unto death, when the conscience is seared as with a hot iron, and it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance—so it may be, and so it appears to be, that since iniquity was found in him, and the light that was in Lucifer, the light-bearer, became a great darkness, there has been no wavering in his downward course, but rebellion and hatred of God have deepened and intensified without cessation.

This, indeed, is the essential quality and the inevitable consequence of sin. No atonement has been provided for him because repentance is impossible. As the rot in an apple is incurable, as the leaven works till the whole is leavened, so the mystery of iniquity works to its final issue.

Satan has experienced the misery which sin has produced in himself and all his angels, but he has never turned to Him that smote him; he has seen the wreck of man, but he has shed no tear. He will be cast into the bottomless pit, and shut up there for a thousand years, but he will come out from his long imprisonment unchanged. He will lead in one final revolt against the camp of the saints and the beloved city, multitudes in all parts of the world, who have been subdued under the rule of Christ, but have not through Him believed in God, and been born again; and then he will be cast into the lake of fire, the place prepared for the Devil and his angels; and he will be tormented by the internal fires of his own unsatisfied and restless pride, and the external fires of misery which he has caused to those who have been led captive at his will. His violent dealing will come down on his own head. He has died the death of alienation from the life of God, and he will endure the lake of fire, which is the second death.

And what sin does in spirits it does in men. The soul that sinneth it shall die, for the wages of sin is death. But for man deceived by Satan God manifested in flesh has died the death. Those who believe in Him have been baptized into his death. But those who continue the slaves of Satan will die the second death, and gnaw their tongues for pain, and blaspheme the God of heaven.

When Satan is confined to the abyss for the thousand years, and Christ reigns with his saints, sin will be latent in the hearts of myriads. Though the term of human life will be greatly prolonged, there will be notorious sinners who will die in their childhood of a hundred years under the curse of God (Isa. lxv. 20). And when Satan is loosed from his prison and goes out to deceive the nations, he will gather an army in number as the sand of the sea, and lead them up to compass the camp of the saints about and the beloved city.

God proves all things, and one purpose of the successive and varied dispensations under which He has dealt and will deal with men is to prove the incurability of sin in any creature. And the proof is completed by the fact that in the believer sin still inheres. "In me, that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing." "If ye are living after the flesh ye are about to die," but if ye, through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live. "Mortify, therefore, your members which are upon the earth, fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry." One of the most terrible deceptions of the Devil is, to lead men to suppose that sin is eliminated from the flesh on earth. If Paul is mistaken, and there is no law of sin in our members, then there is no reason why we should mortify our members; that through the Spirit we should mortify the deeds of the body.

Sin is incurable, the sinner must die. But God, by the mighty working of his power, has raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead. In infinite grace He gave his only begotten Son to die for our sins, who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree; and in righteousness God forgives the sins of all who believe in and are reconciled to Him in Christ. But forgiveness would be of no use to us if it left us sinners still, framing mischief by a law, the law in our members warring against the law of our mind, and bringing us into captivity to the law of sin which is in our members. Sins may be forgiven, but there is no escape from sin—sinfulness—except through death, and resurrection into a new ad sinnless life. If Christ be not raised, ye are yet in your sins.

This is the good tidings of the glory of the blessed God, that Christ has died, and we have been united with Him in his death; that God has raised Him up from the dead, and us in Him, and made us sit together in heavenly places with Christ Jesus; our life is hid with Christ in God. He has condemned sin in the flesh of the spotless Sin-bearer, who has put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. And because we are risen with Christ, we are to set our affection on things above, and to mortify our members which are on the earth. And if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in us, He that raised up the Christ from the dead will also quicken our mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in us. Therefore, we are debtors not to the flesh to live after the flesh; for if we are living after the flesh we are about to die, but if we, through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body we shall live. M.

"WORK IN DARKEST ENGLAND."

Mr. Bramwell Booth has issued a remarkable pamphlet, entitled, "Work in Darkest England in 1894," giving a review of the social operations of the Salvation Army, with statement of accounts. In the introduction we read some terrible facts as to crime and pauperism. In London alone there are 100,000 paupers, costing the city over a million sterling per annum. There are, moreover, 33,000 homeless adults, 35,000 wandering children of the slums, 30,000 fallen women. There is a standing army of out-of-works numbering 80,000; 12,000 criminals are always inside Her Majesty's prisons, and about 15,000 outside.

In the midst of a veritable chaos of misery, the Salvation Army has set up its banners, and devoted men and women have taken hold of the very poor, the slaves of vice, and the victims of crime, with the hope of restoring them to social usefulness, and leading them through Christ to God. The agencies that are employed are very numerous, and altogether over a thousand officers are engaged in them at home and abroad. There are now every night 5400 homeless men and women in the shelters; some who have fallen from wealth and influence take their place with the loafers and ne'er-do-wells. The maintenance of this department and the food depôts is provided for by the payments in money or labour of those who benefit by it.

The labour factories, or "elevators," number seven, and in them and their associated industries, about 1000 men and 250 women ("out of works") are employed. As in the other sections, there are some remarkable narratives in the "Work" chapter. One young man, found in Whitechapel, was helped to America, where he is now labouring as a Presbyterian minister. "An Eton boy," studying in London, came in for a legacy, lapsed into dissipated courses, and was about to jump from Blackfriars Bridge when a Salvationist interposed. After "elevator" discipline, he "came to himself," and now writes: "I am reformed, both spiritually and temporally."

The farm colony and its work is described at length, also the way the Army deals with the criminal classes. Then comes "slumming," by nurses and other helpers of the very poor. Here the drunken and dissolute are met with; at the same time here are dear children, who may be permanently influenced by kind words and motherly solicitude on the part of hallelujah lasses. From first to last the pamphlet is instructive as to social facts, and it should do something to encourage those who help the Salvation Army in its heroic efforts among the most degraded of the population.

MRS. WALL'S WORK IN ROME.

The Holy Spirit has convinced many of the very poor who come to our meetings of their state as sinners, and has led them to the precious Saviour for pardon. We are having very large attendances, about 150 men and about 100 women every week. The hall will not seat above half this number, so the others have to stand. Notwithstanding this there is not a more attentive congregation. Thus to the poor the Gospel is preached, and to them it is a joy and comfort which we cannot realise.

One poor man and his wife said the other day, "It is not that we have more to eat since we found the Saviour, but He makes even a small piece of bread sufficient to satisfy all our wants. We are so happy; all is peace since He nows all our wants and provides what He thinks best."

At our medical mission there is great blessing. We have about 400 attendances every week. The misery is most distressing—no work, and no prospect of getting any. Most respectable people come to us begging a piece of bread. I want to begin a soup kitchen. Emily J. Wall.

35, Piazza in Lucina, Rome.

The Dispensation
OF
The Fulness of the Times.*

The Canon of Scripture is closed, but its contents are Divine—the Bible is the Word of God. While no Christian, therefore, will accept any teaching which is not based upon the God-breathed Scripture, neither will he limit the scope and meaning of the revelation by his own apprehension of it. The advance made in the study of prophecy within living memory is a striking illustration of this. Mediæval theology had no nearer horizon in this respect than the dissolution of all things, and at times "the end of the world" was looked for with feverish excitement and terror. But though this crude system of doctrine still prevails in Christendom, and its influence even upon the spiritual may be traced in the survival of the expression "the Second Advent," which belongs to it, enlightened Christians recognise the long vista of prophetic hopes and promises to be realised on earth before the epoch of that last great crisis.

The author of After the Thousand Years appeals to this with telling effect, and he pleads that we must still further enlarge our view and take account of a "dispensation" to follow after the millennial reign of Christ. It is a startling suggestion that even the most advanced students of prophecy have hitherto overlooked the teaching of Scripture on a matter of such moment; and yet in view of the proofs here offered in its support, no thoughtful person will refuse to give it the most careful consideration. And whatever may be our judgment upon the main thesis of the book under review, there can be no question as to the value of the limitations indicated respecting the scope and character of the millennial dispensation.

It is too often forgotten that it belongs to the economy of the old creation, and not of the new; that sin and death shall still continue in the world; and that its close will be darkened by a terrible apostasy, which will take the form of open revolt against God. Government will be the characteristic of that dispensation, as grace is of our own. "The mystery of God shall be finished," and the scoffer's scoff and the infidel's taunt will be silenced in presence of a state of things in which the good shall prosper, and evil shall be repressed and judged. When the sceptre which was entrusted to the house of David, and which, on the apostasy of Judah, passed to the hands of Gentiles, shall be resumed by Him to whom all power belongs—in a word, when Heaven rules upon earth—government will become what all good men would make it if they had the power, and the result will be a reign of righteousness and peace. Our race will be surrounded by incentives to well-doing, and, with Satan bound, all external influences towards evil will be in abeyance. True it is that at the close of that era man will prove, as ever, "a tremendous failure"; but when our author asserts this of the Millennium itself, he needlessly runs the risk of creating a prejudice against the truth he is seeking to unfold. But, he demands, and the question must be met, How can the record of a dispensation, which is marked throughout its course by the presence of sin and death, and which ends in disaster so terrible, satisfy the language in which Scripture describes the triumph and glory of the reign of Christ?

No part of Mr. Trench's argument is more weighty or more interesting than is his suggestion that the eighth day of the typical ordinances of the Mosaic ritual must find its antitype in the divine economy of the ages. We have assumed too lightly that this points to the eternal state. But, as our author asks, "If the eighth day means eternity future, how is it that eternity past is not also represented by a day? But it is not so. The first division of time for man is called the first day, the last is called the eighth day. Eternity lies behind the first and beyond the last. The eighth day must, therefore, be a dispensation lying between the Millennium and the subsequent eternity. And the eighth day points to the New Creation rest. After the imperfect rest of nature on the seventh comes the supernatural and perfect rest of resurrection on the eighth day."

And this is the dispensation of the fulness of the times of Ephesians, when all things in heaven and on earth are to be summed up in Christ. Then shall be fulfilled the words in Philippians, when every knee in heaven and earth and under the earth will bend in the name of Jesus, and every tongue confess that He is Lord. It is the Solomon-reign of peace and glory, of which the old Scriptures prophesy. And, according to our author, it is to this that the vision of the 21st chapter of Revelation points. To prove that that vision does not pertain to the eternal state, the language of the 15th chapter of 1 Cor. is appealed to. In the eternal state, the Son shall have delivered up the Kingdom, and God shall be all in all; but throughout the Apocalyptic visions, the Lamb is still upon the throne.

In truth this passage in Corinthians is the crux of the whole question, and it must be owned that Mr. Trench's discussion of it is inadequate. As regards the 24th and 25th verses, indeed, he might have made his case much stronger than he has done. The words "He must reign till He hath put all enemies under his feet" as ordinarily interpreted negative the truth here urged, but ἄχρι οὗ (as Dr. Bullinger's Lexicon tells us) means until, "without implying the cessation of the duration then," but leaving the further continuance undetermined." Then again, "the end" (verse 24) is taken to mean the winding up and cessation of all events which Revelation speaks of. But this is not the force of the word at all. To quote Dr. Bullinger again, τέλος is "the fulfilment or completion of anything—i.e., its end or issue (not its cessation). It denotes strictly, not the ending of a departed state, but the arrival of a complete or perfect one." The subject is the resurrection, and the order is, "Christ the first-fruits; then they that are Christ's at his coming; then the end," "viz., the resurrection of the rest of the dead, here veiled over by the general term τὸ τέλος" (Dean Alford's Commentary). In our English Bible the "when" which follows seems clearly to indicate that the subsequent events will take place forthwith; but it must be owned that its Greek equivalent (ὅταν) has no such definiteness of meaning. As Mr. Trench justly points out, an interval of nearly nineteen hundred years lies hidden in the then of verse 23. And so here; it is the order and certainty of the predicted events which the passage emphasises, and we are free to appeal to other Scriptures in seeking light as to the character of them, and the eras within which they will be fulfilled.

And this appeal to Scripture is the burden and aim of this remarkable book. To its pages we must refer our readers for the details of the proof offered of this startling addition to our prophetic theology. We do so without committing ourselves to all its statements, but with the confident belief that the study will be fraught with blessing to those who enter upon it. R. A.

* After the Thousand Years. The glorious Reign of Christ as Son of Man in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. By Geo. F. Trench, B.A. (2s, 6d. Morgan & Scott.)

[1320]

Thoughts for the Times
REGARDING THE HOLY SPIRIT IN BELIEVERS AND IN THE CHURCH.

This is a solemn and glorious promise and gift of grace reigning, through our Lord Jesus Christ, to his people. Thus are they all taught of God, and become partakers of the Divine nature, while it is the earnest of their everlasting inheritance. It is one of the great truths which needs to be especially held fast, because it is essential to life, understanding, and godliness. If our salvation is all by the Word made flesh, Jesus Christ, it is ours only through the Holy Spirit. And if it is of primary importance to be right regarding this, it is of extreme danger to err therein; and this the more, as greater and more numerous errors prevail in the Church from misplacing this precious and glorious truth than from any other cause. It becomes then a mother of errors.

No Christians maintain the indwelling of the Holy Spirit in the Church more tenaciously and extremely than do the Roman and Greek Catholics. So much so that the former place their newly formulated "dogma," unknown in the Holy Scriptures, in the same rank as the written Word of God, affirming that it comes from the same source, viz., the Holy Spirit in God's servants. Thus they hold present progressive revelation of equal authority with the Scriptures.

Now, when our Lord Jesus Christ declared that the Jews had "made the Word of God of none effect by their tradition," and when the Apostles foretold that "damnable heresies" should come in, and that "many should depart from the faith, speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared as with a hot iron," and that men "should turn from the truth to fables," it becomes us not to take on trust all that professes to be of God in Christ, but to examine and see whether this profession of having the Holy Spirit is true or not.

Let us recall a few of the important doctrines based on this post-apostolic assumption:—

1. The Divine authority of the Church.
2. The authoritative interpretation of Holy Scriptures, thus denying that its plain meaning often is the real one, and taking from the sincere individual the right and duty of criticising and forming a judgment as to the meaning.
3. The adding to the Holy Scriptures other professed revelations of declared equal authority.
4. The professed spiritual validity of the sacraments as administered according to its rules.
5. The immaculate conception and mediatorship of the blessed mother of our Lord.
6. Papal infallibility.
7. Indulgencies for the living, and masses for the dead.

These may suffice to name now.

A priest at Rome told me there was no reference to the blessed Virgin in the Catacombs, but her position was subsequently revealed. A monk to whom I adduced, "I am the Door," "I am the Vine," as parallel to "This is my body," could only answer me in support of transubstantiation, "The Church says so, and that's enough." A professor of theology in the Eastern Orthodox Church told me a few months ago, that the Church having established holy days, they were of precisely the same obligation as the Lord's Day, based on the Ten Commands, and to be equally observed.

The doctrine of the Holy Spirit abiding in the Church is thus perverted to support teaching which makes the Word of God of none effect, and it behoves us all carefully to examine this pretension, and if it is not true to reject it with no uncertain sound. It is, indeed, a point of tremendous importance, which we are called upon to judge, and whether for our own salvation and spiritual health, or as in some degree witnesses for God, and custodians of the truth, to hand on to others, it is imperative that we should be right here.

The blessed truth remains, "If two of you shall agree upon earth touching anything they shall ask in my name, it shall be done to them of my Father in heaven." "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. Whosesoever sins ye remit they are remitted; whosesoever sins ye retain they are retained." "If he will not hear the Church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." "The Holy Spirit, that He may abide with you for ever." These are all strictly true for all times and places; but they apply to a spiritual, believing, holy people of God, such as were the apostles and others to whom they were uttered, and not to persons who unfitly might hold the office or bear the name of priest or presbyter, nor to any corporation of men calling themselves a Christian Church, and having the form of godliness, but in works denying it.

And is not this what the Roman Catholic and Orthodox Eastern Churches, as a whole, are?

Are the countries where these churches almost exclusively prevail, nations of saints? Are Mexicans and South Americans, Spaniards, Italians, etc., holy peoples? Are the Russians so? Are the sins we deplore here little known there? No. What of that? This, that the organisation called the Church in those countries is formed of the same persons as form the organisation of national civil society. They are nearly identical as to their members.

Where, then, is "the world" there, according to the nomenclature? It does not exist. But more truly we may ask and answer, Where is the true Church of Jesus's disciples there, the obedient to whom these holy promises of the Holy Spirit belong? Alas! this is not to be seen. I will not say that the professed house of God has become a den of thieves, for there are sincere, God-fearing, and Christ-loving souls among them, thank God. Nor has God left Himself without a witness; but I say the organism calling itself the Christian Church in those countries, and ascribing to itself solely these precious promises of the Holy Spirit's presence and power, is not in the state of faith and holiness requisite to receive the fulfilment of them. "If ye love Me keep my commandments, and I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter," is the tenour of them; they are conditional to a holy life, and are only fulfilled to those individuals or corporation who keep God's word.

Saul was a prophet king over God's people, but his disobedience bereft him of the Holy Spirit, nor could he obtain any answer or direction from the Lord. Judas's apostolate gave him no spiritual grace or power, when he did wickedness. Baptized Simon Magus in vain coveted spiritual power. The seven sons of Sceva used Jesus and Paul's names to cast out a demon, but no sign followed. No, it is vain to ascribe to a carnal organisation that promise which belongs only to that which is spiritual. But there were pretended false prophets of God telling lies in his name in Israel, and is it surprising if there should be so now?

I conclude then, therefore, that these solemn pretensions are false; that their danger is as great as the promise and power of the gift of the Spirit is real, great, and glorious; that by these pretensions the truth itself is corrupted, the Word of God made now of none effect, and men are turned from it to fables. The safety is to hold tenaciously to the Holy Scriptures, which by the wisdom of God defy the corrupter's power. By the "it is written" our Lord Jesus thrice refuted the devil's sophistries, and He used no other argument than this sword of the Spirit, the Word of God; for none was needed.

And if we are to overcome in our day, and to leave a precious inheritance of grace and truth to others, it can only be by our being like minded with the young men to whom the Apostle John thus wrote: "Ye are strong, and the Word of God abides in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." The Lord grant t Amen. F. M.

THE ARK OF REST.

The fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness;
A fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord.
(Joel i. 19; iii. 18.)

I.

Gazing intent, with eager eyes
To northward, eastward, south, and west,
On every hand a desert lies,
Devoid of form or feature, blest
With soul-appealing sympathies.

II.

A passionless display of things,
Where silence broods, o'er pleasant sounds
Of laughing streams and welling springs;
The glamour of delight abounds,
Which unto darkness darkness springs.

III.

Man wars for "perfect peace," and fails;
Excessive toil, in search of gain,
Rebellious life and death, entails,
Save intervenes that gracious rain,
Tears—borne upon celestial gales.

IV.

Hence, wrestling much in prayer, until
He meets with one whose bosom, warm,
Heaves with compassion, him, to fill,
He clasps the ever-outstretched arm,
And hears th' Eternal Voice—I will!

V.

As a "fountain," flows the crimson flood
To wash the blackest sinner white,
The precious body and the blood,
The power of sin, have broken, quite;
And life, through death, is understood.

VI.

"I will," is meat and drink—he speeds
To Christ, and, leaning on his breast
Finds royal bounty for his needs,
The four winds softly breathe him "rest"—
Upon the living Word he feeds.

VII.

O faithful promiser of bliss,
Thy changeless Word, the spirit cheers,
To every anxious fear dismiss,
Till joy for ever buries tears,
In Love's unutterable kiss.

VIII.

The joy of his dear Lord!—no less—
Too wonderful for mortal tongue,
The home of God, his true address,
Where soon he'll tune the heavenly song,
Faultless in Christ—"Our Righteousness."

Lyme Regis. Charles Ellis.

A SCOTTISH SAINT.

A series of homely sketches depicting Church life in the North of Scotland as it comes within the purview of an Independent pastor, has been published in book form by Rev. James Stark, of Aberdeen (Elspeth and her Neighbours. Wylie & Son, Aberdeen). The worthy woman who furnishes the title to the collection gets three chapters to herself, and she well deserves the honour. Lives like hers, of God-fearing devoutness and shrewd wisdom in matters relating to the kingdom of God, are better worth studying (and truer to art, we may add) than most of the fancy pen pictures to which the "new humour" has accustomed us. We extract Mr. Stark's account of Elspeth's closing days, and the light that shone brightly around her as she entered the valley of the shadow:—

"Elspeth caught a severe cold when venturing out to church on an inclement day. This brought on a serious illness, which the doctor told her would probably at her advanced age prove fatal. She did not suffer much pain, and her mind was perfectly unclouded, so that every time I called she was able to converse with me about the country she was going to, and her feelings at the prospect of the great change. She was glad to see any of her fellow church members, that she might have a talk with them about the things that lay near to her heart.

"Amongst other things, I asked her if she would like to begin life again in this world. She, after pondering for a little, as if surveying the past, said, with some hesitation, 'No, I wouldna like to risk it; besides that would be ga'en back; I want to gang forwards and upwards.'

"On the first visit I paid to her, after all hope of recovery was abandoned, I asked her what she thought of God's dealings with her. 'What do I think o' them?' she exclaimed, as she looked up in my face, with a little of the old, lively, forcible expression, 'they're just wonnerfu', rinnin' ower wi' love an' mercy.' After a pause, she added: 'Aye haud up Jesus Christ tae a puir, perishin', sinnin' warl'; mak' Him the heid an' the hert o' a' your preachin'. What would I be noo withoot Him? An' auld, dune, deein' woman, gaen down to the cauld grave, and outer darkness, jist like a withered leaf drappin' down wi' the wintry blast on a lanesome nicht.'

"Then, her countenance, changing from the troubled expression which reflected this dark picture, was lighted up—wan and sickly as it was—with an almost heavenly brightness as she continued, "But wi' Christ I'm just like the laverock that knows the mornin' has come, and is gaen to rise frae its nest on the earth, to mount the lift, an' in its cheery way, meet the risin' sun.' With the earnestness of one who had a dying testimony to give, she added: 'Tell the fouk on Sabbath no to gang in for a fine weather religion, ane that kens naethin' aboot the bottom and extremity o' things, that canna grapple wi' sin, an' is no able tae look death and judgment in the face.'

"Her strong sense and even-balanced judgment remained with her to the end. Her pastor ventured to remark that he did not feel so ready to depart as she did. 'Ah, man,' she replied, 'ye'll get grace tae dee when ye hae to dae't; ye're young yet, an' what ye need is grace tae live and work. God does wi' his grace as He did wi' the manna. We dinna get it aforehan', because we havna' the sense tae guide it, an' it would a' melt awa'.'

"'Does the fear never cross your mind that all your faith is a dream?' I asked another time. With a displeased and pained look, which made me bitterly repent my indiscretion, she said slowly, as if every word came from the depth of her soul: 'If —this— is —a— dream—whaur's —the—reality?' Then, as if speaking to herself, she said in a whisper: 'He winna forsake me; He cam' tae me when I didna' seek Him, an' noo when I need Him and seek Him wi' a' my soul—Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.' After a pause she said: 'There are days when I get only blinks o' the Sun o' Righteousness; then He comes tae me in a' his splendour, an' while I lie here I'm no verra sure whether its earth or heaven.'"

A MISSIONARY BICYCLE.—Rev. J. F. Hewitt, of the C.M.S., Calcutta, finds a bicycle essential for the proper performance of his work of visitation in outlying places. His machine is worn out beyond repair, and he asks friends at home to join in providing him with a new machine. Mr. H. G. Malaher, 20, Compton-terrace, Islington, N., will receive communications.

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?*

By REV. P. B. POWER.

If I were asked to define in a single word the Gospel, I should say "Gift." And if I were allowed a second word, I should add "Free" to it—"Free Gift." Of course there would be a good deal to say in connection with this, but this is the very essence of the Gospel. "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son" (1 John v. 11). This gift we of course must receive, if it is to be of any use to us; and from it must flow certain effects which are a necessary result of our having received it; but the Gospel itself is the good news of "gift," without our having had anything to do with it at all. The idea stands absolutely alone; and in its grand solitude consists its mighty power.

Theologians have clouded the Gospel with elaborate explanations and speculations—preachers too often with conditions and limitations: but the Gospel remains as its comes from God in its majestic simplicity:—"I give eternal life to anyone and everyone who will take." He, therefore, who would preach God's Gospel must thus present it to man: and when the idea of "free gift" is realised, a number of difficulties will be removed. Why God should give, will always remain a mystery. "God so loved the world, that He gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16). He loved—that is all we know; why He loved we cannot tell. Even in human affection, we cannot often tell "why" we love.

A gift—in the true sense of the word "gift"—is a bestowal altogether free. The Gospel says to man:—"I, God, offer you eternal life, if you will take it." If we take it, it will do wonderful things. These will flow forth as effects from it; but the eternal life is not in them, it is in the gift; not in what we do, but in what God has done. And so it comes to pass that a man may be saved at once on receiving the gift; that a preacher may say, "Believe now; i.e., take the gift, and it will save you."

"But must I not repent before I can take the gift?" For how long is a man to repent? Who can tell when he has repented enough, or if he has ever repented enough, or can ever repent enough, to make him worthy to receive such a gift? or, to say nothing of worthiness, to make him able to receive it? I can only meet such questions by the idea of "gift." God offers me salvation just as I am; if He waits for a certain amount of repentance, how do I know that I shall live to experience it? I am a great sinner; great repentance is due from me—life-long repentance. I may never live to repent as much as I ought. If we present the Gospel as a free gift, we meet all this, and meet it in the only way in which it can be met.

And what about Repentance? It will come by the "gift." When man sees how good God is to him, how He has bought him with a price, how the blood of his only Son was shed that He "might be just, and yet the Justifier of him that believeth in Jesus," when he sees sin in the light of the Cross, then he repents with a "repentance not to be repented of"; then he hates it for what it did to Christ as well as to himself, crucifying the Christ who died in his place. Then a man sees sin in God's light; and the love of God in his free gift of life, despite all he has been, or is, makes him hate it, and flee from it, and so there is no fear that there will not be repentance true and deep on the true reception of the gift.

And as to Sanctification, or a man's becoming holy—if the Gospel is not a gift, free, it must be earned; and if a man is to get it by so much work, then, as the Apostle says, "It is not of grace, but debt." And that is how the Gospel is sometimes preached: "Amend your life, and when you have become good up to a certain point, then you are fit to be saved." But the truth is, we become holy because we are saved, and not to be saved at all. No man who has really received eternal life as a gift from God can, so to speak, turn it against God, so that with impunity he can lead an unholy life.

* From a little volume entitled, WHAT IS THE GOSPEL? (2s. "Home Words" Office), in which Archdeacon Sinclair, [illegible] Christopher, Principal Moule, and other sound Evan[illegible] useful answers to a great question. Rev. [illegible] writes a preface to this valuable and [illegible]

These few lines speak of only one phase of the connection with the Gospel. Of course its aspects are many. But this is one that we insist on as vital, as operative, as giving to God his honour and his power, and as putting man in his proper place. It makes man nothing and God everything. Repentance and Sanctification are often mixed up with the free gift; but the Gospel, if it be God's Gospel, must be a free gift—God's giving and man's receiving, and that alone. The "gift" is the cause, and from it will flow godly sorrow and holiness in life as its effects.

A NEW YEAR MESSAGE.

The world was old, and almost worn to death,
When Christ came from on high,
He breathed into her weary frame new breath
Yet Jesus came to die!
His days He gave, his nights, his precious blood—
Jesus his all doth give—
The world had lost all hope, all peace, all good,
Christ said unto her, "Live!"

And so when we are worn with grief and sin
Christ comes to each sad soul
That there new life, his soul, may rise within,
For Jesus makes us whole.
O give thy days, thy life, thy heart at length,
Let Jesus have thy best,
His death thine only trust, his life thy strength,
Christ saith unto thee, "Rest!"

GRACE CREED.

OUR COUNTRYMEN IN INDIA.

DEAR SIR,—India is coming to the front in matters political, moral, and religious. It is well; for it has peerless claims on Church and State in these lands. Many devoted men and women have gone to that great mission field, and yet there were room and work for many more.

Allow me to invite the attention of your readers to tens of thousands of our kith and kin in the midst of idolaters, who have no means of grace. If they had, they might become volunteer missionaries—witnesses for Christ by their lips and their lives. Our evangelists tell of little groups whom they visit who have no other opportunity of hearing the Gospel; and even at larger stations the remark is often made on a Sunday, "But for your visit we would have had no service to-day."

"Endure hardship; do the work of an evangelist": so Paul wrote to Timothy. His words are often applicable to this work. Here is an example from Rev. Isaac F. Row:—"After fourteen hours' travelling, arrived home at 1.30 a.m., having been away eleven days and twelve nights, and travelling over 1200 miles; was 74 hours in the train, including four nights; preached seven times; administered the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper; visited and distributed tracts; collected subscriptions, and attended to the duties of secretary and treasurer."

Take another. Mr. Herbert R. Francis, on a recent tour, amid interesting narratives of dealing with souls individually and otherwise, tells of having one night to sleep in a verandah. To this and other privations he attributed a serious illness, which made it necessary to go to the hill station of Mussoorie, where he was recovering. It is difficult to understand this of India, where people are very hospitable. During my tours in thirteen winters I had many trials, but I was never sent out to sleep in a verandah.

A stationmaster said to Rev. J. R. Hewison: "We all want you to come every week. Your words have been ringing in my ears since you were last here. We like to have the Bible explained."

INFLUENCE SURVIVES.

Chunar was for years the centre for work of Mr. F. Nicholson, a devoted and soul-winning evangelist. In 1892 he left for Canada with his motherless children. Mr. Hewison now visits this place, and finds that Mr. Nicholson had made a deep impression on the community by his life and his earnest work. The story of this place, near Allahabad, would fill pages. Suffice it now to say that 120 or 130 people are almost neglected. They are visited once in two or three months by a C.M.S. missionary, and oftener by our evangelist, who preaches and also visits them in their homes. The especially among the old pensioners.

A THEOSOPHIST.

Mr. Hewison met with a Theosophist, and not only reasoned with him, but told him what the Lord had done for himself. When Mr. Hewison went back, he writes, "He was present at the meeting, engaged in singing, and appeared otherwise impressed and interested. He came with me to the station, but did not refer to the subject of our last conversation, neither did I, thinking it better that God's Word should be left to do its work." Next month (October), Mr. Hewison writes, "I met again the Theosophist. He is certainly impressed, very kind, and anxious to hear the Word."

SIMLA.

There was a real and generous interest in the Society from 1870 till Rev. John Forgan left a few years ago. His return to Britain was a real loss to India. He is now superintendent of the Edinburgh City Mission. To revive interest, Mr. Herbert Francis went, a few months ago, to the great sanatorium, for the purpose of reviving interest in our scattered kith and kin. He had some success, though many old friends and helpers had left India.

A DARK CLOUD DISSOLVED.

Rev. S. J. Jones, whose work is in Bengal, wrote lately as follows:—"I met with one case of great interest during the month. It was that of a young lady, the daughter of English parents, who came out to this country when she was quite young. The parents died, and she was adopted by some friends of the parents. Her foster-mother, now dead, seems to have instilled into her mind all manner of atheistic ideas. When I met her she was on a visit to friends for the benefit of her health, for she is consumptive. I talked to her, and she talked to me as if I were a very deluded mortal. She listened, however, to my personal testimony of what God had done for my soul, and allowed me to read and pray with her. The next time I saw her she was subdued, and quite melted under the message I delivered to her. The third and last time I saw her she came to the meeting. Afterwards I called at her lodgings, spoke to her very earnestly, and pleaded with her to accept Christ as her Saviour. Before I left I had the joy of listening to her prayer, 'O God, have mercy on a sinner like me!' I have since heard that all is peace; and that she is now working and praying for the conversion of an infidel brother."

These glimpses of the Society's work might be multiplied from the narratives of these evangelists and others; but I must not intrude too far on your space. It is difficult to exaggerate the need of many, and impossible to tell the importance of our work for promoting Christian missions to the heathen. My appeal for help to send more evangelists is enforced by earnest Christians coming home. Our appeal is first to Him who knows all, and then to his richly privileged people in these lands.—Yours faithfully,

JOHN FORDYCE,
Secretary of the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society.

"Simla," Cambridge.

WEST NORWOOD.—On January 30 and 31, a convention on the Deepening of the Spiritual Life will be held at Lansdowne Hall. Among those expected to take part are Rev. J. J. Luce, of Gloucester, Rev. G. H. C. Macgregor, Rev. F. B. Meyer, Captain Baring, Mr. Walter Sloan, and others.

SWITZERLAND.—In a famous health resort for consumptives in Grissons, Eastern Switzerland, a lady has for fourteen years kept a sort of Christian pension for invalids who are not sufficiently wealthy to meet the ordinary charges of the place. Her aim has been to bring weary souls to Christ, as well as to "mother" the solitary, especially Christian people. Having toiled beyond her strength, she must now give up her much-loved work, but she hesitates to sell her house as a mere pension, which would be easy, as she is anxious if possible to secure the continuance of a unique centre of Christian influence. The house is amply furnished for fourteen guests, and would let for £300 a year. The lady wishes to sell it for £3000 and the friend who sends us particulars says:—"You may know of some person or family longing for a sphere of Christian labour, who would take the matter up." Other details may be had from Mrs. Lord, care of Mr. T. Adams, 142, Hagley-road, Birmingham

THE NEW TEACHER.

THE village of Slowton is introduced to the traveller by a long, winding, beautiful country road, flanked on either side by oaks and elms. Two white cottages, with gardens, add picturesqueness to the scene. In the first cottage lived a widow and daughter named Hornblower, the daughter, Susan, being "educated," and having original ideas. She always called the cottages "the prelude" to the village, which is a mile and a-half beyond; "And," she would say, "I prefer the prelude. It is a duet. The rest is a poor, straggling chorus."

Susan played the organ and led the heterogeneous choir in the little church of Slowton. The regular organist having gone to London, Susan had offered herself as his substitute, and much to the chagrin of the musical portion of the hearers, remained.

At this time there came to Slowton the new schoolmistress. She rented the other white cottage, and the widow called on her. "Indeed," said she, "You are as welcome as the flowers in May! Susan not having anyone she can mix with."

"Is it an unsociable place?" asked the teacher, twinkling all over.

"It's not that," was the reply. "It's Susan's higher education and beautiful accomplishments, as you may say. And you, though you have none, but must drill the A B C into a lot of thickheads, will be better than no; one though it's hard for Susan, with her talents."

"It must be," said the little teacher, quietly.

"She's not much for you," said her mother to Susan after the call. "Hasn't two long words to say for herself."

Sunday found the little teacher very reverent, very quiet, in church.

"What do you think of Susan?" asked the widow after the service, "though I only ask you out of compliment to a stranger. Susan's beyond criticism, as one of the gentlemen from London said."

"That is quite true," said Miss Allen, "so I will not give my poor opinion."

When the organist and the schoolmistress walked in company a few evenings after this, the former burst out with—

"If I could believe my own eyes, you were on your knees when I peeped through the blind before I knocked. Yes, you were!" she cried, seeing the other's rising colour.

"Yes, I was," said the schoolmistress, driven to bay.

"Were you praying?" asked Susan, callously.

"Yes, and praising. Thanking God for a happy day."

"Oh, you are a queer one!" cried Susan. "Well, I never need do that. My life's a life of praise—come to that. Though I never thought of it that way before."

"Yes," assented the little teacher, "if it comes from your heart. But praise can never take the place of prayer. It should follow the results of all true prayer. Don't you think so?"

"I'm wrapped up in my playing all the time," said Susan. "I feel inspired as I play—I can think of nothing else."

"Oh, I should feel so hungry and alone if I had nothing to ask and to tell God," said the little teacher. "He satisfies the longing soul as no other can. I've had such a happy day!"

The rapture in her face confused the organist—she could not understand it, but she saw it and commented on it—"Pooh!" she cried, "I see it all—you're in love!"

"Yes, that is quite true," said the little teacher, "Good night!"

A short time after this, the widow observed to Susan, "Though she's not accomplished, Belle Allen's about the happiest little creature I've ever known. She fills this little place with light when she comes here. She's never lonely, for she's always doing something for someone."

"I suppose," replied Susan, shortly, "you'd have me like her? It's not in my way of genius to like drudgery."

"No; I suppose not," said her mother; "but what a comfort that little thing would be to her mother, if she had one!"

That evening the little teacher asked Susan if she would lend her the organ key for an hour. Susan stared and said, "Well, I suppose you won't do it any harm. Your feet won't touch the pedals! But I like your ambition!"

By-and-by, out of curiosity, she trudged through the village and stopped in amaze. Someone was playing, "O Rest in the Lord," and surely—was it an angel who was singing? Susan had never heard anything like it before. She pressed her throbbing heart. "Oh," she cried; "who can it be?" She stole noiselessly into the church, and there sat the little teacher, playing and singing too, and filling the church as with a choir of angels. The hot tears of shame rolled down Susan's face as she fled home.

Late that night, when the widow was asleep, Susan crept into the other cottage, and found the little teacher darning children's frocks and jackets. "I am not in bed yet," she explained, cheerfully, "for I did want to finish these. It helps their mothers." It was a somewhat mixed speech, but it was plain to Susan, who threw herself into an attitude of grief at the other's feet. "Oh," she sobbed, "I'm not fit to live! A vulgar, poor, mean wretch as I am; but it's over now!" The little teacher did not understand Susan, but she soothed her, and sympathised with her until she was quieter.

"Oh," said the poor organist, "you've broken my heart. All these years I've been hard and cold, and known nothing of God; but to-night your beautiful voice spoke straight to my soul. I saw Jesus, and when you sang 'He was despised,' I felt as if I had been blind, and now could see—see myself a hideous sinner, and you, whom I have wronged, as an angel."

"Hush! dear," said the little teacher. "We must not talk of ourselves, nor grow morbid, analysing and criticising the various attitudes of our own souls, as if there was nothing else to be done but to look within. You have been awakened, and God is waiting to teach you."

"I shall never touch the organ again," sobbed Susan. She was too full of her shame to think of anything else just then. But as the night wore on she grew calm, and presently slept. In the morning she awoke, confused.

"Oh," she said, "I am with the little teacher, who has so gently led me to the Great Teacher! How much I have to learn—how less than nothing I know! It is a change!"

On Sunday afternoon, Susan was at her place at the organ, but though Susan played it was not Susan's playing. A reverent simplicity distinguished it, and when the little teacher took her place in the choir, and, lifting her voice, led all the others, the squire's lady said, "It was beautiful! Quite a cathedral service, only more simple and sacred, it seemed to me. How is it?"

That was what everybody asked; but they soon knew. Susan—the new Susan—helped Miss Allen in the school on Monday, and the children told their mothers, "Oh, she's quite nice—not a bit proud, now."

The little teacher and Susan began organ and choir practice together; then they got a meeting for prayer among the choir members, and as it was a live meeting, many who came found out how dead they were, and longed to live. The Spirit of God went heart-searching through the little village. He met widow Hornblower through her daughter.

"Such a comfort as she's turned out to be," said the widow, pathetically, "And she don't think nothing of her fine accomplishments now—just cossets her old mother."

Susan took the plate off the gate; but in a few months she had so many lessons that she had to refuse pupils.

The little teacher and she were inseparable. Susan says:—"Sisters in GOD. She has taught me all I know of myself, and of Him; of music, and of service; of duty, and of obedience. I shall always be learning while I have my little teacher."

M. B. GERDS.

---

BIRMINGHAM MEDICAL MISSION.—The nineteenth annual report says:—"The fact of 22,688 consultations, and visits to 5339 cases, is in itself an evidence as to the amount of suffering and sorrow that have been dealt with by the doctor at the various centres; and that there is a field of spiritual usefulness which only a medical mission can open up. The finances of the mission show a large increase of expenditure over receipts. Some of this outlay will not occur again, certainly not for some time, particularly the item of repairs; but those were absolutely necessary for the preservation of the building. The special aim of the mission is to tell the sick ones that the Kingdom of God is come nigh to them. That many have been led into that gracious kingdom there is ample proof, from the most interesting and copious notes of cases attended by Dr. Crabbe and his assistants."

Y.M.C.A. NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS.

THE usual address by Sir George Williams, as President, is issued to the British Associations, on the motto text selected by the National Council, "Sing unto the Lord, bless his name; show forth his salvation from day to day" (Psalm xcvi. 2). On the last point Sir George says:—

We do well ever to remember that his salvation is to be shown forth day by day. It is not a garment to be put on and taken off with our Sunday clothes. It is woven into the texture of our personality. And it is to be worn daily. Not only on the Sunday in the Bible-class, or the religious meeting, when it is comparatively easy to do so, but every day during the week in the sphere of our secular calling, amid the counteracting influences which may encircle us, or the taunting innendos and cynical sneers of ungodly associates to which we may be exposed—always and everywhere—we are to show forth his salvation. And this is really what we, as members of the Y.M.C.A., pledge ourselves to do. Ours is emphatically a mission of young men to young men. It should be our supreme endeavour to win to Christ all those among whom our lot is cast. It is estimated that there are now over 500,000 members and associates in our associations. If each member would solemnly resolve that by God's help he would seek to be instrumental in leading one only to decision for Christ during the present year, what an accession to our numbers would be secured—and what a year of blessing should we enjoy! And in order to attain any measure of success in this direction, it is absolutely necessary that we should exhibit his salvation in our daily life. Those who are unconverted are not slow to recognise genuine Christian character in others. There is no power in the world so potent or so irresistible as the power of a consecrated and consistent life. It is an unanswerable evidence of the Christianity which Christ has established, and which He calls upon his followers to promote.

The great need of the religious world at this hour is manly, courageous, consistent Christian men. And I rejoice to believe that thousands of such are to be found in the ranks of our associations throughout the world. The aim of the Y.M.C.A. is to produce such men. Men, who know the right and do it regardless of consequences—men, who seek to fulfil the Divine idea in their life, and whose supreme purpose is to glorify God—men who, having realised the power of Christ's salvation, seek to make it known to others. May God abundantly and continually add such to our numbers.

It is my earnest prayer that the year upon which we now enter, and which is the beginning of a new and eventful era in the history of the Y.M.C.A., may be a year of exceptional spiritual fruitfulness and prosperity. The importance of the work, and the needs of its operations, are proportionate only to the pressing demands and necessities of the age. The air is full of the great problems of life and destiny. With these we have to deal, for although ours is pre-eminently a spiritual agency, nevertheless, we must be in touch with, and alive to, all the moral and social questions of the hour, if we are to permanently affect the multitudes of young men by whom we are surrounded, and whom in God's name we seek to benefit. Gambling, Sabbath-breaking, impurity, intemperance, worldliness, and vice in all its manifold forms, are monster evils against which we must raise our standard, marshal our forces, and courageously wage continual warfare. Christ's Salvation is an answer, all-sufficient and all-satisfying, to these questions, and which we are called upon practically to illustrate in our daily life. By showing forth his salvation day by day we shall bear incontrovertible testimony to its power to subdue every form of evil, and its adaptability to every need and condition of human life.

---

LAMBETH BATHS.—The present winter session is proving most successful. The weekly attendances have exceeded five thousand, and all the meetings are well supported. The Sunday lantern services by Rev. Andrew Mearns are proving a great success.

NEW FOREST GIPSIES.—These nomads of the forest are being looked after spiritually by Mr. and Mrs. Bullen, of Heathfield Farm, Ringwood, Hants. During a recent visitation, extending over a week, many vans were met with, and the inmates received instruction in the way of life. Mr. Bullen proposes giving some special relief to those in need of it at this season.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30.—LUKE XII.

Fear Not (1-12).—The programme of this paragraph seems dark. The leaven of evil always working, the killing of the body, the perils of confession, the arrests before synagogues and rulers. But what infinite compensations! Not forgotten, the hairs numbered, the confession before the angels, the teaching of the Holy Spirit. With such comforts we need not fear, except only evil and the power of Satan.

Covet Not (13-21).—Christ has no province in adjusting differences between man and man. He lays down principles, obedience to which emancipates. It is a golden saying, that a man's life consists not in what he has, but in what he is. It is absurd to suppose the soul can take its ease because of the things that are stored up in barns. Forgiveness, communion with heaven, can alone give us perfect ease. Let us seek to be rich toward God, laying up treasure in the lives of others.

Worry Not (22-34).—God, who has given us the greater, life and body, is responsible for all that these gifts involve. The very fact of our being sons gives us a claim on our Father which the wild creatures of the forest have not. No want escapes the quick knowledge of Infinite Love. Christ's conception for his people is that their lives should be absolutely devoted to the cause of the Kingdom and the good of men; then heaven itself would become liable for all their expenditure. The Father's knowledge, provision, and good pleasure were our Saviour's consolation, and they may be ours.

Sleep Not (35-48).—It is very wonderful that Christ is prepared to make Himself the servant of those who serve Him. During his earthly life He ministered even to washing their feet, and in eternity He will still act as the servant, doing for his children all that is necessary to refresh them after their long night vigil. The coming of the Son of Man has ever been the hope of the Church. Let us not permit it to die down. Surely the smile of reward will be greater for those who watch after the delay of so many centuries!

Delay Not (49-59).—The fire of which the Lord spake was not only that of the Holy Spirit, but of awful suffering, with which his Gospel was to divide the dearest. The shadow of all the agony which was to befal lay heavy on the heart of Christ. Let us mark the signs of our time, and not rest till we know that the claims of the broken law are met, that it has no hold on us, and that we stand clear before God and man, through the righteousness of Christ.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31.—LUKE XIII.

Accidents, not Punishments (1-5).—We are tempted to suppose that sudden disasters prove special sin on the part of those involved in them. These words of Christ teach that those who judge thus may themselves be equally under condemnation. God alone can judge the heart. Sometimes in this life sin is avenged, but often not. And there is no suffering which is not penalty.

The Barren Fig Tree (6-9).—It failed, not for want of care or propitious surroundings, but because it did not respond to these. It is much to have a good environment, but we need the grace of God to adapt us to it, that it may minister fruitfulness to his glory. The consumptive patient does not need more air, but more lung power.

Loosed from Infirmity (10-17).—In every gathering there are men and women who can in no wise lift themselves up. But Christ's hands can straighten them. If ox and ass could be loosed from the stall, surely this woman could be loosed from the restraint that held her as in a vice, on the Sabbath day.

The Kingdom of God (18-30).—Small in its beginnings, in the heart of man, or in a community, it contains the seed of infinite productiveness. You cannot tell what will ensue when you cast a seed into a child's heart (24). But the entrance into full blessedness is by a narrow way. Men are kept out because they cannot leave their self-indulgence outside. Those who only eat and drink in Christ's presence betray a spirit of self-indulgence, which is foreign to the deepest principles of his Gospel.

The Doomed City (31-35).—Christ kept his eye on God's clock, and knew that He was safe till the hour struck, which had been destined from all eternity. He knew that when He died it would be at Jerusalem. Hence He said sadly, no prophet could be executed except within its precincts. Note the brooding love of Christ, and the inevitable despair of those who refuse it. O, soul of man! Art thou beneath that intercepting wing?

TUESDAY, JANUARY 1.—LUKE XIV.

The Sabbath-day Feast (1-6).—Again the question of the Sabbath, but on it hinged the maintenance of the whole ceremonial law. How often mercilessness to men, and punctiliousness to right co-exist. Men care for their beasts because they are their property. Christ alone teaches the love that has a property in its brother.

The Guests (7-11).—The humility that takes the lowest place is dear to Him who was meek and lowly in heart. Let us seek it, not with a view of being asked to a better, but because we feel that nothing befits better those who of all men are most in need of the redeeming mercy of God. Dwell on thine own defects and on the excellences of others till thy heart is broken.

The Host (12-14).—These words strike the death blow at much of the so-called hospitality of society. And Christians need to interpret literally the Master's words. They are imperative in their tone. He probably meant just what He said. Some of us get so much gratitude here, that there will be very little to come to us in the resurrection of the just.

Invited but Unwilling Guests (15-24).—Many more are bidden to heaven than will reach it. The excuses are invalid, not such that men would give their fellows. The heart of man has no relish for the provisions of God's table; yet if thou art poor, maimed, blind, or lame, there is room for thee, and the spoil of a great prey.

Counting the Cost (25-35).—The fan was in his hand and winnowed his floor. How sad the thrice-repeated words, "Cannot be my disciple." Christ has done more than anyone beside to cement the relationships of human love, but He always asks that they should be subordinate to the claims of duty, to Himself as King. Oh for the love that counts all as dung that it may win Christ.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 2.—LUKE XV.

Joy in the Shepherd's Hut (1-7).—Christ is the Shepherd. He does not relinquish his quest till He finds. Not content with the finding, He brings home, and his heart is glad. It was his sheep all the while, but it was straying. His gladness is contagious. He calls the angels in to share it with Him. The very risk of losing makes the joy of saving the greater.

Joy in the Woman's Chamber (8-10).—Oh, that in imitation of the woman's example, we might search in the recesses and corners of the world with lighted lamps for lost souls. Going on our knees to sweep the floor, if need be, until we find. A lost money piece might if certain modern interpretations be true, spoil our entire necklace. Are we not justified in saying that the absence of souls from the circle of the Church should make all within restless until they be, included?

Joy in the Father's House (11-22).—The far country is the alienated heart. Away from God, the soul is amid a mighty famine; forlorn of Divine love, it yields itself to wild passions; surrendering his service, it becomes enslaved to the basest tyranny. Love always remembers and looks along the road, and waits to welcome back. (25) What a contrast between the joy of welcome and the cynicism of this selfish heart; type of the cold and proud Pharisees, who murmured at the publicans and sinners drawing nigh to Christ. The daily proprieties of loveless morality know nothing of the ecstasy and rapture of forgiveness. (31) There is a blessed sense in which this verse may be true of us all. Always in the Father's house and sharing his best.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 3.—LUKE XVI.

The Unrighteous Mammon (1-13).—Wealth is so called because it is so often obtained by unjust means. It is also called "another's" and "that which is least." It is not of much account in the kingdom of God except as being a discipline for those who possess it, and a means of blessing to those to whom it is given. We are to use it, the Lord says, for making friends, that when it shall have passed away in the general conflagration of the last day, those whom we have benefited may welcome us into their mansions. As children are tested in childish games, and by miniature playthings for the great world, so are we being tested by our behaviour with respect to money which is only the type of the true riches.

The Divine Knowledge (14-18).—God read the heart of the Pharisees as a book. Their self-justification availed nothing to Him. He weighed them in the balance and found them wanting. Oh, for that holy violence which will not take denial, but which presses into the Kingdom.

The Wealth of Godly Poverty (19-31).—There will be as great contrasts in the other world as there are in this, a strange reversal, however, of human conditions. The beggars here may be the peers of heaven, whilst the millionaires of this world may be for ever reduced to abject poverty. We shall remember in that world how we have abused this. "Son, remember," indicates the keenest anguish of hell. The good things which can be received in human life are not the best. For a man to count these his good, shows that he has missed life's true meaning. The rejecter of the testimony of Scripture would not be converted by miracles. What a tribute to the power of the Word!

FRIDAY, JANUARY 4.—LUKE XVII.

Forgiveness (1-10).—Our conduct affects God's little ones for good or evil. Let us be very careful that it causes none of them to stumble. This paragraph is full of the care for others, that no little one should be caused to stumble; that the sinning brother should be led to repent; the repenting sinner forgiven; and that forgiveness should run to the number of perfection day by day. Well might the disciples ask for increase of faith to meet such demands! It is not the amount of faith that we need be anxious about, but its object. A very little aperture may let in the ocean. We are not to think that obedience in any of these respects is an uncommon, or remarkably quality; it is only our simple duty as the followers of Christ.

Where Are the Nine? (11-19).—The grace of God loves to show itself in very unexpected places, as in the heart of this Samaritan. We are all so much more eager to get help than to return thanks. The Jew despises the Samaritan, but it is the Samaritan who shows true religion, though he has neither temple nor priesthood. Outside our religious institutions, you will sometimes find most humanity and virtue.

The Days of the Son of Man (20-37).—The kingdom of God comes not with observation. It moves silently among the hearts of men during the present age, but when it is manifested there will be no doubt about it. It will be as the lightning, the coming of the deluge, the fall of Sodom. There will be no millennium preparing for the advent. It will come in the midst of human life, suddenly, and to many disastrously. The advent of Christ in one sense took place at the fall of Jerusalem, the scenes of which are probably a miniature of what may be expected at the end of the present age.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5.—LUKE XVIII.

Persistent Prayer (1-8).—The righteous judgment of this unjust judge arose from a selfishness that desired to save itself from worry. How much more may we expect judgment from God, whose nature is inspired by holy love for his own. Do we pray with sufficient earnestness, urgency, and perseverance?

Humble Prayer (9-14).—The only prayer that prevails with God is that of the broken and contrite heart; this He cannot despise. He is prepared to produce this in us by the Holy Spirit, revealing to us our sinfulness until we count ourselves of all men "the sinner." "Be propitiated," the publican cried; "a propitiation for our sins," the apostle answers.

Christ's Love for Little Children (15-17).—They will come to Him unless they are hindered. There is a natural affinity between their humble loving natures, and the character of the kingdom of God.

Youth (18-30).—It is easier for a child to enter the kingdom than a rich man, though the latter be clear of grosser sins; because wealth is apt to fill with self-confidence and pride. The poor man has the best chance of the true riches. Christ's advice to the young man does not apply to all, because covetousness is not the sin of all; but whatever sin most easily besets He bids us to put the root of it away.

On the Way to Jerusalem (31-43).—He went thither fully aware of what awaited Him; and yet at leisure from Himself to hear the cry of distress from the blind beggar. How absolutely our Lord put his strength at the disposal of weakness, and placed Himself at the command of human need. Each who came to Him drew the sufficient grace he required in the bucket of his faith. There is no reason why each of us should not be made whole, and follow Christ, glorifying Him

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 6.

JOHN THE BAPTIST BEHEADED.—Mark vi. 17-29.

GOLDEN TEXT, Matt. x. 28.

THE castle of Machærus, where John was imprisoned, was situated on the southern border of Perea, about nine miles north-east of the Dead Sea, and among mountains higher than those around Jerusalem. It was one of the strongest fortresses of the Jews, and was protected on all sides by deep valleys. In this region Herod had built an extensive and beautiful palace, in which the birthday feast which led to this tragic event appears to have been held.

The chief actor in this crime is Herod Antipas, in whose character there was not one single feature to be admired. He possessed all the wickedness but none of the strength and energy and determination of his father, Herod the Great. He was not destitute of conscience, and was sometimes sufficiently awake to dread the wrong, but not sufficiently resolute to do the right. He is a warning to many whose impressions are similarly fleeting.

I. A HOPEFUL HEARER.—The preaching of John impressed even Herod (20). The piety of John gave force to his preaching. A weak and vacillating man like Herod could not but fear a man so "just and holy" as John. There is a true dignity about the man whose life is regulated by the fear of God, as John's was. Greatness does not depend upon position, but upon character. "He heard him gladly;" yet John was no flatterer—He neither concealed nor excused the sins of the tetrarch. Perhaps Herod was willing to hear because he hoped some time to yield to the truth. "Did many things."—The Rev. Ver. makes this mean that he protected John against the murderous intentions of Herodias.

II. A POWERFUL HINDRANCE.—Most men are held by the cords of one special sin. If they could break away from that there would be hope. Herodias was the hindrance to Herod. Her influence over him was as powerful as that of Jezebel over Ahab. This sinful alliance with her put him in her power. And when John denounced this special sin (18), and Herod's conscience admitted the truth of the charge, he had not the courage and the determination to break this sinful alliance even for his soul's sake.

Instead of yielding to conscience, he put himself still more helplessly under the power of Herodias. She could not tolerate John's plain speaking, and it became necessary that Herod should put away either Herodias or John. Unhappily, he gives himself away—sells his soul for the sake of his sin. Herodias retained, John is put in prison (17). He has done more than he knows, and has made possible, and even certain, darker deeds of crime. He lost his opportunity. When others are given to him he will be still weaker, and less able to deal with them aright. Beware how you make decisions between right and wrong. To choose sin against the suggestions of an awakened conscience is to do yourself incalculable injury.

III. A FATAL BANQUET (21-29).—Mere imprisonment would not satisfy Herodias. As Jezebel sought the life of Elijah, so with great success Herodias sought the life of John. The occasion was a birthday feast. The plot was skilfully laid. The degrading dance of Salome, the promise and oath from the half-drunken monarch, the demand made at the mother's suggestion, accomplish their end. He would withdraw from his oath if he dared; but he feared the guests who sat at meat with him (26) more than he feared the consequences of his crime. Alas for Herod! He has become a helpless tool in the hand of Herodias. For her sake he perpetrates this great crime, so that he remains branded for ever as the murderer of a prophet than whom none was greater.

When the preacher was thus silenced, was all over? Not so. Some months later Jesus appears. See how Herod explains the miracles performed by Him (14-16). The crime is past, but the inward anguish continues. The ghastly sight of that head on the charger was never forgotten. Did not those lips speak with power even though cold in death?

Learn (1) the danger of trifling with convictions of conscience; (2) the weakness of a life of sin; (3) that little sins lead to great crimes; (4) that a man's destiny is determined by his yielding or resisting at one particular point; and (5) that conscience can fill the soul with guilty terrors.

---

THE BROWNSLAND TEMPERANCE HOME, EDINBURGH.—A public meeting in connection with this Institution was held last week in the Y.W.C.A. Institute, Edinburgh. Rev. Dr. Wilson, Barclay Free Church, presided. Mrs. Lockhart, the secretary, gave a brief description of the Home and the work done in it. Addresses commending the Home were delivered by the chairman, Dr. Connal, and Miss Balgarnie.

For the Young.

"THREE IN ONE."—A PARABLE.

HE was a lively young fellow, and enjoyed very much frolicking about the weeds and water lilies of his river home with his brothers and sisters. They would chase each other about until they were tired, or hide under sheltering leaves or mossy stones, and then dart out when least expected and disturb the quiet of some old member of the Trout family by a joyful plunge or caper. One day our young friend was much disturbed by an unusual gloom that spread over the fish world.

"Mother," said he, "what makes it so dark and quiet?"

"The river is frozen over," replied the old fish, "and that shuts out the light and sound; but if the ice continues, you will soon hear the noise made by the skaters as they glide over the surface."

The juvenile trout had never seen any ice, for this was the first sharp frost since he was born.

"What do you mean by frost and ice?" asked he.

"It means," said the old fish, "that the water becomes hard like the stones in the river, so that you cannot swim through it."

"But, mother," objected the young trout, "it seems so unreasonable. Water solid! Why, look here" (and he frisked his tail about as if he were a competitor in athletics), "how is it possible to make it solid? Look how it yields to my tail and fins, and how it runs into my mouth and out at my gills! Mother, you must be joking!"

"It may sound strange to you, my dear; but it is perfectly true. You are living in a world of wonders, and this is one of them. But you can easily prove it by swimming to the surface, and that will end the argument."

But, no; he scorned to do this, and was soon raising another difficulty.

"How is it," retorted the would-be philosopher, "that the water turns into ice at the top of the river, and not at the bottom?"

This he said with much self-satisfaction, expecting to see his old-fashioned mother fairly bewildered by it.

"Well, suppose I can't answer your question," replied the old trout. "The ice at the top is its own proof that water does become solid; but I am glad, for your sake, that I can answer it. The heaviest part of the water always falls to the bottom of the river. Now water, at its greatest weight, is 4 deg.* above the freezing point."

"But, mother, you must be wrong," interrupted the young fish, "for a dewdrop on the river bank told me not long ago that he had heard from an iron rail that all things expand by heat and contract by cold, therefore water at the freezing point would be heaviest."

"You are young and impetuous," replied the mother fish, "and, like many persons who have a little knowledge, you fancy you know everything. It is quite true, as a general law, that heat expands and cold contracts, but there is just this one exception to it. From the freezing point up to four degrees above it fresh water contracts, so that when it reaches four degrees it is at its greatest density, consequently when the surface of our river begins to cool, the colder water at the top falls to the bottom and the warmer water at the bottom rises to the top, until by the continuous interchange the water in the river stands at four degrees, and when this point is reached no more water rises to the top, as each succeeding lower degree makes the water at the surface lighter until the freezing point is reached."

It must be confessed that the young trout felt quite abashed by this unexpected information, and he turned away to hide himself from the eyes of his many relatives, who had listened to the debate. At this juncture his grandfather swam forward, and said,

"Let us take a swim alone, for I want to have a little chat with you."

So getting into a quiet nook, apart from all intruders, the venerable relative opened up the conversation—

"Your mother has told you a wonderful thing," said he; "but there is a great deal more to be said about the wonders of water. Here we swim in it as a liquid; above us, on the surface, it forms, in ice, a solid; and then, again, in steam it forms a vapour or gas."

* Centigrade

"Oh, grandfather, what shall I say; it makes me feel so very ignorant. I thought water was a liquid always, and now I hear not only that it becomes solid, but also a vapour. Please tell me all about it, because now I see how very much I have to learn."

"Well, when water reaches its greatest heat, it gradually turns into steam, which is a vapour and floats about in the air like clouds; and it is just because the process is gradual, that it becomes a source of power and blessing, and not of danger."

"It does seem so wonderful," says the young trout, "three things in one, and one thing in three, each separate and distinct, and yet after all really one. Is there anything else that is wonderful about water?"

"Yes," replied the grandfather, "but it is so very wonderful that I can't understand it nor any other fish, but I take it on trust: water is made up of two invisible gases, one can be set on fire readily, and the other helps it to burn, and yet the other day the firemen pumped a lot of water out of this river to put a fire out. I don't pretend to understand it, because, my boy, there are limits to the capacity of a fish, and I know we cannot search out everything."

Linton, Cambs. T. TUSTING HOLTTUM.

---

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, W. Kensington, Dec. 28; Sydenham Dec. 29; Winchester, Jan. 6; Walthamstow, Jan. 7-11 Hackney Wick, Jan. 9; Colchester, Jan. 12-21; Derby Jan. 24-27; Mr. Arrowsmith, Southwold, Dec. 29-30; Bedford, Jan. 5-20; Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Sheffield, Jan. 17-26 Mr. J. S. Tyler, Littlehampton, Dec. 27; East Preston, Jan 2; Brighton, Worthing, and neighbourhood, Jan. 3-16; Mr. H Hankinson, Finsbury Park, Jan. 15; Mr. H. Falkner, Sidcup, Dec. 20; Pertenhall, near Kimbolton, Jan. 24; Luton, Jan. 27 28; Dunstable, Jan. 28; Potton, Beds, Jan. 23; Woburn, Jan 30; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, Clifton, Dec. 29 to Jan. 12; Mr. Pewtress, Regent's Park, Jan. 6-10.

Holiday services for schoolboys at Clifton, by Dr. C. F. Harford-Battersby and A. G. Dodderidge, Trinity College, Cambridge, assisted by Oxford and Cambridge men, Dec. 29 to Jan. 12.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending Jan. 5.—Sun., Dec. 30, Psalm xcix. 1-9; Mon., 31, c. 1-5; Tues., Jan. 1, cxix. 1-16; Wed., 2 cxix. 17-32; Thurs., 3, cxix. 33-48; Fri., 4, cxix. 49-64; Sat., 5, cxix. 65-80.

---

THE NEW YEAR.

Here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come.—Heb. xiii. 14.

FEAR not, my soul, to meet the guest,
Who enters at the door,
He bears the gifts which God sees best
Shall win thee to that shore
Where pain, and toil, and grief are past,
The exile reaches home at last.

Fret not, my soul, for time's farewell—
The old year fades away;
Bethink thee of the lessons well,
She brought thee day by day,
Have they been learned—the words she set?
Must thou go back to spell them yet?

Fear not nor fret, but reach God now
As ne'er perchance before;
Sweet grows the will to which we bow,
And peace departs no more,
For summer heats or winter cold,
Beyond them shine the streets of gold.

MARY GORGES.

---

BIHE.—Mr. Swan's last diary tells of diligent Gospel work. Besides regular meetings in Ochilonda, all the neighbouring villages are visited in turn. He mentions one meeting where the listeners were all so quiet that even when asked questions scarcely anyone would speak a word, while at another place an old man with grey hair persisted in disturbing them. On one Lord's Day nearly seventy listened to the Gospel in the morning, and amongst them "quite a number of new faces of old men were to be seen."

KWANJULULA, GARENGANZE.—For about three weeks now I have been going to a near village every morning, teaching the children. I read a little in John's Gospel, sing, and try and teach them a text. In this little service I have been wonderfully helped. Yesterday I had fourteen men and women. Some of them seem to wish to be able to read, but it is very slow work even to get them to learn the letters. Those who recently professed to receive blessing here seem to be going on so far very satisfactorily. It will be a great joy to see them cleaving to God's truth. You will be hearing of the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Bird at Kwanjulula. The change here may strengthen them.—MARY SKINNER.

The Blessed Hope.

My Beloved is unto me as a cluster of camphire in the vineyards of Engedi.—Song of S. i. 14.

I once have tasted Canaan's grapes,
And now I long to go,
Where my dear Lord his vineyard keeps,
And where the clusters grow.

The camphire growing in its native soil! Our Lord Jesus at home in his Father's house! Risen, ascended, glorified! He calls us to be sharers in his joy! "If ye loved Me, ye would rejoice because I said, 'I go unto my Father'" (John xiv. 28). The days of his humiliation are past! The years of his banishment are over!

The head that once was crowned with thorns,
Is crowned with glory now;
A royal diadem adorns
The mighty victor's brow!

The world is the world still. It sees no beauty in Christ! Its cry is the same, "Away with Him, away with Him." The heart that truly loves the Lord would faint, and grow weary in the fight, were it not that the eye of faith looks within the veil, and sees what is unseen. "We see Jesus crowned with glory and honour" (Heb. ii. 9). This becomes a mighty attraction! The soul that has been won by his love presses on to behold his glory, and counts all things but loss for that.

This blessed hope fills the heart with heavenly gladness. The disciples returned to Jerusalem with great joy (Luke xxiv. 52), although their Lord and Master was parted from them, and was no more in the world. They had almost seen the pearly gates opened to receive Him; they knew He was enthroned on high, and coming again to take them to be with Himself. Child of God, these two thoughts will keep your heart bright, however trying the path may be. Let them take full possession.

Let the little while between
In their golden light be seen.

You carry a wondrous secret in your bosom, the secret of his love! What joy, what dignity! to be beloved of God! "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be." We live on the eve of a glad surprise! We expect the return of the One who loves us! Shall all that this poor earth can offer lure us in any forbidden path? One glimpse, Spirit-given, of our absent Lord, throws earth's brightest glories in the shade. We cannot afford to trifle with anything that would hinder this. One message of his Word, illumined by light from on high, brings more gladness to the heart than thousands of gold and silver.

If joy unspeakable be the foretaste, what shall the fulness and fruition be? If we are enjoying our present privileges, and keeping our future destiny in view, we will be able to look down on all the fading vanities of this poor world.

We pass out at the world's wide gate,
Turning our back on all its state.

The danger, the roughness, the length of our journey, are all known to Him whose eye is resting on the pilgrim band. Not one trial can befall us but has been anticipated by the Divine provision! "My grace is sufficient for thee" (2 Cor. xii 9). "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not" (Luke xxii. 32). "My God shall supply all your need" (Phil. iv. 19)

But we wait for his appearing!

He, too, is waiting in long-suffering grace (2 Peter iii. 9).

Sinners, still thy garments touching,
Stay thee in thy coming here.

As the year is closing, we think of many loved ones who cherished the same blessed hope with us. They have been called up higher! Have they been disappointed? Are they the losers? Verily no! "With Christ, which is far better" (Phil. i. 13).

They are still waiting;
Yes, waiting there with Jesus,
Till all are gathered home!
Waiting with the Bridegroom,
Till the bridal day shall come.

"Them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him" (1 Thess. iv. 14). The hour is drawing nigh! He will come forth to meet us (Gen. xlvi. 29). "Now is your salvation nearer than when ye believed."

He who in the hour of sorrow
Bore the curse alone;
I, who through the lonely desert,
Trod where He had gone!

He and I in that bright glory
One deep joy shall share;
Mine, to be for ever with Him,
His that I am there!

We need, as God's dear children, to enter into fellowship with Him concerning the lost ones yet to be gathered in. We also need, as "pilgrims of the homeless heart," to be often breathing the cry, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." So shall we hasten his chariot-wheels, and so shall we be ever with the Lord.

Banchory. B. Campbell.

Adoption.

"And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying Abba, Father."—Galatians iv. 6.

There is, no Scriptural image so full of tenderness as that which represents the Church as a family, and God the Father of his children. This relation is introduced in various ways, and for different purposes, both by our Lord and his inspired followers. It is now designed to inspire confidence in his care for their wants; and then as a test to decide the nature of things around us, for the world is not of the Father. By Paul it is used to show the blessing of freedom from the restraints of the old law; and, as a climax to his argument, he affirms that we obtain the state and breathe the temper of children, and cry from filial love, "Abba, Father." This image of the tender relation which subsists, through Divine grace, between God and his people suggests the following thoughts.

I.—IT PRESENTS A DELIGHTFUL VIEW OF GOD.

There are some aspects of Jehovah which occasionally fill us with solemn amazement, as when He came forth in past ages to punish the iniquitous idolatrous nations, clouds and darkness were round about Him. When the law was given Sinai was moved at his presence, and Moses trembled at the awful signs of supreme holiness and power.

Now, God is revealed as the Father of spirits, and the parent of true believers who come cheerfully into his presence, and feel that they are under the wings and near the heart of infinite love. Our Lord said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me." "To as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God." Unlike the usages of adoption among the Greeks, in which the Greek could adopt only a Greek child, and a Roman could adopt only a Roman child, our Lord throws down the barriers of national separation and invites all apart from the will of man, from blood, or from the will of the flesh, to enter into the hallowed circle and hopes of the Christian family. The first prayer which our Lord taught his apostles begins with "Our Father," which, like the keynote of a strain, preserves its tender and delightful music for those who feel the inspiration of filial love and rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

II.—NOTE THE FORCE OF FILIAL AFFECTION.

There are several aspects of the power of this principle which reveal and illustrate its value in the experience of the Divine family. It is absolutely necessary for discipline which is designed for the improvement of the spiritual life, and for the higher enjoyment of the treasures and resources of the Father's love. Infinite wisdom never prefers pain as an agent in our instruction; but there are states of mind when nothing short of suffering will suffice, like the purifying fire, to prepare the soul for present and eternal peace. The idea of the Father's love soothes and silences, or draws forth the courageous expression, "In very faithfulness Thou hast afflicted me."

Further, there are new discoveries of the Father's love which make the past experiences like the first lessons in the school of Christ. There are lights which stream from the history of eminent believers; and from the residence and cherishing power of the Holy Spirit, who makes his home in the Christian's soul. There are Sabbath calm, voices of praise, the sacred impressions which come from prayer, the inspiration of Christian sympathy: all tend to give force to this filial love and make it so strong that "many waters cannot quench nor floods drown" this immortal principle.

III.—IT CREATES INTEREST IN THE FAMILY.

The idea of "the household of faith" suggests the fact that believers form a divine association of which the earthly family is the image and representation. Divine grace always inclines to seek sociality and brotherhood. One of the sacred laws published by our Lord for the use of the children is mutual forgiveness; for offences come from variety of natural temper, diversity of office, and temporal conditions, which often lead to misunderstandings and some alienation. There must be forgiveness, otherwise the offender will suffer, the family bond will be cruelly ruptured, and the Divine Spirit will be grieved, and look in regretful silence upon the soul which once felt the cheerful inspiration of his presence and the vigour which results from his gracious co-operation. This interest in the family embraces kindly regard for the poor of the Church.

IV.—IT IS THE BEGINNING OF A DIVINE FUTURE.

It is with a kind of rapture that John exclaims, "Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him." Our heavenly Father works with a divine order and sequence, both in the regions of nature and the invaluable processes of grace. He prepared men for his service by a divine education, and therefore David, the captain of Israel, was taught by a shepherd's life and an early training to become the king of the chosen people. With regard to the great mystery of the future life, we must be content with the images supplied by the words of our Lord, and the glimpses afforded by the experience and writings of the Apostles. Before the Christian soul can reach and enjoy the promised consummation, he must pass through the valley of the shadow of death; according to the pictorial representation employed by Paul, he must go forth from the tabernacle, or tent, in which he has hitherto found shelter and occasional repose. It is by death that believers enter into rest, and receive from the Father possession of the "inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away." J. S. Bright, D.D.

Dorking.

REV. PETER MACKENZIE.

By Dr. BENJAMIN GREGORY.

The well-known preacher and lecturer whose portrait we give to-day, was born November 11, 1824, at the Spital of Glenshee, in the Highlands of Scotland, but the family migrated southward when he was about three years of age. He was converted to God at the age of twenty-five, at the mining village of Haswell, Durham, under the preaching of the late munificent philanthropist, Mr. Henry Reed. He worked as a miner until he went forth to preach the Gospel of God. He had but the scanty schooling of his class, but as soon as he began to proclaim and to press home the truth which had proved to him the power of God unto salvation, his personality and his preaching told mightily upon his fellows. He was admitted as a probationer for the Wesleyan ministry in 1858.

We can never forget the effect produced upon the Conference and upon our own mind and heart by the account which was given of him by the superintendent minister who recommended him for the ministry. As he was married and had passed, by several years, the normal age of reception into the Methodist pastorate, and as his want of education was conspicuous, there was naturally a strong demur to his reception. To appoint him to the pastoral charge without further training seemed quite out of the question; to admit a married man into the "Theological Institute" seemed equally impracticable. But such was the description of the quality and the results of his preaching and of his wayside witnessing for Christ; such the demonstration that he possessed in an extraordinary degree the three indispensable credentials for the Methodist ministry, grace, gifts, and fruit, that every heart was melted, every eye was moistened, and every doubt dispelled. He was enthusiastically accepted, and was designated "for the Institution and home work."

The first time we ever saw Peter Mackenzie was in August, 1859. We singled him out from amongst the many thousands that were packed into the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, at a grand religious gathering. We had never seen or heard any description of his personal appearance, and had only formed the ideal one naturally makes of a man of marked mental and spiritual characteristics and of a striking individuality. We had smiled and wept at extracts from his sermons in a local newspaper. But gazing from the platform on that vast mass of human beings, our eyes were arrested by the figure of a young man below the middle size, who stood in one of the crowded aisles in the body of the hall. His most striking peculiarity was the almost superhuman whiteness and incandescence of his cleanly-shaven and strangely mobile and expressive face, and the gleam of his enthusiastic eyes. He was clad all in his Sunday best, a suit of pulpit-black; but, like himself, of a decided country cut. We were too familiar with the native pitman's shape and stature, and the way in which his arms hung on to his shoulders, not to recognise a miner.

No sooner did the chairman, Dr. Waddy, begin to wax warm and animated with his theme than the well-dressed miner began to ejaculate, in the short but shrill responses which at once relieve and heighten the excitement of revival prayer meetings in loud-voiced village populations. We said to ourselves:—"That is Peter Mackenzie." And afterwards his own lips confirmed the intuition.

Mr. Mackenzie's first appointment was to Burnley. Here he had ample room for all his strength. He found himself translated from a rural neighbourhood to a large and flourishing well-built town with many thriving industries. He had to take his turn as one of the regular ministers in a handsome, spacious chapel, filled by thoughtful congregations, accustomed to superior preaching, and consisting of well-educated families, and well-waged working men, with their neatly and nicely dressed wives and daughters. In the country places, however, and within walking distance of the town, there was a mining population, impressible and excitable as himself. It was inevitable that he should be immensely popular. Crowds followed him from chapel to chapel, drawn by the freshness of his preaching, his utter unconventionality, his homely and home-coming language, the spell of his vernacular, and his native eloquence and simple earnestness, which brought the Gospel to their "business and bosoms," to their factories, their mines, and cottages. Happily for him, he was under the direction of one of the most genial and appreciative of men, yet shrewd and practical withal, the late Rev. Joseph Lawton. Yet this, his first year of ministry, was a testing time in more than one respect.

His next appointment—Monmouth—was another contrast. Here he found himself in an antique, historic little country town, about one-tenth the size of Burnley. He had, however, in the old villages and the new neighbourhoods, which formed part of his hilly circuit, a swarming and responsive mining population to exploit upon. After two years' work at Monmouth, he was transferred to the pleasant, quiet, sweetly-situated Wiltshire town of Melksham, where he spent three prosperous and happy years. In 1863 he was ordained. His replies to the doctrinal questions propounded to him by the keen and learned chairman, during his preliminary examination at the district synod, showed him to be still much more of the revivalist than the theologian, and by their impulsive practicality perceptibly disturbed the centre of gravity of that solemn dignitary, and the reverend seniors, his co-assessors. But his soundness in the faith was as unquestionable as his strength and zeal.

From Melksham he removed to Gateshead, in his former county, and he has ever since flourished in his proper habitat, in the midst of the dense population of some large industrial centre; having spent his three years' terms of itinerant ministry successively at Gateshead, Sunderland, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Leeds (St. Peter's), Leeds (Meadow-lane), Bradford (Shipley), and Dewsbury. He settled at the last-named placed on retiring from the regular work of the pastorate, and there he still resides.

(Photograph by Mr. G. Ridsdale Cleare, Lower Clapton,)

Mr. Mackenzie's work is, like his personality, quite unique. His peculiar mission has been determined by his peculiar gifts. As he, humbly and nobly, imitated no man, so he has manfully and wisely defied any man to mimic him. He might safely offer a thousand pounds to anyone who could infringe his patent, or could pick his lock. Alike his mother-wit and his gracious child-likeness have obliged him to be just Peter Mackenzie and no one else at all. He makes effective use of his underground experiences for the illustration of Divine truth: for example, in the thrilling incident of the one man who had a light in a fearful mining accident, and how the rest all groped their way to him.

Mr. Mackenzie had not been in the ministry for many years before he found a subsidiary outlet for his superfluous energy and exuberant imagination and facetiousness—that of the popular lecturer and elocutionist. As his chosen subjects are chiefly Scripture characters, such as Moses, Samson, Saul, etc., his lectures are, in reality, but a mere free-and-easy form of homiletic exposition, in which he can give a bolder sweep to the gyrations of his genius, and an ampler play to his sportive and audacious humour. He can thus shut off steam, and give a vastly less objectionable indulgence to startling and grotesque expressions which, in his earlier ministry, occurred too often in his preaching and even in his public prayers. In his earlier lectures, it must be confessed, for instance that on Samson, he made to tingle "ears polite" by idioms and idiosyncrasies which had been better left at the pit-mouth, if not at the pit-bottom. But he has left all this behind.

His lecture on "Moses" is of special merit. Its charm and value consist mainly in its shrewd, piquant, practical rendering, in terms of the present time, the lessons of the life of that heroic man of God, enlivened by good-natured daring pleasantries. His recitation of Mrs. Alexander's noble lyric on the Death of Moses was, as we heard it in London, an admirable specimen of refined, tender, tasteful elocution. For sensibility and delicacy of tone and touch it might enrol him in the same moral class as the Mackenzie who wrote "The Man of Feeling."

In his successive "circuits" Mr. Mackenzie has been much beloved, and his sayings and doings are cherished memories in them all. He did much to compensate for his frequent absence by assiduous, systematic, bright, and cheery household visitation whilst he was at home. But his maxim seems to be—the whole country is my circuit. He is well known to and a great favourite with the railway employés of the land. They like his beaming, honest face, his bonhomie, and his kindly genial chat. He has the blessedness of them "who sow beside all waters," being in the habit of accosting pleasantly the passers-by. He seems to have laid to heart Archbishop Trench's precept:—

> I say to thee, do thou repeat
> To every man whom thou may'st meet,
> In lane, highway, or busy street,
> That he and thou and all men move
> Under a canopy of love
> As broad as the blue sky above.

Mr. Mackenzie is a close reader, especially of books that are making a stir. By temperament and constitution one of the most mercurial and irrepressible of mortals, he is, by second birth, in any case, a real gentleman in feeling and in sentiment.

NOTES ABOUT RUSSIA.

Great hopes are centred on the young Czar Nicolas II., but as yet there is no sign of their being realised with regard to the banished Stundists. In the manifesto which liberated a large portion of the prison population no mention is made of those who have been banished and exiled by administrative measures by order of the Czar. They have not had the benefit of the law, which might have declared them not guilty, and now they are omitted from the list of those who benefit by Imperial grace. Yea, more than this. In a Government paper a decree has been printed which was signed by Alexander III., and now sanctioned by his successor, which declares the sect of the Stundists to be a pernicious sect, both for the Church and the State, and that measures are to be taken to exterminate them. Their meetings for prayer are strictly prohibited.

It is to be hoped that the young Czar is ignorant of what he has sanctioned, and that he may soon have his eyes opened to the real state of things, and then grant liberty to our sorely-tried brethren. The young Czar seems to inspire with confidence all who approach him, and he is enthusiastically greeted by the people whenever he appears in public. Much prayer is called for on behalf of the vast Russian Empire, that the light of the glorious Gospel may be no longer hindered from shining and enlightening its many millions of people. Some of the prisons are half emptied by the Imperial Manifesto; an official in Petersburg discharged in one day 620 prisoners, and sent them to their homes. In spite of all prohibition and oppression, the Gospel spreads and proves its power. There are many open doors and eager hearers where opportunities are given.

THE ISLINGTON CLERICAL MEETING is called for Tuesday, January 15, in the "Bishop Wilson" Memorial Hall, Church-street, Islington, N. The programme issued by Rev. W. H. Barlow, the convenor, is as follows:—General subject.—"The Evangelisation of Mankind—Obligations and Methods." Morning Session (10.30-1.30). — "Evangelisation Amongst the Jews," the Ven. Archdeacon Perowne and Rev. A. Lukyn Williams; "Evangelisation in Heathen and Mohammedan Lands," Rev. Dr. Moule (Bishop in Mid-China), Rev. A. J. Robinson, and Rev. F. S. Webster. Afternoon session (2.30-5).—"Evangelisation at Home," the Dean of Norwich, Canon Eliot, and Canon M'Cormick. At 4.30 Prebendary Webb-Peploe will summarise the proceedings of the day.

THE SECRET OF A HAPPY DAY.

I have seen a book advertised, "The Secret of a Happy Life." I have not read it, so that I do not know whether the writer has discovered the same secret of happiness as myself. But I do claim to have discovered the secret of a happy day; and since life only consists of an aggregate of days, the secret of a happy day will also, of necessity, be the secret of a happy life.

Having made the discovery, I do not seek, like so many human empyricists, to keep the secret to myself, rather would I share it with every child of God, so that they and I might rejoice together. "These things write we unto you," says John, "that your joy may be full"; and I have the same aspiration and purpose in penning these lines.

What then is this mighty secret I am about to divulge, a secret so potent that it will, if acted on, avail to change the whole course of a life, and transform the character of him who learns and acts upon it? It is, like most human remedies, an exceeding simple one—so simple, in fact, that I doubt not many of my readers will scarcely accredit it with the mighty results which I claim for its adoption. "If the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it?" is as true at the close of the nineteenth century as it was in Elisha's days, and the very simplicity of the remedy enjoined may now, as then, militate against people adopting it; nevertheless, let us not on that account defer the revelation of it any longer, but let us make known to all that the secret of a happy day is to BEGIN THE DAY WITH PRAISE TO GOD.

Yes, the very moment your eyes open, and you regain your faculties, commence by praising God. And when you have commenced, you will find you have to go on. It's surprising what a lot of things you will find that you must praise Him for. To begin with, there are the poor folks round at the hospital, how they have tossed and turned, while you have quietly slept! There's that poor white-faced mother, who has watched all night beside the bed of her only child, the terrible struggle for life, and, just as the first dim light of morning broke, has perhaps seen the struggle cease, and the little one's spirit depart, while the happy voices of your little ones are heard upstairs. How you thank God for them! Why, only yesterday, you were quite put out about it, and said, "Bother those children, what a noise they make; I wonder what we pay nurses for if it isn't to keep children quiet?" Quiet? Thank God they are not quiet: thank God for their happy hearts and lusty lungs. Then there's—but why should I go on to suggest things to be thankful for? Why, when once you begin, your thankful thoughts will come jostling each other, as if they were each jealous of expressing themselves first in praise. And so, having begun the day with praise, you'll go on throughout the day with praise, and, just as you are falling off to sleep, you'll say, "What a happy day! Thank God for another happy day."

Yes, what a lot indeed we all have to be thankful for. Did I ever tell you the story of

TAY-KETTLE BROTH?

I was revisiting a Devonshire village where dwelt an old saint of close on ninety, who had begun life as "parish apprentice," had lived hard till past labour, and at the end found herself dependent on three-and-sixpence a week, allowed her from the poor rates. Not a very enviable existence, you say? Wasn't it? Well, perhaps not; nevertheless, this old saint was always praising the Lord. Now, I was rather curious to know how body and soul were kept together on such a pittance, so I called in one day to get the mystery explained.

"Mrs. ——," I said, "I've come to see you, as I want you to tell me how you manage to live on three-and six a week."

"Well," replied the old lady, meditatively; "uz don't live very riotous, but there's tay-kettle broth."

"There's what?" asked I, for her answer seemed not to describe anything I had ever read of in Francatelli.

"Tay-kettle broth," she replied, evidently astonished at my crass stupidity.

"But what is tay-kettle broth?" I queried.

"Tay-kettle broth is," replied the old lady, "well, it's tay-kettle broth."

As this statement seemed incontrovertible, I put another question, "How d'ye make it?"

"Well, you takes some bread"—and she paused, so as to allow me to master that fact—"and then you take the tay-kettle, and you pour some boiling water on the bread, and that's tay-kettle broth. Ah, yes, uz has tay-kettle broth, praise the dear Lord."

"Praise the dear Lord!" Why, I was dining a little time back at a house where I have occasionally dined for thirty years, and they would as soon think of omitting saying what is termed "grace" in that house as omitting their forks. And this is the "grace," forsooth: "For what we are going to receive, may and after dinner it is varied by, "For what we have received, may the Lord make us truly thankful." Twice a day, for lunch and dinner, is the above formality expected; but curiously enough they never say it at breakfast; they somehow or other don't seem to feel that they need to be made truly thankful for that, though anybody who has happened to miss his breakfast will find it a very inconvenient meal to do without. Well, when we sat down, I ventured to say to the lady of the house, "Has your prayer never yet been answered?"

THE LORD MAKE US TRULY THANKFUL";

"What prayer?" she replied, rather surprised.

"Why," I said, "I can remember you praying to be made truly thankful for a great many years, and I can't make out how it is that you never seem to have been made truly thankful yet."

A NEW SONG.

Alas! how little thanks God gets for all his benefits! "He hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God," said David. But if God had put the new song in, David took care to let it out; and what was the result? "Many shall see it and fear, and shall trust in the Lord." We shan't convert men by going about looking miserable. The devil can make men miserable; our God delights to make us and to see us happy, and nothing makes the world more miserable than to see us so; they know in their hearts that we have got what they have not: they see, and fear, and trust in the Lord.

I remember very well—it's fourteen years ago now—when the Lord put the new song in my mouth, and how I used to go out into the fields and sing, "Happy day, happy day, when Jesus washed my sins away." I never had much of a voice, and I don't think that if Mr. Henry Leslie had heard me he would have liked it, and I'm quite sure he would not have put me into his choir; but I liked it very much, and, what is better, I believed the Lord liked it too, for He had put me into his choir, and put the song into my mouth; and does He not say, "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings Thou hast perfected praise"?

But I have got away from the dear old saint on the Devonshire moors. Having ascertained what she chiefly lived on, I proceeded to ask her how she managed to get fuel and boots ("butes," she called them) and clothes. As to the latter, she said, "Bless ee, uz don't buy much clothes; this gownd was given me by Mrs. —— years ago" (I daren't say how many years, as you would not believe I was a faithful historian if I did), "and this petticoat," and she rolled up her dress and displayed it with pride, "was given me by your missus last year, bless her." And here let us pause to remark that it has been said that curses, like doves, come home to roost; and petticoats seem to have the same instinct; at any rate, the blessings they evoke on the donors do. If anyone, therefore, with the money to spare, reads these lines, and has a little money to invest, invest it in a petticoat, and give it to some rheumatic old lady, and it will bring you in good interest, for many a time when her rheumatism merely gives her a bit of a twinge, instead of laying her aside as it used to do, she'll invoke a blessing on your head, and the blessing will straightway come home to roost.

"And this, and this, and this," pursued the old saint; but over these numerous garments we will draw the veil. Suffice it to say that each had its history, and brought up a recollection of the donor, and a blessing on the dear Lord, and I rose to go, having learnt a lifelong lesson as to gratitude from that aged saint, who henceforth figured in my eyes as some fallen forest monarch whose age can be discerned from the number of its rings, for, assuredly, her age could be pretty nearly arrived at by a study of her clothes.

"What then is the end of the matter?" Just this: begin by praising the Lord. "Yes, but that's only the beginning, and we want to hear the end." Well, it's the same as the beginning; listen to David on the subject, "Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, they will be still praising thee." "Ah yes, but that's all very well. David was never troubled as I am, he never was worried with anxiety as to how he was going to pay next quarter's rent." Perhaps not; he lived rent free in the wilderness of Judæa, no doubt, but if he hadn't your particular cares he had plenty of other anxieties, I take it. And what does he do with his anxieties? Listen, he proceeds, "Who passing through the valley of weeping, make it a well; the rain also filleth the pools." Turn your tears, as David did his, into a well, and you'll soon experience the gracious fillings of God's Spirit in your poor dried-up heart. "But somehow or other I've got into such a dead state, and I don't feel a bit like praising. I should like to praise, but I don't know how to begin." Do you remember what Paul did when some of the Hebrew Christians seemed in danger of drawing back? He showed them the great cloud of witnesses, and drew their attention to what they had been called on to pass through. And this is

A SPLENDID TONIC AND RESTORATIVE.

Get the life of John Wykliffe and read that. Look at him there as he is stricken down and seemingly at the point of death. See those priests approach, and beg him in view of his impending dissolution to retract; look at him as he makes a mighty effort, and raises himself in his bed, and thunders out, "I shall not die, but live, and declare the villainies of you priests." See him with the whole world arrayed against him, going straight on in the power of his God. Or read of John Huss, who read Wykliffe's books and followed in his steps; or of Luther, who followed both, or of Whitefield, or Wesley, or Christmas Evans, and ere you have read ten pages you shall be on your knees praising God, and asking pardon for being such a poor flabby ingrate as you are.

Such, then, is my prescription, if you would know the secret of a happy day. J. F.

A REVERIE.

The pulse of Time beats out another fleeting day;
Another parting year.
And once again we rest upon our oars,
And cast faith's anchor in the boundless sea
Of life's oblivion.
Thou hast been a refuge for us, and provided shelter
From many a storm that threaten'd
To overthrow our fragile little bark;
How good Thou art!
Thy love is passing strange, thy providence is boundless,
We will not have another to usurp thy rule;
Pilot us safely through the coming year,
We'll give Thee all the glory,
And laud Thee with more grateful praise,
On life's eternal shore.

Alfred Waller.

DUBLIN DEAF AND DUMB ASSOCIATION has for its object the propagation of the Gospel among a specially needy section of the community. Being unable to benefit by the ordinary services of the Church, the deaf and dumb require a special provision addressed to the eye, which in their case is the only available avenue to the mind. The finger and sign language furnishes such a provision. The twenty-third annual report gives the text of an address delivered in the sign language, by Rev. M. F. G. Hewson, missionary and secretary, who may be addressed, Room 21, Metropolitan Hall, Lower Abbey-street, Dublin.

OUT IN THE COLD.

AN EXPERIENCE.

Sir,—I have been much interested in the letters bearing upon this subject in THE CHRISTIAN. Having been myself "out in the cold," perhaps some of your readers may like to hear the actual experiences undergone under those circumstances.

More than forty years ago my father felt that the High Church teaching in our parish church was such that he could not permit his family to attend there any longer. There was no other place of worship in the village, but we drove three miles off to an Evangelical Church. The poor people, however, were left destitute of true teaching, and my father started a cottage lecture in a schoolroom built in his own grounds on Sunday afternoons. This small beginning has grown year by year. A Scripture reader was appointed, a larger room was taken at a carpenter's. Services were held morning and evening, with afternoon school; the Scripture reader was ordained, and a Nonconformist chapel has succeeded to the carpenter's shop, where ever since the light of Gospel truth has been held aloft.

But all this time the course of events did not run smoothly. At the little meetings in our own garden two men, who are still living, were converted. Shortly after, the Church party contrived to get one of them turned out from his plot of land, as he would not consent to attend the parish church, and great efforts were made to injure the trade of the other. Mr. Forster's Act was not passed in those days, and my Sunday-school children were forbidden to attend the National Schools during the week, which meant that the poor little things had to walk three miles each way to school in the neighbouring town.

As time passed on, my father felt a conscientious objection to driving on Sunday, and we used to attend the parish church of a neighbouring village once in the day, a kind friend allowing us to share his family pew. At a parish meeting this gentleman was actually censured for this act of kindness, and it was stated "that Mr. —— and his family should be sent back to their own parish." Our friend, however, took a different view, and we continued to use his pew in the morning for some years, attending the Nonconformist service in the evening. It is apparent that we did not separate entirely from the Church of England; indeed, when not residing in the country (we were only there in the summer months), we attended an Evangelical ministry in the Church of England, and took an active part in all religious work connected with our church. In spite of this we were boycotted to a large extent, when we were in the country our immediate neighbours either only exchanging a formal call once a year, or not calling at all. A clerical friend having promised to help us with a penny reading, the rector wrote a complaint to the Bishop, who, in his turn, wrote to our friend requesting him to desist. As a matter of course, our poor people were cut off from the Church charities.

So much for the darker side; what can be said of a brighter nature? It would take too much space to tell of all the work done for the Master in this unpretending way; of joyous sick-beds, drunkards converted, young people now growing old, first led in those days to devote their powers to the Master's service. I will only add that a special blessing has rested upon our own large family. We have been marvellously preserved from the dangers of both Ritualism and Rationalism, and have been all permitted to grow up, as I fully consider, real, true believers, trusting simply to our Saviour's merits and to none beside, not altogether a common experience, if I may judge by other families of my acquaintance. Were not these results well worth all the inconveniences mentioned above, even if multiplied ten-fold?

I should like to say that no one need hope to escape persecution by proclaiming himself a member of the Church of England if he takes any decided step in opposition to his rector, and the more Ritualistic the Church the more keen I have always found to be the social ostracism of those who come out from such teaching. But if our King suffered shame and contempt for us, shall we be found unwilling to bear even a small cross for Him?

Perhaps I ought to add also that when we were no longer strong enough to take the long steep walk to church in the next parish, we attended the Nonconformist service on Sunday mornings as well as in the evenings. We also united there round the table of our Lord for many years, without feeling in any way debarred from attending any Evangelical ministry in the Church of England when in town for the winter, or anywhere else, where we could enjoy such a privilege. H. S.

RABBI LICHTENSTEIN'S "SECRET."

By Mrs. BARON.

RABBI LICHTENSTEIN has written a new pamphlet, the seventh which has issued from his pen. His writings are, like himself, thoroughly unique in the history of Jewish missions, and for familiarising Jewish readers with the wonderful Person and work of Jesus of Nazareth, the whole series of brochures can scarcely be over-estimated. The title of this last pamphlet is, "Ein Geheimniss aus dem Talmud" (A Secret from the Talmud). It is, like its predecessors, published in German, but for the benefit of those friends who take a warm interest in the Rabbi and his testimony, I will give a general outline of its contents. The Rabbi quotes very largely from Scripture, weaving in the New with the Old Testament in such a way as must lead a candid Jewish reader, to whom the New Testament is yet unknown, to desire to study it for himself.

"The Secret from the Talmud" only oozes out at the end of the pamphlet, which commences with large quotations from James iii. 1-18, and a very similar passage from the Talmud, on the evil power of the tongue. On this subject the Rabbi dilates, describing the baleful influence it exercises among his own people. He paints in dark colours the consequences of the word "Kofer," an epithet of bitterest reproach, by which they stigmatise one who, having sought relief from his burden of sin, and put his trust in Jesus the Messiah, has become to them an outcast. "Clothe thee in mourning; bow in shame thy head, grown grey in honour; lament aloud and bitterly, thou injured, much-to-be-commiserated father, for thou hast given thine honoured name to a 'Kofer'! to a son dead while living, lost to God, to himself, and to thee,—a son who has grown up to shame thee by the sweat of thy countenance. Thou hast reared a self-willed, disobedient son, who only broods evil and indulges wicked desires; who mocks at virtue and boasts himself in vice, a child of destruction, whose name God will blot out of Israel and from under heaven."

The Rabbi well shows what a thraldom this power of the tongue exercises among his people. By a reference to the introduction to the Jewish Daily Prayers, when it is said, "Man should be always God-fearing, even in secret, always confessing the truth and speaking the truth as it is in his heart," he invites his people to reconsider the question truthfully, as before God. He traces the distress of a soul conscious of sin and seeking after God, at last finding which convicts but cannot help him, in Jesus and his Atonement, and asks, "Is he therefore a Kofer, an apostate, a renegade, fallen from the faith of his ancestors, disloyal to the God of his fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? Is he on this account dead to his parents and lost to his family?" From this he leads his readers to Christ Himself, and asks, "Did not Christ take root in the being of the Jewish people as a tree planted by the water-courses, like an oak of a thousand years, rooted deep and immovably, from Moses on through all the prophets? Their predictions cover his mission and Person. He is their true fulfilment, so that the arteries of Judaism, rightly understood, are concentrated in Him as the rivers meet in the ocean."

DELIVERY FROM THE LAW,

The Rabbi next takes up Mark xii. 28-31, the answer of Christ to the question, Which is the greatest commandment? and the manner in which the Lord links with love to God love to man. Also He shows how Christ was Himself the embodiment of this Divine double law. "Love to God and love to man go forth from Christ as a mighty stream from Eden, bringing life, and fruitfulness, and blessing to all races upon earth; through Him the blessing of Abraham is come to all, and upon all them that believe on Him, and the light of this spiritual sun irradiates all who live and love God, and they also who resist his illumination and do not shelter under his wings, experience the effects of his influence. That which is true of the lights of the firmament of heaven, that they shine on earth and rule day and night, is true also of the Light and Illuminator of man. He effects in the soul of men spiritual growth and prosperity, light, life, and peace, and, as He proclaimed it to be his calling to manifest the Divine, so have his life and influence proved that which is Divine—love, mercy, and pity—to be its axis. Love to God and love to man, divinely faithful, fearless, and true, shine through his whole life, influence, and work, on to his marvellous vicarious death, and yet works as the quickening sun to encourage the soul of the bowed-down, and to comfort the heart of the oppressed. For it is the noblest revenge of truth that she compels her enemies, whether directly or indirectly, to serve her, to sun themselves in her splendour, to warm at her fire" (Ps. lxxxv. 12, 13; Is. ix. 6, 7).

Of the Divinity of Christ, the Rabbi writes: "His life was rooted in God, full of mystery; he lived and moved in God only. Who can express in mere words his being and his unique relation to God? As the sunbeams to the sun, as the streams in the ocean, as the two silver trumpets of Convocation made from one piece, as the golden candlestick of the sanctuary with its stem and blossoms beaten from one piece of gold, as the countenance on which God permitted Moses to behold, so is Jesus one with God, inseparably united with his heavenly Father. One above all in his mercy and gentleness, in his unbounded love and pity, in his words and teaching, miracles and activities; and as 'the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork,' so has revealed and expressed the invisible being of God on earth, so that now He is known and worshipped by the peoples; 'The nations rejoice and are glad, for the Lord has done great things for them.'" Moses and Christ, Old and New Testaments, stand in sweet inseparable harmony one with the other. Christ has not destroyed the Sinaitic law, but has attained its end in his obedience (Rom. x. 4).

JESUS, BY HIS GLORIOUS COUNTENANCE,

Speaking of the present age as one in which states the most distant make alliance for mutual defence, and when all theories of religion are analysed and sifted, the Rabbi says: "Now that the Bible, Old and New Testaments, has become the world-wide book of humanity, shall Israel continue to think only of that which separates him from Christianity? Shall he not at last recognise that the Gospel has grown from the soil of his own history, and is its ripe fruit; and that in Christ, whose blood was shed, the blood of the covenant to all peoples, the ideal of Moses and the prophets is realised? All men, without distinction of colour, class, or race, may become children of one Father, brothers of one house, members of one body, vessels of one Spirit, one and united in God, the true centre of peoples and nations, through the true guide to God, the one mediator between God and man, Jesus Christ. If spurious Christianity must fall when Israel turns to Christ and Christ comes to Israel, how will it fare with the Jewish Talmud, which contains so many beautiful pearls of morals and ethics, but in its creed and principles of righteousness is in opposition to the Gospel? What shall become of the time-honoured Talmud? I will tell you a secret from the Talmud:—

'The sons of Rabbi Chijas, Judah and Hezekiah, sat at the festal board by the side of their Rabbi, silent and restrained. Then the Rabbi ordered a goblet of strong wine to be passed to them, that they might be induced to speak. Cheered by the wine, they commenced with the words: "The Son of David, the Messiah, will not come until in Babylon and the land of Israel, have ceased to be, and their authority has suffered loss, as it is expressly stated in Is. viii. 14: 'He shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel.'" Then the Rabbi exclaimed in anger, "Children, by your words you cast thorns in my eyes!" But their father Chijas answered soothingly: "Rabbi, do not blame my sons for this disclosure. 'Wine' has the same numerical value as the word 'secret,' the number seventy; and it is well known that when 'wine' is in, the 'secret' is out." This is indeed a remarkable passage to be found in the Talmud, as it proves that some of the Rabbis have realised that Talmudic Judaism is ephemeral, and must cease to be of weight before the appearance of the Messiah.

BOTH SCHOOLS OF TALMUDIC LEARNING,

Copies of the pamphlet in German can be had from the hon. secretary of the Council for Rabbi Lichtenstein, David Baron, 23, Grove-road, Highgate-road, N.W.

AN ISLE OF MAN MISSION.

THIS Island diocese has for some time past had the advantage of being under the supervision of a succession of good and earnest bishops, who have done their best to encourage and promote evangelising work in the parishes under their charge. Fifteen years ago the lamented Bishop Rowley Hill inaugurated a general mission in the town of Douglas, the fruits of which are to be discovered still, and indeed a good many have come forward during the last fortnight testifying to the good that they then received. The present bishop, feeling that the time was ripe for another similar effort, arranged with his clergy for, first, a mission for the Peel Rural Deanery, and next a mission for the large town of Douglas. The country missions and that at Peel were held a fortnight earlier than those at Douglas, and there is reason to hope that considerable good was done.

In Douglas the work began with the present month. Six parishes joined. Onchan, the mother parish of part of Douglas to the north, was supplied by Mr. Rogers, of Cambridge; St. Thomas's obtained the services of Canon Bullock, of Leeds; St. George's was undertaken by Rev. J. B. Madden, of St. Luke's, Liverpool; St. Barnabas was served by Rev. W. Hay Aitken; and St. Matthew's by Rev. Wilmot Buxton; while the other mother parish on the south, Kirk-Braddon, had Rev. W. Hayton for its missioner. Rev. Jas. Stephens worked among the children and young people, and after Mr. Madden's departure took up the work at St. George's. At each of the town churches there have been good, in some cases very large, congregations, and the interest has been widely diffused. Mr. Madden from the first gained a strong hold on the interest and sympathy of a large number of busy men who came day by day throughout the first week in increasing numbers to hear the brief and pointed addresses that he delivered. Indeed, the interest was so great that as Mr. Madden could only stay till the beginning of the second week, Mr. Aitken consented at once to go on with these services for another week, and the interest suffered no abatement throughout. The clergy of St. George's are much rejoiced at the manifest signs of a very considerable blessing which they are discovering all around them. Whole families have been turned, it is hoped, from sin or worldliness to God, and Mr. Stephens's work amongst the children and young people has been most promising. The work at St. Barnabas, too, has been of a very cheering character. Night by night large congregations have been gathered here, culminating in an enormous crowd on the last Sunday night, when the church (reputed to be the largest religious building in the island, and said to hold 1500) was filled as no one ever remembered seeing it filled before, the congregations crowding the aisles as well as the seats. So many remained to the after-meeting that Mr. Aitken felt constrained, as he put it, to deal with all collectively as he would have dealt with one individual. It was a most solemn season, and one that it is hoped will never be forgotten by many of those that were present. Subsequently he invited the anxious to meet him in the topmost gallery of the church, and much interesting work followed there.

One of the most notable gatherings of the mission was the meeting for men only, on the second Saturday of the mission at the end of the first week. Canon Bullock was expected to be one of the speakers, but judging that two speeches would be more effective than a larger number, he withdrew, and left the speaking to Mr. Aitken and Mr. Madden, with the Bishop in the chair. Bishop Straton dealt with the lamentable indifferentism, which would seem to be the most discouraging feature in the moral and religious condition of the Island. Unfortunately it is not singular in this. Mr. Madden followed with a very stirring speech on the incompleteness of all life without the spiritual element. An address from Mr. Aitken, which was listened to with deep attention, brought the most interesting meeting to a close, and it is hoped clenched the nail. There was a grand muster of men in the huge hall, commonly called the pavilion, some estimating it at 1200 or 1300.

The Mission now closing will, it is believed, bear very favourable comparison with its predecessor in 1879, whether it be judged by the unanimity of the clergy, or the numbers attending, or the apparent results; this is surely an encouraging fact in these days, when familiarity with such efforts has so completely robbed them of their novelty. Mr. Aitken many testimonies that have been given during his stay to the work of his venerated father, carried on nearly sixty years ago. His memory amongst the Manx folk after all these years is indeed still green, and numbers came to hear the son of Robert Aitken, or "Passon Atkins" as he used to be called, for his father's sake, rather than for his own.

A FULL REWARD.

"I SHALL be quite satisfied if I may only just cross the threshold of Paradise."

What! satisfied and yet no abundant entrance? Satisfied with the loss (through carelessness and negligence) of great and eternal rewards!

Satisfied with a starless crown. Satisfied that Jesus' eye should sadly rest on only "hay and stubble," to be consumed and burnt, instead of building on his foundation, enduring "gold, silver, and precious stones!"

"Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward."

A good clergyman thus wrote, "It is much the fashion, I know, in our days to put aside and to depreciate the doctrine of the Christian reward. It looks to some people like a sort of reliance on our own works and attainments, but who that knows the Bible can for a moment doubt it?"

There will be hereafter different degrees of glory, just as "one star differeth from another in glory."

A godly man, well read in Scripture, once remarked that he believed it would be found by and by that all God's dealings were based on the principle of retribution.

"We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ." Why must the saints appear? There is "no condemnation"; Jesus has completely atoned for their sins, and delivered them from guilt and its punishment, and it is written of the redeemed, "they shall not come into judgment" (John v. 24, Revised Version). But they must appear before that judgment seat to have their rewards awarded. Not "a cup of cold water," given for his sake, shall then lose its reward.

A darling little girl, about three years old, was one day sitting beside me very busily cobbling (baby fashion) an old rag all crumpled up in her wee hand, when suddenly she turned round, and very sweetly and earnestly, with a far-away look in her eyes, asked me, "Does God love to look at my pretty little stitches?"

Then she continued her work of love so joyfully, because she was giving pleasure to our kind Father in heaven, who certainly accepted the motive that actuated the work. The smallest deed, if love underlies it, is noted down in his book of remembrance, and shall not lose its reward. "I have to scrub the floors," writes a gentleman who was tenderly nurtured and brought up in the lap of luxury; but even that work is ennobled when done for Jesus' sake.

We spent some time in apartments at Brighton, where the maid of all work, like most of the lodging-house "slaveys," had to work hard morning, noon, and night—no holidays, no variety, no recreation—one day exactly like another, in its unvarying, dull, monotonous routine. This poor young woman went to a mission service held by Rev. E. A. Stuart, now at St. Matthew's, Bayswater. There she heard the hymn sung, "What a friend we have in Jesus." It came home to her heart, and so did the words of the preacher. She yielded herself to Jesus, and He filled her heart with peace and joy. A few days afterwards she thus wrote to her mother, trying to draw her to the Saviour she had found: "Oh, my dear mother! if you could only see the brightness and blessings of each day as I do, I am sure you would say, 'Yes, I will come.'" Brightness and blessings in such a life of drudgery! All her work was done as "unto the Lord," and it all seemed joyous now, for she was drawing "water out of the wells of salvation."

"It will be peace and joy in doing God's will, whether that will be carrying coals or saving souls."

God does not measure man's work by the great results that flow from it, but He looks to the motive that actuates and underlies the deed; the motive determines its worth. Let us see that our works are never done for self-inflation or self-gratification, but with singleness of eye as unto God.

A painting on a screen in our childhood's schoolroom has remained indelibly impressed on my mind, with their single eye in the middle of their foreheads, busily at work at a fiery forge preparing weapons for destruction to slay their God's enemies. We do not, like the Cyclops, forge weapons of destruction (for our only weapon is love to save and not to slay), but we do learn from them that singleness of eye and of aim should pervade all our works. "His Name shall be in their foreheads." "Ye have done it unto Me." When we see Jesus in everything, then the whole aspect of life is changed, the joy of the Lord nerves us for every duty, and all looks bright and beautiful, filled with his presence and his love.

I visited last week a hospital for incurables, and found some of the poor sufferers sadly repining under the hand that pressed them sore. Oh, how sweet, then, to remind them, from the sacred page, that every little moment of suffering patiently borne by Christ's little flock, in love for his dear name, would work out "an exceeding and eternal weight of glory, if simply resting on the precious blood of atonement! Suffering then becomes a privilege almost to be courted, not only for the purification wrought out by it in the hand of God, but also for the sake of the recompense of reward."

We are "strengthened with all might"—unto what? Does the Bible say unto great works? Nay, rather "unto patience and long-suffering with joyfulness." Does not it need more strength to bear patiently God's will than to do it? The world may be patient with tears and sighs, but the Christian's patience must rise above that "with joyfulness."

A dear friend, who was an active worker for our Master, when laid aside, thus wrote to me:—"I can rejoice in my Father's will for me, and am quite as happy on my couch as if I were abroad giving the message from the Master. He sends one servant there, and another here, but to me, He says, 'You shall wait on Me,' 'Draw nigh to Me,' 'Minister unto Me,' 'Offer unto Me.' That is the best service. He has given me a text: 'Not accepting deliverance' (Heb. xi. 35) from pain, torture, weakness, inactivity, uncongenial surroundings, sneers and jeers, etc. Had Jesus accepted deliverance, where should we be? His whole life was one of not accepting deliverance for our sakes.

"Why did not the worthies mentioned in Heb. xl. accept deliverance? They 'desired a better resurrection,' and, like Moses, they had 'respect unto the recompense of reward.'"

Some days ago I came across the following sad lines:—

> My life is like to plants that creep,
> To plants that droop and touch the ground,
> No seed I sow, no harvest reap,
> All barren as the months go round.

Thank God these sad lines end with the prayer:—"Have mercy, Jesu, quicken me."

How can we be quickened unto good and acceptable works? We must turn away our eyes from self and look to Jesus, see his infinite love for us, that is the strong foundation on which all good works must rest, then our works (however poor and insignificant in themselves) will partake of his nature, which is Love, and being grounded and built up in that element will certainly hereafter meet their reward, and then we shall cast our crowns before Him, and crown Him Lord of all. "For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things, to whom be glory for ever.'

I. M

CHRISTIAN INSTRUCTION SOCIETY.—In connection with the new departure by this society, there are already fifteen deaconesses labouring among the poor in as many districts of London. A warm friend of the work has offered over £1000 a year, if an equal sum can be raised from other sources, so that the society may increase the number of deaconesses to 100. The secretary of the society is Rev. R. Mackay, Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street.

AT IRISH FAIRS.—During a recent journey, which lasted for nine weeks, two itinerant missionaries of the Irish Church Missions visited forty-one fairs and markets, situated in eight different counties. In thirty-six of the fairs and markets the brethren got opportunities to preach, and availed themselves of them, and they estimate that about 6000 Roman Catholics and 4000 Protestants were brought within sound of the Gospel. 1066 Douay Testaments were sold, and 775 Penny Protestant Testaments, 362 portions of the Testament, 421 copies of "Glories of Jesus," and 489 copies of "Talks of the Road." A great number of Gospel and controversial pamphlets were given away.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY
AMONGST HOMELESS CHILDREN.

SIR,—On January 4, 1870, a door was opened in a poor street near a leading thoroughfare in Manchester, for the immediate and free reception of homeless and destitute boys. That single house, with its thirty hammocks, was soon filled, and has been the precursor of a work which for thoroughness, completeness, and manifest tokens of God's blessing, has had few equals in the annals of Christian and philanthropic enterprise.

On Friday next, January 4, the Institution, now widely known as the Boys and Girls' Refuges and Homes and Children's Aid Society, will complete its twenty-fifth year. The day will be observed as a day of thanksgiving throughout the entire work, and it is in order that the readers of THE CHRISTIAN, not only in Lancashire, where the work is well known, but also in other parts of the kingdom, where it has only been heard of, may join in the note of praise which will then be struck, that we ask space in your valuable columns for a very brief outline of what through God's prospering hand, has become a large undertaking. The record is given that He may be glorified.

The single house of 1870 for boys only has given place to an institution for boys and girls, the scope and dimensions of which to-day may be judged of from the following list:—

1.—The Central Refuge and Industrial Home, Frances-street, Strangeways, the headquarters, to which all applicants come, and where industrial training is carried on.
2.—Home for Working Boys and Lads' Institute, Great Ducie-street, Strangeways.
3.—Brigade Boys' Home, where dwell the Caxton, Shoeblack, and Parcel Brigades.
4.—The Boys' Emigration Training Home, Great Ducie-street, Strangeways.
5.—The Homes for Little Orphan Children (boys and girls), Cheetham Hill—six in number.
6.—The Girls' Domestic Service and Emigration Training Home and Laundry, "Rosen Hallas," Cheetham Hill.
7.—"The Cottage" for Convalescent Children, "Rosen Hallas," Cheetham Hill.
8.—"Bethesda" Home for Crippled and Incurable Children, Cheetham Hill.
9.—The Book Saloon and Offices of Christian Worker, Great Ducie-street.
10.—The Open-all-Night Shelter for Little Wanderers, 1, Chatham-street, whose door has never been shut.
11.—The Prevention of Cruelty to Children Society, 1, Chatham-street, Piccadilly.
12.—The Police-court Mission to Lads and Girls.
13.—The Seaside Home for weak and sickly children, Lytham.
14.—The Day Nursery, Carruthers-street, Ancoats.
15.—The Outdoor Industrial Brigades, Chatham-street.
16.—Summer Camp for Poor City Boys, Southport.
17.—The Training Ship Indefatigable, New Ferry, Birkenhead (in connection with).
18.—The Canadian Branch Home, Belleville, Ontario, Canada (in connection with).

By means of these various branches the Institution has during the past year received and dealt with a total of 2595 children. In addition to the foregoing, a large and active Prison-gate Mission is carried on. Morning by morning throughout the year devoted workers are found at "the gate," and an invitation given to a cup of coffee at the adjoining mission room. No less than 10,724 discharged prisoners accepted the invitation during the past year, and while breakfast was proceeding God's message of mercy to the guilty and backsliding was proclaimed. Large numbers signed the pledge, and many young men and young women were helped into a better life. The results of this mission "the Day" alone will declare.

An examination of the foregoing eighteen branches of work will show that every class of boy and girl destitution, suffering, and need is provided for, from the little homeless, nameless waif,

> Who never knew a mother's love,
> Or shared a father's care;

up to the youth, fresh from his country home, seeking work in the city, or the young girl driven into imminent moral danger owing to the misery of her home surroundings.

The crippled and incurable ones also are not forgotten. These most suffering of all God's suffering children, who, in addition to poverty, have to bear the burden of a maimed, diseased, and incurable body, have their short and painful lives brightened and blest by reception into the beautiful Bethesda Home, the last addition to the work.

Time and your space would fail to give any details of the many deeply-interesting departments of Christian work and effort of which the Strangeways Institution has been the centre, but a glance backward over these twenty-five years tells of thousands of young lives, who must otherwise have grown up in misery and sin, a curse and a cost to the land of their birth, received into happy homes and useful, and sent forth on life's way, either in this country or Canada, with the love of God in their hearts and his fear before their eyes. Several are now ordained ministers, preaching the Gospel in distant lands, while large numbers, married and settled in homes of their own, are living useful Christian lives.

What has been the secret of success in all this? If one word were to give the answer, it must be prayer. From the beginning it has been a work of prayer. 'Tis true it is a work of philanthropy, but it is a great deal more; to cleanse, and clothe, and feed, and educate the body and mind is much; to train in habits of truthfulness, sobriety, and industry is more; but to be the means, under God, of winning these young lives for Christ, is the great desire of those who carry on the work, for they know that thus only their labour shall not be in vain in the Lord.

The work needs financial help just now, and a thanksgiving fund is being opened. The committee will be thankful indeed if through your means their large needs are supplied. The CHRISTIAN has done valued service in this direction to many enterprises.
—Yours for his service,

LEONARD K. SHAW, Hon. Sec.

Manchester, December.

THANKSGIVING AT MILDMAY.

ON Tuesday, December 18, at 4 and 7 p.m., meetings for united thanksgiving and prayer were held in connection with the Conference Hall. The trustees and superintendent of the Mildmay Institutions felt constrained to set apart this time for renewed praise, in which they were joined by an unusually large circle of Christian friends. "O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together," embodied the language of each heart's expressed, or unexpressed, aspirations.

These meetings were the outcome of a gathering for special prayer held on December 19, 1893—a time of grave crisis in the history of the Institution. God's sustaining grace and guidance were then fervently supplicated, on behalf of those upon whom the burden of responsibility then devolved. Since that time God has been pleased to answer prayer in a signal manner—pouring out rich blessings on the Mildmay Missions and Conference, and in no wise suffering the income entrusted to the treasurer to decrease. Such manifestations of Divine favour called loudly for these seasons of thanksgiving.

Rev. CHARLES A. FOX, of Eaton Chapel (once curate to the late Rev. William Pennefather), gave a brief and markedly-spirited address in the afternoon. He dwelt particularly on God's pledged faithfulness, as taught in the words, "How shall He not," taken from Rom. viii. 32, with special reference to temporal needs. With this passage he coupled, "How much more," of St. Matthew vii. 11 and St. Luke xi. 13, with reference to spiritual needs, pointing out "all things" as the extent and degree to which our heavenly Father's bestowing grace reaches. "How shall He not" and "How much more" are likely to ring in the ears and hearts of all present for many a day to come, and will serve as an antidote to check incipient distrust in the minds of many believers.

At this meeting Colonel MORTON made a short statement commending the various ramifications of Mildmay activities to the loyal affection of the Lord's praying people. He did not omit enumerating some of the special tokens of the Lord's approval which had lately been granted to the Institutions by Him whose resources are infinite.

The evening meeting was even more crowded than the afternoon gathering. Rev. G. H. C. MACGREGOR, of Notting Hill Presbyterian Church, delivered one of his most incisive and didactic addresses on this occasion. His text was Colossians iv. 12, and his subject, "The True Spirit of Prayer." From the original Revised and Authorised Versions of the New Testament he gave such a view of what the soul's attitude should be in this holy exercise as threw a searchlight on the reason why "we ask and receive not." Anything short of a verbatim report would be likely to mutilate his stirring, long-to-be-remembered words. "Have I ever prayed in the Spirit of Christ, and according to the condition of soul laid down in the New Testament?" seemed to be the one question on every heart at the close of these "times of refreshing" at Mildmay.

MRS. PATON'S SOUTH SEA LETTERS.

In the volume of LETTERS AND SKETCHES FROM THE NEW HEBRIDES, by Mrs. Paton (6s. Hodder and Stoughton), we have a very charming addition to the literature of foreign missions. It forms a capital appendix and complement to the more formal narrative of Dr. Paton's Life. Mrs. Paton has a genuine gift of letter writing. These epistles were written solely for the private eyes of the family circle at home, and not with a view to publication, so that the style is free and unrestrained. They contain such homely details and graphic delineations of passing events as could only be had from correspondence written while the events were fresh in the memory. As a faithful record of the family and personal side of Christian work among the heathen surely anything better has seldom been published. We anticipate for this volume (which is admirably edited by Rev. James Paton, of Glasgow) a wide and useful career, as throwing light on a far-off field, and arousing fresh interest in one of the most heroic of modern missionary enterprises. The extract we give, referring to the work on Aniwa, will not only serve to show the literary ability of the writer, and her vigorous mental equipment, but will afford a welcome glimpse of the brighter side of missionary work:—

"To spend such a day as we did a few Sabbaths ago, when our little church of God in Aniwa was formally constituted, we felt to be worth more than all the sacrifices connected with our isolated life. We had a very good attendance, one hundred and eighty being present, and an unusual solemnity and interest pervaded the church throughout the whole services. The communicants, twelve in number, were arranged in rows, from the platform to my seat, so that they occupied the space in the centre. As they stood up to answer the form of questions Mr. Paton put to them before receiving baptism, you could scarcely have conceived of a more intensely interesting group. Vasi, our eldest member, must, we think, be near ninety; but aged and infirm as he is, he came every day to school with his spectacles on, and is one of Mr. Paton's best writers as well as readers. Our old chief Namakei was there, with his daughter Litsi. She is his only child living, and is almost as great a comfort to me as to her father. She was the first girl who came to live with us, and being the eldest on our premises, she sets a good example to the others. Her devotion to Mr. Paton almost amounts to idolatry. She seems as if she never could be grateful enough to him for being the means of her conversion. But the one I felt most interest in was Namakei's sister, a very gentle and delicate-looking woman. I knew what it had cost her to profess her faith in Jesus, and how her husband and son were even then jeering and laughing at her.

"If I had time I could tell you something interesting about each of them, for of course it was our knowing all their little histories that made the sight so intensely gratifying to us. I could remember when one began to wear clothing, when another cut off his long hair, and when one whom we had thought a very hardened character came one day with the last of his idols, saying, 'Now, missi, these are the very last. I have no more.'

"It was a beautiful sight to see these all standing up, neatly clothed, in the midst of their benighted brethren, to declare themselves on the Lord's side, and more than we could witness without deep emotion. Never did I feel happier in any society on earth than when partaking of the symbols of our Lord's body and blood with those dark sisters and brothers now united with me in Jesus. It was a day long to be remembered; I trust it will be so even in Eternity with thanksgiving.

"We have every reason to hope that the work of grace is begun in their hearts. Mr. Paton had much satisfaction in them while attending his candidates' class; and their own earnest inquiries were what delighted him most. How often have we had cause to set up our own Ebenezer since coming to this far-off land; this is but a small beginning, but we have most emphatically reason to thank the Lord and take courage."

SELF-CONTROL AND CONSIDERATION for the rights of others are most important lessons in the beginning of life's school, and recognition of the reserved rights of the mother the most hopeful way of teaching them. "I owe very much to my mother's unselfishness," said a thoughtful man in recalling the experiences of his boyhood, "but I owe more, I think, to my mother's self-respect."

NEWS FROM UGANDA.

THE following is a portion of a letter received by a member of the Dublin Young Men's Christian Association from Mr. Arthur B. Fisher, a former member, and now a missionary under the Church Missionary Society in Uganda :—

SINGO.

"Some friends have written to me asking if they might send some books for circulation amongst the people in Singo. I have written to say I would be delighted to receive the books, but I think perhaps the friends do not understand how troublesome it is to send books here. It would be much easier to send the money to my friend Mr. George Irwin, High-road, East Finchley, London, N., and he would forward it to my agents at Mombasa, which would enable me to buy the books here from the C.M.S., and give them to numbers, who are not able to buy them, but who want to read. Romanists will now take Gospels and read them, and this is a most hopeful sign. A small fund such as I ask for would be an immense blessing to the work here; there are so many things that one wants to do that cannot be paid for out of mission funds.

"Although many men have had to leave this country in ill-health, I find that the climate is delightful and the country most healthy. I never felt stronger in body, and during my two years here I have never had fever or any other kind of illness, although, as you may know, I am very frequently going through black mud swamps up to my neck.

"Let me give you an outline of our work. During the day I am surrounded with people and am engaged either in building a church, preaching the Gospel, or selling books. When night comes there is no existing outside the mosquito net, as these pests abound in most places after sunset, and in places near swamps or rivers will attack one even in the daytime. When I wrote to you last I was alone at Singo station. At Christmas I was joined by Mr. Sugden, and on April 1, I gave myself up to itineration and started for the Singo Islands, which now possess a church each and teachers. We had a very happy time, and we trust that many souls were saved. Six months ago there was not a single reader on any of these islands, and now there are over 4000 and the number is increasing every day; while out of this number some sixty, two-thirds of whom are women, can read the New Testament. On Bagwe all the Gospel readers, with one exception, are women. The men are trying hard to learn to read, being quite ashamed of their ignorance.

"When we landed six months ago on these islands the place was full of Lubare, i.e., devil-worship; but now it is not too much to say that at any time one can hear God's praises sung and see Christ's name glorified in the lives of many, while the Lubare houses have been used up as firewood, etc. From here we started S.E. for Mengo to see the committee regarding extension work in Katunzi and North Singo. We took a new road and worked amongst the people on the way, and had showers of blessing, so that now, between our station at Singo and Mengo we have succeeded in getting eight churches built, which, with two already built, make ten. No native in this district is now more than three miles distant from a church, which is supplied with earnest, whole-hearted teachers, supported by the native church elders. The smallest of these churches holds fifty, and the largest five hundred. In the latter I preached to a full house, appointed six church elders, and they started a shell collection for the support of some of their own members sent out as teachers. Here there are over four hundred New Testament readers, of whom great numbers are converted and teach others all round. I spent a Sunday amongst them, and it was a happy time. Prayer and praise did not stop with the benediction, but went on all day. Far into the night sweet hymns were ringing in our ears, "There is a Fountain filled with blood" being a great favourite. At Mengo I remained some ten days, consulting with chiefs whose country I was about to visit, and showing my magic lantern, which attracted great crowds. Mwanga insisted on our going three nights, and we trust he got a blessing.

KATUNZI.

"Bidding farewell to our fellow-workers, we returned again the same way, visiting all the churches, teaching, selling books and showing the pictures, which generally sent the people away, God for what they had seen and heard. A few days with Mr. Sugden at Singo stations, and again we commenced work in the great country of Katunzi, which was Mahommedan until the last war. I will not take you to all the places we have visited. Suffice to say we have visited some twenty-nine places, and have succeeded in getting eleven churches built at different centres, the smallest of which will hold 150 people, and the largest 600. The latter is the most central, and will be the new station as soon as anyone comes to our help.

"We rejoice over this work more than any other on account of the horrible darkness we found the country in, and the glorious victory God has given us over Satan in winning the hearts of the people, to hear and read about his wondrous love. I am writing this from Kasozi, the very end of the country. I have been here forty days. How dark I found the place—filled with devil houses; now, praise God, after much talk about Jesus as a Saviour, the people with one heart have commenced to build a church to hold 400, which will be finished in a few days, and all the devil houses have been burned. I am looking at the ashes of several as I write, and the voices of the people are in my ears as they are learning to read. I found the people here very poor, and numbers of the books had to be given away. From here I returned through the churches again, and then I am going into North Singo to place some teachers and to start work there. I may mention that I have always six young men who help me to teach, etc. The life is hard, marching through swamps and living in a tent, with irregular meals, etc.; but the work is for God's glory, and we need no greater stimulus."

NOTES FROM MEXICO.

MR. EGLON HARRIS, writing from Orizaba (Apartado 28), Mexico, says: "In the early part of this month I spent a week with the colporteur in the villages. We find that in many places the people are becoming less reserved and more inclined to listen to our message. In the villages a blind fanaticism is the greatest hindrance to the reception of the truth, while in the towns spiritualism is making itself strong against the Word of God. Even in Mexico there are abundant signs of the evils of the last days. Oh, that the Lord may use us to speedily gather out some for Himself to the glory of his grace.

"Our printing record for the first six months will tell of half a million pages printed, and of these 450,000 circulated freely by the post, by two native colporteurs and ourselves. I must tell you that by a new postal arrangement we can send a copy of El Sembrador to sixty different parts of the country for the equivalent of one half-penny. I think that such facility for spreading the Gospel cannot be equalled by any other country, and we cannot but see an open door that may well compensate for open-air preaching, which is still forbidden.

"God cares for the seed we sow. At Vera Cruz Alamillo saw a man reading a Sembrador. He spoke to the man, asking him where he got his paper. He answered, 'In Huamantla a man, to whom it had been given, passed it on to me in joke, thinking, doubtless, I should be annoyed, and tear it up. But I read it, and am reading it again, for it is good.' Our brother was then permitted to water the seed I had scattered the day before 200 miles away.

"I forget whether I told you that Don Bernardo, the colporteur on the Pacific coast, was set upon by some fanatics and left insensible in the road all night. He is now recovered, and nothing daunted continues his labours with some fair results. Here in Orizaba we have forty-five in the school. This number could be doubled, we believe, with little more effort, but at present these are enough for my wife and her native helper to manage. It would indeed be a pity to have to give up this part of the work. We trust the Lord it will not be so. We look for best results from these children, who are daily hearing the Gospel and seeing its power."

THERE IS NO SCRIPTURAL FOUNDATION for the theory that children must grow into sin before they can grow up into Christ, and that all education will produce a crop of iniquity before it can produce a crop of holiness. Childhood and youth are the seasons of conversion; then, if ever, are to be laid the deep and broad foundations of a pure, noble Christian life.—Rev. H. Hooke.

DR. A. T. PENTECOST.

A VERY interesting and appreciative sketch of this well-known divine, and of his work as pastor at Marylebone, with an admirable portrait and other illustrations, is given in the January issue of The Sunday Magazine. In the course of conversation Dr. Pentecost answered questions as to his visit to India. "I esteem India (he said) as the most hopeful and attractive field of work in the world, either at home or abroad. If I were twenty-five years younger, humanly speaking nothing would prevent me from going at once to settle there for life. Even now I look forward to another evangelistic tour of that Empire. The half has never been told of the success and progress of our missions there. In no other country in the world is Christianity making such rapid progress. There are far more conversions in India in proportion to the number of missionaries engaged in preaching the Gospel, than there are at home. My own judgment is that in another fifty years India will be nominally a Christian country—that is, Hinduism, and Mohammedanism will exercise only a minimum of religious influence over the people, while Christ will be recognised throughout the land by the great masses of the people as the true religion."

Speaking of his pastoral methods in Marylebone, the Doctor remarked that in America the pastor's house is nominally the social centre of the church. "I am trying a little to make that true of my own home. It is always open to members of our Church, high or low; and the pastor and his family are always at home to any who may choose to call at least one day of the week. I call alike on my people, and am more often in the kitchen and servants' hall than in the drawing-room. Not infrequently I call upstairs and downstairs in the same house."

Dr. Pentecost expressed the opinion to his interviewer that Mr. Stead's book on Chicago is a caricature. "That Chicago has its plague spots as well as London and every other city, is true; but Chicago is not truly pictured by Mr. Stead. Remember that certain portions of Chicago form the sewer through which Europe has poured her refuse. You cannot judge of the cleanliness and decency of a city by going down the manholes and inspecting the sewers, except by an inverse method. There is no antagonism between the American workingman and the labour leaders and Christianity. The late rioters were nine-tenths of them foreign born—the riff-raff of Roman Catholic communities."

MEDICAL MISSION IN TUNIS.

A NEW season has just begun, and we desire sympathy and prayers, that the Lord, who so graciously set his seal on the work in the conversion of Sidi Ahmed (he celebrated his first spiritual birthday last week), may this year do still greater things. The work is much on all our hearts, giving as it does such exceptional opportunities for reaching a number with the Gospel. In addition to the opening address, an effort is always made to speak to as many as possible of the patients, while they wait their turn to see the doctor.

From July, 1893, to July, 1894, 3709 visits to the dispensary were recorded, and a number who could not come out were attended in their own homes. Only one convert from among more than a thousand hearers! We would rejoice were we able to report more, but we thank God for the one, and take courage. We trust there are other results—wrong ideas removed, prejudices broken down, and the way prepared for greater things by a knowledge of the plan of salvation being diffused more widely. The working expenses, including £24 for rent of dispensary, came to a little over £50.

North Africa Mission, Tunis. MARY M. SCOTT.

"OH, WALTER, you have come to say your prayers! Well, I am busy writing a letter. I'll finish that first." The little fellow patiently waited, but still the pen scratched. At length he said, "Mamma, is letter-writing better than praying?" The gentle rebuke went to the mother's heart.

"MOTHER," a little child once said, "how old must I be before I can be a Christian?" And the wise mother answered, "How old will you have to be, darling, before you love me?" "Why, mother, I always loved you. I do now, and I always shall," and she kissed her mother. "Well, you can be a Christian now, without waiting to be older, if you love Christ as you love me."

FROM MR. MOODY.

I WANT to thank the readers of THE CHRISTIAN for their liberal responses to my former appeals for help in our Bible Institute for Home and Foreign Missions. Your aid has enabled us to send out a large number of young men and women, who are holding positions of usefulness in Christian work, and are being greatly blessed in their labours. The demand for trained workers is increasing every day, and we are not able to meet the calls that come to us.

We could accommodate two hundred more students, with but slight increase of expense in our corps of teachers, providing we had the means to board them. We have a large number of applicants, who would gladly give their lives to Christian work, but are prevented from preparing themselves by lack of means for their support while in training.

Are there not a large number of readers of THE CHRISTIAN who cannot go into either home or foreign field, but who would gladly render financial aid to prepare others for these spheres? Any contributions sent direct to me at my home, or to the publishers of THE CHRISTIAN, will be thankfully received, and applied to the advancement of Christian work.

D. L. MOODY.

E. Northfield, Mass.

THE NATIONAL REFUGES.

IN issuing the fifty-first annual report of these institutions, the committee say: One special feature of our work is that it is conducted on the principle that children need a home and not merely a place to live in; consequently anything like the barrack system is utterly unknown in our work, each branch of the society being really a home, and every child personally known to the superintendent and matron.

Since the foundation in 1843, 10,993 boys and 2,231 girls have been received and maintained in the homes, for periods ranging from four to six years. During the past year 334 children have been admitted, and many pages might be occupied in describing the miserable surroundings and demoralising influences from which these boys and girls have been rescued. There are now about 850 boys and girls in the Homes and training ships.

The report contains long and careful details of the seven Homes, and the Arethusa and Chichester training ships, which will well repay perusal, and must deeply interest all who care for the children. To maintain this good work an increase of income of at least £4000 per annum is required, so that the committee may not have to turn back many poor children, who, with timely help now, may grow up productive and loyal citizens, God-fearing men and women, instead of living lives of misery and sin, a strain on the resources of the country, and causing terrible sadness in the hearts of all who feel for their brothers and sisters. The secretary is Mr. H. Bristow Wallen, 164, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.C.

AMONG THE ZULUS.

MANY will be interested in the following extracts from a letter written to a friend by the devoted evangelist of Rorke's Drift:—

I have several Zulus out among the kraals witnessing to the glory of God our Saviour, and taking the living Gospel even to their own parents in utter darkness. It gives my heart great joy to see a Zulu start off to tell his or her own people the promise of life everlasting. One of our best workers, who was converted to God while quite a youth, came to me fourteen days ago, stating that he would be forced to leave the work he so much loved for a time, as he would require a little money before he married. He would have, he said, to go to Johannesberg, the worst place any living soul could go to. It was like a shot through me. I replied, "We will see. We will speak to Jesus the Lord, and tell Him all." I was leaving for a few days to hold one or two meetings some seventy miles distance off, so I asked him to bring the whole matter before the King in prayer. I at all times find it the best way to go and tell Jesus at once if in any trouble, and I never, never found Him to cast me away. What a mighty Saviour we have! —able to save, and able to keep. On the very evening I returned I found among my letters a welcome gift from the Lord's own friends. I thanked Him. It being about nine in the evening, I had the bell rung to thank and praise the Giver of all good gifts, for enabling us to keep our best helpmate to the front. I there and then promised him 20s. per month, and he, with uplifted hands, said: "This is the work of the Lord, our Master; see how it has helped us." I can say, with many others, the Lord does answer our prayers, and I rejoice in such a note of pure music. Even in the hour of trouble and joy such a burning and blessed hope lifts us above, even into his courts, with joy and praise. Every branch of this work is promising, as we return, week after week, to our central position for our evening meeting. There is joy in taking the good tidings from this to the kraals, and there is still a greater joy on our return at evening; and may we all do what little is brought before us with a joyful heart.

JOHN J. MEEK.

Othello, P.O., Rorke's Drift, Natal.

THE Y.M.C.A.

A BRANCH for coloured young men is being established in Brooklyn, N.Y.

A number of medical students in Baltimore, Md., have established a college branch.

The sister States of New Hampshire and Vermont have just held a joint Association convention, which was a decided success.

An Association has been organised at Dunkirk, N.Y., with 250 members, and another at Fostoria, O., with nearly 200 members.

Mr. Terry, secretary of the Chippewa Falls, Wis., Association, is devoting the winter to work among the lumbermen in the logging camps.

A meeting was held at Bow last week for the purpose of organising an Association for this densely-populated district of the East-end. Nearly forty names were enrolled.

A deputation of members of the Hackney Association Missionary Parliament visited the South Woodford Association last week for the purpose of stirring up a greater interest in foreign missionary work.

The Finsbury Park Association is endeavouring to raise a jubilee fund of £250, with a view to effecting some much-needed improvements in the Association house, and also to remove the balance of a small debt which has much hampered the Association's work. The new year reception at Finsbury Park will be held on January 2.

A remarkable revival is reported in the Virginia Agricultural College, U.S.A., consequent on the labours of a Y.M.C.A. evangelist. The meetings lasted a week. Some of the professors were stirred up as never before. Men of the highest standing in college and post-graduates openly confessed and for ever put aside their pet sins. Twenty-six cadets were converted, and fully as many more are still seeking Christ. One hundred and five have voluntarily joined Bible classes.

One of the most interesting features of the work at the Aldersgate-street Y.M.C.A. during the past few months has been the Pleasant Sunday Afternoon—a meeting entirely devoted to the making known of the Gospel to the young men of the City. At the last meeting the Lord Mayor called in casually. His lordship was so much pleased that he has notified his intention of being present on Sunday next, 30th inst., with the Lady Mayoress. The meeting is for men only, and is held from 3.15 to 4.30.

A Foreign Missionary Union has been formed in connection with the Islington and Highbury Y.M.C.A. During the last two years, three members of this Association have gone into the "regions beyond." One is working in Central Africa, another is at Singapore, and a third reached Shanghai last month, for work in connection with the C.I.M. The objects of this missionary union are:—1. To write every month to our brethren, and to forward them Christian literature. 2. To pray for them unitedly every Sunday morning. 3. To help supply their need. A missionary prayer meeting is held every Sunday at 10 a.m., to which all Christian young men are invited.

The members of the Anglo-American Y.M.C.A. in Paris have just held their annual meeting in the Salle Philadelphie, 23, Rue Royale. The chair was taken by Rev. H. Bramley Hart, of the Wesleyan Church. The secretary gave a very interesting and satisfactory report of the work done during the past twelve months. The treasurer, Mr. Alfred Coleman, stated that during the year a deficit of 2276 fr. had been reduced by over 500 fr., and he added that a gentleman, who desired to remain anonymous, having witnessed the good work the Association had done and is doing, generously offered to wipe out the balance —an announcement which was heartily welcomed. Revs. E. G. Thurber, D.D., and H. E. Noyes, D.D., gave addresses, the former directed especially to the young men, and the latter on "The Perfect Man." Dr. H. Waller, a member of the Association for twenty-five years, also testified to its importance.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

REV. W. A. GRAY, of the Free Church, Elgin, has observed his pastoral semi-jubilee.

Rev. Wm. Ewing, of Birmingham, is to be called to Gorbals F.C., Glasgow, as successor to Rev. John Robertson.

Mr. S. J. Capper lately lectured in Paisley on his experiences in the Franco-German war. He strongly urged the adoption of international arbitration.

There are fifteen Continental students now in the French College, Edinburgh—from Belgium, Holland, France, Germany, Switzerland, and Bohemia. There are also some from the Cape and Polynesia.

The Free East congregation, Aberdeen, are giving a hearty and unanimous call to Rev. C. H. Todd, of Maxwelltown, Dumfries, and have reason to believe that he will accept. He is spoken of as a thoughtful, earnest, powerful, and unconventional preacher.

The Glasgow School Board have resolved to oppose strenuously a Bill which the Town Council are introducing into Parliament, enabling them to license children for casual employment in the streets during their school curriculum. It was stated that Mr. Quarrier approves of the proposed measure.

Rev. D. M. Ross, of Dundee, recently discoursed on the subject of public-houses and what to do with them. He spoke of the havoc which intoxicating drink was causing in domestic and social life, and remarked that some system was wanted out of which would be eliminated the temptation to push the sale of drink for the increase of private gain. Absolute suppression of the public-house was, perhaps, an impossibility, but reform was possible.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

IN Berbice, South America, there is a flourishing society in the New Amsterdam Lutheran Church.

Nearly 200 men-of-war's men united in the recent anniversary of the Navy Yard C.E.S. at Brooklyn.

A recent number of Kyorei Zassi, the Japanese national Endeavour organ, gives an account of a Japanese C. E. society there.

Dr. F. E. Clark had, during his recent visit, good meetings at Tunbridge Wells, Blackburn, Edinburgh, Bristol, and other provincial centres.

Miss Abbie G. Chapin, the young people's missionary of the American Congregational Church, has already begun her work in Tung-cho, China.

The Endeavourers of Bristol and Bath held last week a great demonstration in the Colston Hall. The Bristol Union reports 100 societies, with 5600 members.

GATHERED GOLD.

GOD stands as it were passive in permissions and active in his Divinely-planned appointments.

Prayer is the peace of our spirit, the soul of meditation, the rest of our cares.—Jeremy Taylor.

There are in human hearts battlefields as grand as Thermopylæ, as great as Waterloo.—Bouton.

Nothing less than a mutual indwelling of God in us and of us in God will suffice. Beyond that, we want nothing.—C. Simeon.

By continual meditation in the sacred writings, a man as naturally improves and advances in holiness as a tree thrives and flourishes in a kindly and well-watered soil.—Bp. Horne.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against the wind. Even a head-wind is better than none. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm.—Neal.

The requests we make of God interpret our character, They show us as we are. God reads our character in our prayers. What we love best, what we covet most, that gives the key to our hearts.—Dr. Cuyler.

It is, alas! easy to lose God in discussions about God. The network of Logic can never be made too strong, but it ought always to remain network; that is, we ought always to be able to see God Himself through the meshes of all arguments concerning Him.—Rev. A. J. Harrison.

If we look to stand in the faith of the sons of God, we must hourly, continually be providing and setting ourselves to strive. It was not the meaning of our Lord and Saviour in saying, "Father, keep them in thy name," that we should be careless to keep ourselves. To our own safety, our own sedulity is required. Hooker.

"Come unto Me!" "Let not your heart be troubled!" How graciously soothing were these words to the poor, storm-tossed sinner! How indescribably comforting to the believer when laid upon a bed of languishing! O thou blessed, sympathising, almighty Saviour! We thank thee for that invitation, for those soul-soothing words.—Christian Advocate.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

South Brent, Buckfastleigh.—An interesting special mission has been held here by various workers, and blessing has been granted.

Glastonbury.—At the Wesleyan Chapel a very successful mission by Rev. J. W. Harbord and Mr. J. Benny has been held, assisted by Miss Fieldson, the Joyful News Home. The attendance was excellent, and a number of young people connected with the Bible-class and school gave their hearts to God.

Mr. George Hefford's visit to St. Matthew's, Birmingham, has been marked by God's presence and blessing. The remarkably clear and tender way in which the Gospel was presented made the mission a most refreshing one to the workers, and we are cheered by trophies won for Christ.—J. O. West.

Rev. Thomas Waugh has had a good mission in Belmont-row, Birmingham, and great interest was aroused. Two gatherings of men only were noted for plain talk and great searching of heart; one for women yielded a score of seekers. There are large numbers of inquirers. Among these were many young men and some married couples. The farewell service was a fine harvest-time.

Bedminster, Bristol.—A week's mission services, conducted by Rev. L. Railton, has resulted in many tokens of encouragement, much blessing to the Church, and in the conversion of many souls. The congregations were large, and the interest increased night by night. Mr. T. Hogben rendered efficient aid, urging his plan of "one by one" intercession, and ministers and others from all parts of Bristol helped cheerfully,

Mr. Thorne at Skegness.—A mission was held here in St. Paul's Church, from December 1 to 17. Thirty-eight meetings were held during the seventeen days. The Bible readings were singularly used and blessed. Many have sought and found the living Saviour, the enquiry-room being filled at times to its utmost capacity. Mr. Thorne has been aided in the work by a devoted, zealous and prayerful band of workers. The closing meeting was one of power.

Great Easton.—Miss Haddon, of Clipstone, has closed a six days' mission in Great Easton, which has been very successful, Bible reading meetings were held in the afternoon, and the congregations were exceptionally good at the evening services. The meetings on Wednesday and Thursday were held in the Wesleyan Chapel, on Friday and Saturday in the Church schoolroom, and Sunday and Monday in the Wesleyan Chapel. Miss Haddon had the joy of pointing some to the Saviour. A Christian Endeavour meeting is being started, and we are trusting, that God will continue to bless the work.—T. E. W.

Derby.—Mr. H. Moyle, district evangelist, has just concluded a twelve days' mission in King-street Chapel, and many adults and children have yielded to the Saviour. During the whole of the series great spiritual power rested on the place. Backsliders have returned to the fold, drunkards have found their way to the foot of the Cross. Parents and children have together sought the Saviour; and regular attenders at the ordinary services have been converted. The second Sunday evening proved a glorious time. At the close of the ordinary service a great number of members sought salvation.

Chapel-en-le-Frith.—A mission was conducted in this parish by Rev. Sholto D. C. Douglas from Nov. 25 to Dec. 6. A series of afternoon Bible readings proved most helpful. At the evening meetings large congregations listened to the Gospel story. The numbers present—from a scattered population—showed the power of the Gospel to attract. A deep impression was made, and many were brought to a saving knowledge of the truth. At the hamlets of Gnathole and Doveholes services were held by Mr. Stockdale and Miss Simeon; the latter also gave a series of addresses to women in the Chapel-en-le Frith Town Hall. In each of these places great interest was manifested and much blessing bestowed. One pleasing feature of the result of Mr. Douglas's visit has been the formation of three large Bible classes. The whole time was one to be remembered and to thank God for.

PRAYER UNION FOR ISRAEL.—Mr. Walter K. Campbell, hon. sec. of this organisation, writing from 7, St. Mark's-square, Dalston, says:—"Many members of this Union have been lost sight of through their change of address not having been notified. I should be glad if any members who have not received notices, papers, or pamphlets during 1894 will kindly send their present address, their card number if possible, and (when it is in arrears) their subscription. For any readers who may wish to join us, I would add that the objects of this Union (started in October, 1882, by the late Miss Phillips) are:—1. To form a bond of union between the friends of Israel of all denominations, and 2. To seek, by united prayer, for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit's convicting and converting power on Israel."

The Book World.

The Appeal is a popular monthly, written in simple language. Christian workers will find it suggestive, and for distribution it will prove of real service. (½d. Elliot Stock.)

The Play-actress. By S. R. Crockett. (T. Fisher Unwin. 1s. 6d.) A pathetic, but not very original story. Whether its intention is to interest or amuse, or whether the author (a Free Church minister) had any more serious purpose, is not very evident.

The Old Testament and the New Criticism. By the late Bishop Blomfield. Mr. Elliot Stock has issued a cheaper edition (2s. 6d.) of this trenchant examination of the theories of the higher critics. It abundantly justifies the right of "common sense" to express an opinion on the subject.

The Illustrated Missionary News. Vol. XXVIII. (Partridge & Co.) This well-established monthly is doing good service to the cause of missions. In its volume form, representing as it does nearly all lands and peoples, it is likely to spread missionary interest, and awaken in many young hearts a high and holy missionary purpose.

Dulce Domum: Essays on Home Life, by the late Frederick Perry, M.A., vicar of St. Saviour's, Fitzroy Square, has been issued in a third and cheap edition. (3s. 6d. John Davis, 24, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.) Thirty in number, these essays are of sterling worth, sound counsels and great principles being enforced by historical and other illustrations, gathered from a wide range of reading.

Simon Peter: His Later Life and Labours. By Charles S. Robinson, D.D. (Nelson & Sons.) This is the sequel to "Simon Peter: His Life and Times," from the pen of a cultured New York divine. The thirty chapters take up notable incidents in the story, and unfold Christ's teaching to Peter as well as the Apostle's teaching to others. The volume is expository and practical, and will be welcome to those who would study the life of Peter.

The Speech of Man and Holy Writ is an anonymous work, readable though somewhat diffuse, thoughtful but by no means thorough. The author shows speech to be a Divine endowment, not a human invention, and he shows the reasonableness of the Mosaic teaching, that originally the whole earth was of one speech, and that the calamity at Babel gave rise to the changes and diversities which have come down to history and literature. The authority of Scripture is boldly asserted, but in the matter of information the volume is "thin." (7s. 6d. W. R. Gray, Lombard Court E.C.)

The Holy Spirit, the Paraclete: A Study of the Work of the Holy Spirit in Man, by Rev. John Robson, D.D., Aberdeen, is a thoughtful exposition of a supremely important Scripture doctrine. Things that differ are admirably distinguished, and the pages contain helpful teaching on the Spirit's work in creation and regeneration. There are chapters on the New Birth, the Eternal Sin, and the Inspiration of the Bible; and even where, on points of detail, we do not agree with the views expressed, we never lose sight of the author's reverential mind, practical purpose, and desire to be loyal to revealed truth. (Oliphant, Anderson, & Ferrier.)

England Heir of the World, by J. E. Hendley (Elliot Stock), is an addition to the ever-growing "identification" literature. It is maintained that the English nation has inherited the blessing of Ephraim, and is "the stone cut out of the mountain without hands," in fact, the stone concerning which our Lord said, "On whomsoever it shall fall it shall grind him to powder." We have no patience with such an application of Scripture. This proceeding, however, is fairly matched by the author's discovery in the Apocrypha of an important allusion to the wanderings of "the lost ten tribes." He quotes, without regard to qualifying context, 2 Esdras xiii. 40-46, and ascribes the words to "the Ezra of the Bible." Apparently he does not know that this writing has no historical value whatever, and, far from dating from the time of Ezra, is held by scholars to go back no further than the beginning of the Christian era!

The Revelation: A Book for To-day. By A. Dice. (E. Stock.) That the Revelation of Jesus Christ is rich in spiritual teaching no one who has reverently pondered its rapturous visions will deny. But when expounded wholly on the lines followed by this author it is voided of force and meaning. If the "two witnesses" of chap. xi. are to be interpreted as "equivalent to meaning that there is sufficient testimony" against evil-doers; if the reiterated period "a time, times, and half a time," or "forty and two months," or "1260 days," has no definite significance whatever; if "war in heaven" mean only conflict in "the invisible realm of mind and soul"; if the "first resurrection" be simply the deliverance of the Church from persecution, then surely the Word of God must be regarded as capable of any far-fetched and mystical explanation emanating from the fervid imagination of man. If its real meaning be so strangely diverse from its plain statements, then where, one asks, is certainty? Where any sure ground on which to stand for time or eternity?

Conscience is the title of a manly "Talk with the Boys Brigade," by Archdeacon Farrar. (Head Quarters Office, 162, Buchanan-street, Glasgow.)

The Promise of Life, A New Year's Address to Young Men, by R. Henderson Smith, is replete with sound teaching and high counsels. (1d. National Council, Y.M.C.A. Rooms, 14, South St. Andrew-street, Edinburgh.)

NEW YEAR'S APPEALS.

Pastor O. Tidman, Ebenezer Cottage, Magor, South Wales, appeals for Gospel text cards for children, also Gospel books, tracts, &c., for aged sick ones.

New Year's Free Tea to 1500 of the poorest children in Kentish and Camden Towns.—C. W. Wannell, Treasurer, Salvation Army, Chalk Farm, 41, Camden-road, N.W.

The Rescue Society is in great need of help at this time. The report gives great encouragement by reason of good results in numerous instances.—C. Stuart Thorpe, 79, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

Bethnal Green.—The vicar of an intensely poor parish asks help to give 1300 Sunday scholars and 400 aged and suffering poor a Christmas treat.—Rev. R. W. Loveridge, St. Philip's, Bethnal Green, E.

Salvation Army.—Wanted, small donations amounting to £1000, for the extension of the Social and Rescue Work. Five thousand shelters provided nightly.—Colonel Sturgess, Financial Secretary, 101, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

Murphy Memorial Hall, and Lambeth Baths.—Rev. W. Mottram pleads for seasonable help. Five thousand attendances are made every week from the poorest districts south of the Thames, and the needs are at times overwhelming.—32, Trafalgar-road, S.E.

Ark Church Mission, Rotherhithe, S.E.—The workers are making an effort to give a good substantial meal at Christmas time to 300 poor children of this poor neighbourhood, and would be glad of help.—William Joyner, Pastor, Paradise-street, Rotherhithe, S.E.

Jubilee Mission, East-road, Hoxton. The workers are desirous of providing free meals and warm clothing for the destitute children of their densely-populated and needy district. They will be most grateful for help in cash or cast-off clothing.—Rev. A. E. Brett (Superintendent), 57, Fairbank-street, East-road.

Orphan Working School.—The committee have been obliged to reduce the number of children maintained from 600 to 500. Thus the expenditure has been considerably diminished. In addition to the heavy debt to our bankers, over £2000 is owing to tradesmen and others.—Algernon C. P. Coote, 73, Cheapside, E.C.

Howard-street Mission, Wandsworth-road, S.W.—During the past winter large numbers of the destitute poor were supplied with substantial meals, and our soup kitchen (worked by voluntary help) was the means of satisfying and relieving a number of cases.—Nath. A. Soames, 16A, Tasman-road, Stockwell, S.E.

Princess Louise Home, Kingston Hill, Norbiton, Surrey.—Every effort is made towards self-support, and about £700 will be earned this year by the laundry attached to the home. Funds are earnestly solicited for paying off a debt of £1000 still due to the bankers on account of building and furnishing this laundry last year.—Secretary, Reginald Drake, 32, Sackville-street, W.

Mission Homes in Paris.—These homes are open to all English-speaking girls. Ten guineas a day is needed to sustain them. To enable us to continue the Christian and social work of these homes, which have been such a blessing to thousands of English women and children in Paris, we plead for your generous assistance.—(Miss) Rhoda Mouncey, 22A, Queen's-road, Bayswater, W.

Domestic Servants' Benevolent Institution, 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly.—The objects are to relieve aged and infirm domestic servants by granting them pensions and temporary relief. Since the formation of the Institution 323 pensioners have been elected, ninety-three of whom are now in receipt of £15 to £20 each per annum. At the last election there were 142 applicants for the pension.

Great Ormond-yard District is visited by a missionary of the London City Mission, whose superintendent, Mr. Bannister, writes:—"I have never known so much poverty and distress, borne for the most part with much patience. We are about to open our soup kitchen, which we should be glad to keep open three days in the week for fully three months. Gifts of ladies' disused clothing would be most welcome." Address: Shaftesbury Memorial Hall, Orde Hall-street, Ormond-street.

Mount Hermon Girls' Orphan Homes, 47, 49, and 55, Cambridge-avenue, Kilburn, N.W.—Mrs. Parry urges the need of the orphans in her care: "We have had a legacy left us by a dear friend, but complications have arisen since his death, and it is quite uncertain when we shall receive it. Meanwhile our expenses go on. The orphans must be clothed and fed. I very earnestly ask for your prayerful and practical help at this time of great need; that this coming Christmas, lightened of its care, may be indeed a happy one for us and ours."

National Refuges and Training Ships.—The committee ask for help to carry on the very useful work now in progress at their homes in Shaftesbury Avenue, Twickenham, Sudbury, Ealing, and Bisley, Surrey. Help is also needed to support the popular training-ships for destitute boys namely, the Arethusa and Chichester. From these vessels (moored off Greenhithe, Kent), 5696 boys have been sent as sailors into the mercantile marine and Royal Navy. The homes and ships provide accommodation for 1000 children, but many urgent and pitiful cases have to be refused admission owing to the lack of funds.—Treasurer, Mr. W. E. Hubbard, 4, St. Helen's-place, E.C.

The Friend (unknown) who has been in the habit of sending The Christian to Mr. John Leslie, Shiloh, Canada, is informed that he is dead. We can supply the name of another person who would be glad to receive the paper.

The Compressed Tea Tabloids (sixpenny boxes), prepared by Messrs. Burroughs, Wellcome, and Co., are sure to prove of great service to travellers; they will be comforting companions to many a missionary while on evangelistic tours.

Gifts to Hospitals.—So much appreciation has been shown in regard to the Religious Tract Society's gifts of publications to hospitals and various institutions, during many years, that the committee have resolved to renew them this year. The list is complete, and numbers between 600 and 700 institutions.

"Stuttering Bob."

BY J. W. C. FEGAN.

I HAVE just seen a large theatrical poster which boldly depicts "Poor Jo," in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House." This always reminds me of a remarkable character we had to deal with some years ago. His memory still survives in the purlieus of Westminster, where he was known as "Stuttering Bob." Alas! I have heard of his old street-associates in those days being sent one after another for long terms of penal servitude. For Westminster, like other similarly-situated districts on the fringe of wealthy, fashionable neighbourhoods, with all their encouragement to mendicancy, loafing, and petty thieving, furnishes a far more difficult class of lads to deal with than Whitechapel or St. Giles.

"Stuttering Bob" was really well-connected, but he developed a roaming disposition and propensity for low company, so that all the efforts of his father and other relations to reclaim him were baffled. At this time some of the streets of Westminster, since pulled down, were like a rabbit warren, the houses inter-communicating with one another in the rear by holes in the roofs and by passages in the cellars, so that, as we ourselves found out subsequently, pursuit was most difficult, as some of the low hobbledehoys or degraded women were always at the street corners or doorsteps waiting to signal our approach and put the "wanted" individual on the qui vive. Time after time we were told Bob's father had come down with "'tecs" or alone in disguise, and though, as a rule, his searches were fruitless, he sometimes succeeded occasionally in getting hold of his wandering boy and taking him home in a cab, but at the first opportunity Bob was sure to make his way back to his old haunts. This grim, staunch attachment to the locality and its denizens made Bob quite a popular character there. His allies were legion.

I heard about "Stuttering Bob," and tried to cultivate his acquaintance, but he disdained my friendship altogether. The fact is just then a dramatised version of "Bleak House" was being played at one of the great theatres, in which an actress, Miss Jennie Lee, played the part of "Poor Jo." Bod dressed himself up in exact imitation, and standing outside as the audience came out with their feelings worked upon by the representation of "Poor Jo" on the stage, confronted them with a living counterpart of the character, shivering all over, crouching down and whining beseechingly, "Pl-pl-please to re-re-remember poo-poor-poor Jo." It was a stroke of genius. The unwritten code of honour which obtains amongst even the most lawless and roguish recognised Bob's copyright. He reaped a harvest of silver and copper, but shared the bulk of it with his "pals," and squandered the rest, so that when the play was withdrawn, Bob was as needy again as any of them.

He would never let me get near him, as he was afraid I would pounce upon him and get him confined in some industrial school or reformatory. One night, near St. James' Park station, I saw him on the opposite side of the road. A baked potato can was near, and knowing the enticing powers of a smoking hot tuber for a benumbed, starving urchin, I cried across to him, "Would you like a hot potato, Bob?" At once he crossed the road, and touching his cap, gratefully accepted?—no, no, that was not Bob's turn of mind at all. He just stood where he was and shouted back, "Loo-loo-look here, i-f-f-f you want to give me a 'ot 'ta-'ta-'tatur you can ch-ch-chuck it over; but i-f-f-f you want me you sh-sh-shan't have me."

Only a few days afterwards, however, when I was out on one of my all-night cruises I dropped on Bob in one of the tramps' kitchens, squatting on his heels before a huge fire, roasting a sheep's tail for his supper. He started when he saw me standing over him, but when I just said "How are you!" and turned away scarcely waiting for his stuttered response, his suspicions seemed to vanish all at once, for in a few minutes he came up to where I was chatting to some of the folks, and asked if I would take him into our Home?

If ever a boy were in earnest to get on, I believe Rob was, but old habits were so strong, and he was of such an erratic temperament, that he ran away from us literally dozens of times. He was never punished for these escapades. We knew our only chance of rescuing him was by the most gentle handling.

An irresistible impulse seemed now and then to carry him off. My colleague, Gordon Hopkins, who was my fidus Achates in those days, spent night after night at different times, and resorted to one stratagem after another, to trace and get hold again of our missing protégé.

One poor old fellow, on the chance of earning sixpence, would trot all the way down from Westminster to Deptford and give information to Gordon Hopkins as to Bob's whereabouts. But he dared not come near the Home, or be seen by any of our lads from Westminster, who might speak of his visits on leave-day, for he used to say, "Mr. Hopkins, don't look at me, sir, when you're up. Pass me by like dirt, If they lads up there knew I was a 'nark' they'd 'limb' me, they would, sir."

One year, I remember, just before the Derby (like hop-picking, a very unsettling time with poor Bob), he disappeared. Gordon Hopkins and I were going to spend the night before the Derby amongst the crowd of men, women and boys who sleep out on Epsom Downs that night, and we thought it very likely we might meet with Bob. About three a.m., there was a very thick, grey mist, and as I was walking near one of the stands I could just discern, a few yards in front of me, a shuffling figure. In an instant I had a strange presentiment it was Bob, but evidently he had seen me and was sheering off, as the figure turned abruptly aside and vanished in the fog. When I met my friend I told him my conviction, but as I had to admit I had only seen the figure very indistinctly, he naturally did not attach much weight to my vague impressions. However, I insisted upon our going to the stable where our pony and chaise were put up and starting off along the London-road, as I felt sure Bob would make his way to town if he had seen me on the Downs. We roused the sleepy ostler and drove off. The fog was lifting, and we had got five miles on our way, when I saw a dark heap huddled up in a dry ditch. Instinctively I pulled up and cried, "There's Bob!"—although I did not know the clothes he was wearing, and had not seen his face. Gordon Hopkins jumped out, and sure enough it was poor Bob lying sound asleep, having run all the way to escape from us.

I well remember what a sorry spectacle he was, for he was not only in dreadful rags, but he had caught a heavy cold through sleeping out the two previous nights, and one side of his face was tremendously swollen from faccache.

We helped him into the chaise, for he was stiff and numb with cold and fatigue, and, giving him our knee-rug to put round him, drove straight home. It was Bob's last elopement.

He settled down after this and was one of the most grateful lads we ever had to do with. It cost us much time, labour, and money, but through God's mercy we had a distinct triumph in the end, and I have always remembered "Stuttering Bob" as a signal trophy of persevering kindness and a striking example of answered prayer.

We taught him the trade of compositor in our printing department, and to put him right beyond the reach of old associations, sent him off to the United States. Just at the last we were able to trace his father, who acquiesced in our plans, and paid the cost of outfit and passage.

My last letter from "Stuttering Bob" was from Indiana, U.S.A., telling me that he was still steadily making his way in the world, and enclosing a photograph, which showed me the erstwhile "Poor Jo." a fine, stalwart, intelligent man.

Talk about landing a 50lb. salmon or a 35lb. pike, or stalking a Royal twelve-pointed stag, or "trekking" through Africa in search of "big game!" Can such pursuits for a moment compare in interest with the heart-thrilling work of "saving lads?" Is there anyone, who on reading this story covets the privilege of rescuing another "Stuttering Bob?" If so I can find the quarry.

. . . .

For £5 we can shelter, feed, clothe, and train a rescued waif through the winter months. For £10 we can pay all the expenses of placing him away from all the temptations of old associates and all the difficulties of earning an honest living in our overcrowded country, in the "Queen Colony" of our British dominions, where he will never need another farthing of English charity, but on the contrary, will help us in turn to give other poor boys the same good start in life.

J. W. C. Fegan

THE BOY'S HOME,

95, Southwark-street, S.E.

P.S.—Our "old boys" in Canada have for some years sent us a "New Year's Surprise Gift," voluntarily contributed out of their own hard-earned savings, "to help other poor boys out." The gift was in:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1889 | £108 | 1892 | £213 |
| 1890 | £148 | 1893 | £230 |
| 1891 | £204 | 1894 | £260 |
| | | Total | £1163 |

"The Rescue," published monthly (post free for a year, 1s. 6d.), contains descriptive accounts of rescue-work, expository articles, new hymns, with music, etc.—ADVT.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

A SUCCESSFUL series of meetings was conducted in Blandford last week by Mr. Warland.

Rev. G. Ernest Thorn has been appointed hon. secretary of the Congregational Total Abstinence Association (of which the late Sir Edward Baines was one of the founders), in succession to Rev. D. B. Hooke. Mr. Robert Mansergh, of Lancaster, has resigned the treasurership.

The annual festival of the Band of Hope Union of Birmingham has been held. This Union was formed forty years ago, and at the end of the first decade there were forty-two bands in affiliation; now there are 149 and over 30,000 members. Alderman White, the first president, has held the position ever since.

In connection with the proposal to make an experiment in Aberdeen in the municipalisation of the drink trade, Rev. A. Stewart has published (Wyllie & Son, Aberdeen. 2d.) a powerful pamphlet, under the title, "Is it Right and Christian to Municipalise the Drink Trade?" It is hardly needful to say that the author is wholly opposed to any such proposal.

The People's Friend states that the United Temperance Council have decided to hold a temperance convention in Hobart during the fourth week in January, 1895, and invitations have been sent to all the colonies to send delegates. The subjects for conference will be from political, educational, and social standpoints.

At Rotterdam a division of the Band of Total Abstainers of Amsterdam has been formed. Two years ago this Band began with ten members, paying twopence each per week for rent of a room. Now there are 300 members, who have a hall of their own, with public meetings, Sunday-school, women and young girls' bands, and other branches.

Mr. George Garlick, late C.E.T.S. van missioner, has been addressing meetings in connection with the Hitchin C.E.T.S. in the St. Andrew's Schools. He also spoke at two women's meetings, at a children's gathering, and in the Boys' Club. Thirty-two pledges were the outcome of the meetings, which were well attended.

The annual meeting of the Cape Town Church Temperance Society was held in the Mutual Hall, Archdeacon Fogg in the chair. Addresses were given by Hon. J. Rose Innes, the Bishop of St. John's, Mr. W. Hay, and the Coadjutor Bishop of Cape Town. The speaking was almost entirely confined to the liquor traffic with native races. It was stated that Canon Waters was working hard in his district, and had 251 abstainers from Kaffir beer on his books, his chief assistant being a native who had seen the evil of drinking at the goldfields.

The Women's Total Abstinence Union is preparing for a vigorous pledge-signing campaign in the early weeks of the New Year. Cheap pledge books and cards have been specially prepared, also pledge-signing leaflets, with perforated pledge form attached for house-to-house visitation, enclosure in letters, etc. One leaflet is headed, "Why I Do Not Sign the Pledge," and "Why Sign the Pledge," while another is entitled, "Will You Sign the Pledge?" Many pledge-signing meetings are being organised throughout London and the provinces by the federated societies of the Union.

Friends of a decent and orderly Sabbath in New York City are bestirring themselves, in view of a strong agitation in favour of securing a law allowing saloons to be open at certain hours on Sunday, as demanded by the liquor interests. One of the daily papers, which favours the opening of the saloons, declares that it does not want all saloons opened, nor for all day; but it is difficult to see how any discrimination could be made. If selling is allowed for Sunday afternoon, the demand will soon be made that it shall be legalised for Sunday morning and evening as well.—N.Y. Independent.

IT IS SIMPLY NATIONAL SUICIDE to place poor children in the workhouse to be trained. "Once a pauper, always a pauper," has been borne out by a painful experience. "Carefully reared in the way they should not go," as the Editor of the Times has put it, "when they are old they are pretty certain not to depart from it."

FREE CHURCH CONGRESS.—The arrangements for the Free Church Congress in Birmingham in March next are in a forward state. Dr. C. A. Berry, of Wolverhampton, delivers the presidential address, and Rev. F. W. Macdonald, of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, is to occupy Dr. Dale's pulpit at Carr's-Lane, and preach the Congress sermon. Mr. H. H. Fowler, M.P., has consented to preside over the Town Hall meeting, when Dr. Clifford and Rev. C. Silvester Horne will be leading speakers. Dr. Mackennal, of Bowdon, with Rev. J. K. Nuttall, of Liverpool, will take a prominent share in the proceedings, whilst Principal Fairbairn, of Mansfield College, Oxford, is to deal with the question of "The relation of the Free Churches to the theological tendencies of the times."

[1830]

PERSONALIA.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes and Mrs. Hughes are expected home from Italy on January 3. There is every reason to anticipate that Mr. Hughes will arrive with restored health.

The Bishop of Ripon, who has been spending the last month in the Riviera, has so far gained strength that he hopes to be able to return to his duties about the middle of January.

Dr. John G. Paton, the venerable missionary, has had a most enthusiastic welcome on his return to Melbourne, and the Victorian assembly have cabled home that they approve the scheme for the new mission vessel, Dayspring, for the service of the mission among the thirty islands of the group.

Mr. Hermann Warszawiak has severed his connection with New York City Mission and Tract Society, and started the American Mission to the Jews, with headquarters at 73, Bible House, New York City. It is proposed to extend the work beyond the sphere of the operations of the City Mission Society, whose hearty sympathy has been shown to Mr. Warszawiak in his present enterprise.

Rev. Dr. Bruce, of Persia, whose name is well known as one of the most devoted missionaries of the Church Missionary Society, has resigned his position in the society after thirty-six years' service. Dr. Bruce has especially engaged in Christian work amongst the Moslems of Persia. He established schools which met with much success, and in 1875 the Church Missionary Society definitely took over the work. The Persia Mission has had a somewhat strange history, but now the country is believed to be ripe for a decided advance. Bishop Stuart recently resigned a comfortable New Zealand bishopric in order to go forth as a simple missionary to Persia, and he has since been joined by other missionaries.

DONATIONS

RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1894.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or Post Office Orders, not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige by stating explicitly and fully the titles of the institutions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Further correspondence will thus be obviated. Owing to the necessity of going to press before the Christmas holidays, our Donation List for this week includes only sums received up to first post of Friday, Dec. 21. Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster Buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank"; this will effectually prevent loss.

| | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| British and Foreign Bible Society—N., 5s.; F. M. S., 5s.; A., £2 | 2 | 10 | 0 |
| Figueras Mission—Msy. Pence Assoc., 7s. 6d.; (Defence Fund) Alpha, 5s. | 0 | 12 | 6 |
| China Inland Mission—C.B.M.,£3; InMemoriam,£3 | 6 | 0 | 0 |
| Miss de Broen's Work, Paris—C. B. M. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Church of England Zenana Mission—C. B. M., £1; Msy. Pence Assn., 10s. 2d. | 1 | 10 | 2 |
| Society Relief Persecuted Jews—C. B. M., £2; E. H. B., £1; For Jesus' Sake, 4s.; G. N., 2s. 6d. | 3 | 6 | 6 |
| Church Missionary Society—Frances, £2; J. J. W., £2; J. E. M., 10s. | 4 | 10 | 0 |
| Sailors' Rest, Marseilles—M. S. | 2 | 2 | 0 |
| London Missionary Society—In Memoriam | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Lepers of India—In Memoriam | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Persecuted Stundists—Mrs. L. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Mr. Moody's Bible Institute—M. and L. H. | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| South Spanish Mission—A. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Pastor Chiniquy—G. N. | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| Mrs. Huntley, Demerara—M. | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Chamberi Evangelical Mission—Msy. Pnce. Assn... | 0 | 11 | 3 |
| Quo Iboe Mission—Msy. Pnce. Assn. | 0 | 4 | 4 |
| Signan Medical Mission—Msy. Pnce. Assn. | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| Congo Balolo Mission—M., £10; Msy. Pnce. Assn., 6s. 6d. | 10 | 6 | 6 |
| Central African Mission (Mr. Arnot)—Msy. Pnce. Assn. | 0 | 4 | 4 |
| Help for Brazil (Mr. Fanstone)—Msy. Pnce. Assn. | 0 | 8 | 8 |
| South American Missionary Soc.—Msy. Pen. Assoc. | 0 | 5 | 5 |
| Ceylon and Indian Gen. Mission—Msy. Pen. Assoc: | 0 | 4 | 0 |
| Rev. X. P. Moschon's Work (Greece)—Msy. Pen. Assoc. | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| Evangelical Church of Italy—Msy. Pen. Assoc. | 0 | 4 | 4 |
| Poor Jews, E. London (Mr. Oppenheim)—N., 5s.; H. S., 5s.; J. V., 6s.; (Meals) R. B. T., 10s.; For Christ's Sake, 2s. 6d. | 1 | 8 | 6 |
| The Spurgeon Orphanage—N., 5s.; A. M. D., £1; W. H. C., £3 | 4 | 5 | 0 |
| Mr. Fegan's Homes—N., 5s.; S. M., 5s.; A. M. D., £1 5s.; R. W. £4; M. S. Weston, 5s.; Misses B., 5s.; E. A. B., £1; G. P. £1; W. H. C., £2; In Memoriam, £2; J. J. W., £2: G. N., 1s.; J. E. M., 5s.; J. H. L., 2s. 6d.; L. L., 2s. 6d.; X., £2 10s.; Z. Y., £2 2s.: Mrs. G. H., £1 10s.; M. A. C., 10s.; E. M. O., 2s. 6d.; E. J. R., £2 10s. | 24 | 0 | 6 |
| Tower Hamlets Mission—M. S., Weston, 5s.; (Poor) J. C. E., £1 | 1 | 5 | 0 |
| Homes Little Boys, Farningham—N. | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| Home Crippled Girls, Marylebone—N. | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| Dr. Barnardo's Homes—N., 5s.; T. A. G., £3 3s.; R. W., £4; Frances, £2; K. G. M., Ireland, 3s. 6d.; E. G., £2; In Memoriam, £30; Egoeimi, 2s. 6d.; Eggs Sold, £1; For Jesus' Sake, 4s. 6d.; A Servant, 10s.; J. J. W., £2; G. N., 1s.; J. C. E., £1; E. S. L., £5; E. S., 6d.; M. A. C., 10s.; (Emigration) In Memoriam, £10 | 62 | 0 | 0 |

(Continued on page 28.)

List of Books
HANDSOMELY BOUND
in Leather, etc., suitable for
NEW YEAR PRESENTS.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

The Bells of Is:

or, Voices of Human Need and Sorrow.

Large Octavo Size: Handsomely Printed on Antique Paper.

WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT OF REV. F. B. MEYER, AND SEVEN OTHER FULL-PAGE ENGRAVINGS. Artistically Printed on Enamelled Paper.

Cloth Boards .. .. .. .. .. .. 2/6
Presentation Edition,
Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges .. 3/6

"This volume reminds us of Dr. John G. Paton's Autobiography in its freshness and charm, in its frankness yet reticence, in the success with which personal narratives are denuded of all unpleasing egotism, and are made to redound to the glory of an all-sufficient Saviour."—The Freeman.

"Golden Treasury" Birthday Book.

With Beautifully Illuminated Frontispiece.

PRESENTATION EDITIONS: French Morocco, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.; Rich coloured Leather, Padded, Gilt Edges, 4s. 6d. Each Copy in a Neat Case.

Can also be had, elegantly bound in Cloth, Bev. Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

In this Edition of "BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY"—arranged as a Birthday Book—four additional pages are introduced at the close of each month's portions. The total number of names which can be inscribed in the "Birthday" Edition amounts to OVER FIFTEEN HUNDRED.

Beautifully printed in Carmine and Black. Morocco, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

The King's Palace.

A Series of Instructive and Spiritual Readings for each day of the Month.

By Rev. J. H. ROGERS, M.A. Can also be had in Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth bds., 1s. 6d.; Cloth, gilt edges, 2s.

"Within and without, THE KING'S PALACE is simply perfect."—Irish Congregational Magazine.

Be Lovers Still!

Friendly Hints to a Bride and Bridegroom.

In Beautifully-illuminated Cover, Gilt Edges, 6d.; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 1s.

"A dainty booklet, the contents of which are 'a choice blend' of good will and common sense."—Cambs. Congregational Magazine.

Marriage and Home.

Wise Counsels for the Newly-Married.

In Elegant White Cloth binding, Gilt lettering on side, and Gilt edges, 2s. 6d.; in handsome Leather binding, Gilt lettering on side, and Gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

"A gem, both in print and binding."—Gospel Magazine.

Elegantly Bound in Coloured Morocco, 3s.

Choice Sayings.

A Collection of over 800 Striking and Profitable Comments on almost every subject relating to Christian Faith and Practice. By ROBERT CHAPMAN. Can also be had in Tinted covers, 9d.; Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth bds., 1s. 6d.; Cloth, bev. bds., gilt edges, 2s.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON wrote of Mr. Chapman's book:—"This volume is really original. It handles its materials in a new manner, putting them often in a striking way."

Tastefully bound in White Parchment, with Carmine lettering, Antique style, 5s.

Out of Egypt.

A Series of Addresses and Bible Readings on the Exodus of Israel, and its Spiritual Lessons.

By Rev. Dr. PENTECOST. Can also be had in Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth limp, 2s. 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"We know of no book more excellent for a gift to young people; yet the oldest may draw instruction from it."—The Record.

MORGAN AND SCOTT, 12, Paternoster buildings, E.C.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

LONDON FEMALE GUARDIAN SOCIETY.

Testamentary Bequests are earnestly solicited.

Founded 1807 to rescue souls and bodies from destruction, to lift up the poor trampled flower of womanhood, to cleanse it from the mire and dust, and nurse it back to life and health, and, in the beauty and fragrance of holiness, to present it afresh to God.

President—THE LORD KINNAIRD.

Ten Thousand Betrayed and Fallen Women have been welcomed to these Homes, shielded from evil, instructed in the way of righteousness, and freely supplied with food, clothing, education, and residence for eighteen months; while Thousands of Cases have been advised, helped, and sheltered.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED,

And will be thankfully received at the Office of THE CHRISTIAN, or by Mr. W. E. PAGE, Secretary,

191, HIGH STREET, STOKE NEWINGTON, LONDON, N.

THE POOR IN BETHNAL GREEN.
PARMITER STREET MISSION,

President, Sir C. ROBERT LIGHTON, Bart.

SOUP KITCHEN (twice weekly) and CHRISTMAS DINNERS.

DONATIONS URGENTLY NEEDED for these, and the GENERAL FUND of the Mission; also Clothing, Hospital Letters, &c. PLEASE HELP US WITH CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Address, Mr. G. W. L. BARRACLOUGH, F.R.H.S., Hon. Sec., Parmiter-street Mission, Bethnal-green, E.; or, the Hon. Treasurer, SAMUEL WILLIAMS, Esq., Clarence Villa King Edward-road, Hackney, N.E.

MRS. HILTON'S
Crèche, Infant Infirmary, and Orphan Home,

12, 14, & 16, Stepney Causeway, Commercial Rd., E.

Convalescent Home, The Limes, Feltham.

The Crèche is situated in a densely populated part of East London, and for 23 years has helped thousands of poor mothers, babies, and children.

In a time of great need we appeal to readers of THE CHRISTIAN, who have so often helped us, for special contributions. All communications should be addressed to Mrs. Hilton, Shore House, Shore-rd., South Hackney.

* The new report is ready, and will be gladly forwarded on application.

LONDON CITY MISSION DISABLED MISSIONARIES' WIDOWS & ORPHANS FUND.

This fund was formed to give support to aged and infirm Missionaries who, after a life-long service—enriching the poorest of the poor with the unsearchable riches of Christ—are compelled to cease from their labours. Forty-two of these receive yearly grants of from £20 to £52, according to length of service. Fifty-six widows whose husbands died in the work—several from disease taken when visiting, and in some instances leaving families—receive grants of from £10 to £20 yearly. Among these true helpmeets to their husbands are those who work earnestly among the London poor. Five orphans of Missionaries who have lost both parents receive help during childhood.

Last year this fund was deficient by £349 7s. 6d.

The Committee earnestly ask you to cast generously into this part of our Lord's treasury, that these aged and worthy disciples and widows may for the present year have their needs supplied.

Treasurer: F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.
Secretary: J. M. WEYLLAND, The Mission House, 3, Bridewell-place, London, E.C.

SUFFERING CHILDHOOD!

Among the deeper shadows of our great city are the homes of our suffering little match-box makers, who, with their enfeebled mothers, are trying to earn a sorry pittance. Affliction and privation are daily attending their path, and most gladly would we pass on any help kindly sent. Contributions would be gratefully received by Mrs. F. A. BEVAN, 59, Princes Gate, South Kensington, S.W., by the Director, N.E. London G. Missions, WILLIAM CHORLEY, 6, Clephane Road, Canonbury, London, N., or may be sent to the Office of THE CHRISTIAN. Parcels to Somerset Hall, 205, Devon's Road, Bow Common, E.

BREAD FOR STARVING JEWS.

Distress terrible: no food, no fire, illness and starvation. Kindly help us, as in former years, to alleviate the acute suffering by giving FREE MEALS, BREAD, SHELTER, COAL, SICK RELIEF, etc., also

XMAS TREATS TO HUNGRY CHILDREN.

Garments, please direct D. OPPENHEIM, City Mission to Jews, 119, Leman-street, E.

Donations, GEORGE WADE, Esq., Treasurer, 30, Schubert road, Putney, or may be sent to the office of THE CHRISTIAN.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

INSTITUTED 1607.

Treasurers: FRANK A. BEVAN, Esq.; W. J. PARES, Esq.

When was it instituted? 87 years ago.

Whom does it assist? The Lord's aged poor of both sexes, and of various denominations, who are 60 years of age and upwards. The pensioners dwell in all parts of the United Kingdom. Many are widows, some are blind, others have been long afflicted, and one has been bedridden upwards of 30 years; 917 are over 70 years of age, and of this number 239 are upwards of 80, and 16 more than 90. 1310 pensioners are now upon the books.

How does it assist? By pensions of Five, Seven, and Ten Guineas per annum, and by Homes at Camberwell, Hornsey Rise, Stamford Hill, and Brighton for 180 of the pensioners. £8400 per annum are expended in pensions alone, and £1800 in maintaining the Homes and the various funds connected with them. The pensions are distributed to the recipients at their own abodes. The Homes are open for the inspection of visitors daily (Sundays excepted).

What Help is required? The Annual Subscription List needs doubling. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." JOHN E. HAZELTON, Sec., Office, 83, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY

All-night Shelter Rescue Work

(Thrawl Street, Spitalfields).

ALREADY, since this work began, 45,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with the most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual pressure, and from present appearances a very hard season is apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the SECRETARY; the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or at the Office of THE CHRISTIAN, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.

JAS. ATKINSON, Secretary.
28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, London, N. c2754

OPERATIVE JEWISH CONVERTS' INSTITUTION.

Established by the Rev. Charles Simeon and others in 1831.

A Home for young Jews who are called to forsake all for Christ. They are fed, clothed, and lodged for three years, and they are taught trades. MONEY is needed for their support, and orders for PRINTING and BOOKBINDING are required for their training.

Number of admissions, 922.

Rev. H. OLIVER ALLBROOK, Principal, 12, Palestine-place, Cambridge Heath, London, E.

THE "ROBIN" DINNER FUND.

The object of this Voluntary Fund is to welcome the Children at Christmastide as guests in the Name and for the Sake of Him who loved little children.

See "THE CHRISTIAN" for a Full Report of our INAUGURAL DINNER.

INAUGURAL DINNER of the Season DECEMBER 27th.

The Robin Dinners, originated by the Rev. Charles Bullock, B.D., Editor of Home Words, began seventeen years since with 300 guests. 24,000 of London's poor children alone were entertained last year, and the Committee earnestly desire to extend the Robin Dinners this season.

Will you help to give ONE evening's happiness to ONE child this winter? The whole funds go direct to the children through the agency of those who know best how to dispose of them, either the Clergy and Ministers living and working in the Poorest Districts of London, or through the Ragged School Union. All our Workers are Voluntary Helpers.

The first large Dinner of the Season will be held in St. Martin's Town Hall, close to Charing Cross, on December 27th, at 6 p.m., when 800 children will have a Christmas Dinner, followed by Music, Shadowgraph, and Conjuring Entertainment. Madame Alice Gomez has most kindly consented to sing to the children, and the Band of the National Refuges will play. Other Artistes who have kindly given their services include Master Sterndale Bennett, of the Leeds and Chester Festivals, Master Philip Lewis, Violin Soloist (pupil of Bernhard Carrodus), and Miss Annie Norledge, Soprano.

Tickets to view (from the galleries) price 2s. 6d. each in aid of the Fund can be obtained from C. ASHTON BULLOCK, 7, Paternoster Square, London. Give your children a Christmas Treat in seeing the happiness of others.

Will your children in their happy homes send a little help to this Voluntary Fund? The guests at a Christmas Party, collecting a mite for "Robin," and the little child posting a letter and enclosure to "Robin," will feel their hearts lighter for sending a ray of sunshine into the lives of some sad pinched-faced little ones.

The Committee feel it necessary to state that they cannot be responsible for appeals sent out in the name of "Robin" unless bearing either the address, Coomrith, Eastbourne, or 7, Paternoster-square, London.

All Contributions are acknowledged in "THE NEWS," published at "HOME WORDS" Office. Reports of Dinners are also given.

An audited Balance Sheet is published every year. Subscriptions, which are urgently needed if we are to provide for as many children as last year, should be sent addressed to

ROBIN, Coomrith, Eastbourne, or to the Hon. Secs., C. ASHTON BULLOCK and JOHN KIRK, Robin Dinner Fund, 7, Paternoster-square. London, E.C.

DONATIONS.—(Continued from page 26.)

| | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Friendless and Fallen—N., 5s.; T. A. G., £2 2s.; J. P., 2s. 6d.; C. B. M., £1; E. H. B., £1; F. W., 2s. 6d.; J. J. W., £2; L. L., 2s. 6d.; Z. Y., £2 2s. | 8 | 16 | 6 |
| St Giles' Christian Mission—T. A. G., £2 2s.; S. M., 5s.; Mrs. D., 11s.; R. W., £4; C. B. M., £5; G. P., £1; B. L. T., 4s.; M., £10; W. H. C., £2; E. G., £2; In Memoriam, £2; J. Gr., 2s. 6d.; J. J. W., £2; G. N., 3s.; J. C. E., £1; L. L., 2s. 6d.; X., £2 10s.; E. S. L., £5; M. A. C., 10s.; E. J. R., £2 10s.; (Prison) E. and A. W., 10s.; (Christmas Help) R. W., £4; R. B. T., £1 .. .. .. .. .. | 48 | 10 | 0 |
| Mrs. Meredith's Work—M. A. C., 10s.; (Prison Mission) T. A. G., £2 2s.; C. B. M., £1 .. .. .. | 3 | 12 | 0 |
| Mildmay Institutions (Hymn Books)—M., £5; (Poor, Mrs. Codner) A. D., 10s.; H. G., 5s.; J. H. L., 2s. 6d.; W. H. C., £2; In Memoriam, £2; S. M., 2s.; Sympathy, 5s.. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 10 | 4 | 6 |
| Mr. Whittle's Work, Pontymoile—A. L., 5s.; (Poor) Sarum, 2s... .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 7 | 0 |
| London Female Guardian Society—India .. .. .. | 1 | 1 | 3 |
| Home for Fatherless (Mr. Toye)—India, £1 1s. 3d.; G. P., 10s.; In Memoriam, £2 .. .. .. .. .. | 3 | 11 | 3 |
| Field Lane Institutions—E. A. C., 2s. 6d.; R. W., £4; M., £10; Lancaster, 2s. 6d.; L. L., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. G. H., £1.. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 15 | 7 | 6 |
| George Yard Mission—E. A. C., 2s. 6d.; G. P., 10s.; E. G., £2; E. S. L., £5; M. A. C., 10s... .. .. | 8 | 2 | 6 |
| Board School Children's Dinners—E. A. C., 2s. 6d.; S. J. G., 2s. 6d.; A. B., 5s.; J. J. W., £2 .. .. | 2 | 10 | 0 |
| Robin Dinners—E. A. C., 2s. 6d.; Emmie and Dorothy, 3s. 3d.; Eleanor, 10s. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 15 | 9 |
| Poor Jews, Whitechapel (Mr. Ehrlich)—A. D., 10s.; Sympathy, 5s.; J. H. L., 2s. 6d.; X., £2 10s.; E. J. R., £2 10s. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 5 | 17 | 6 |
| Bridge of Hope—R. W., £4; In Memoriam, £1; X., £2 10s.; M., £10 .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 17 | 10 | 0 |
| Anti-Opium League—Alpha .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen—C. B. M., £1; G. N., 2s.; Mrs. G. H., £2 .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 3 | 2 | 0 |
| Miss Weston's Work, R.N.—C. B. M. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Miss Robinson's Work (Soldiers)—C. B. M. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Miss Daniell's Work (Soldiers)—C. B. M. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Somers Town Blind Aid Society—C. B. M. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Miss Macpherson's Home of Industry—C. B. M., £1; Sympathy, 5s.; W. H. C., £3; A. B., 10s.; E. S. L., £5; M. A. C., 10s.; (Aged Poor) S. M. P., £1; (Match Box Makers) E. W., 5s. .. .. .. | 11 | 10 | 0 |
| Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society—C. B. M., £1; In Memoriam, £1; Lancaster, 5s.; J. C. E., £1 .. | 3 | 5 | 0 |
| Mildmay Mission to Jews—C. B. M. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Homes of Hope, Regent-square—C. B. M. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Thames Church Mission—E. A. B... .. .. .. .. | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| London Samaritan Society—G. P... .. .. .. .. | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Mrs. Hilton's Creche—G. P., £1; In Memoriam, £1; M. A. C., 10s. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 10 | 0 |
| Working Men's Mission, New Cut—G. P. .. .. .. | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Liberator Relief Fund—Frances, £10; In Memoriam, 10s.; J. E. M., 5s. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 10 | 15 | 0 |
| Church Pastoral Aid Society—Frances .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| United Kingdom Beneficent Association—Frances .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Distressed Irish Ladies' Fund—Frances .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Sailors' Rest Aid Society—M. S. .. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Marylebone Medical Mission—Sympathy .. .. .. | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| Rev. F. B. Meyer's Work—E. H. O. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Salvation Army—E. H. O., £1; E. H. S., 5s. .. .. | 1 | 5 | 0 |
| Ragged School Union—M., £10; W. H. C., £2; Eleanor, 10s.; (Poor)—J. C. E., £1; R. B. T., £1 | 14 | 10 | 0 |
| Mrs. Kerwin's Home—E. G. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Flower Girls' Mission—E. G. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Christmas Help to Poor—J. B., 10s.; J. J. W., £2 .. | 2 | 10 | 0 |
| Church Association (Van Work)—In Memoriam .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Irish Society—In Memoriam.. .. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Miss Sharman's Orphan Homes—In Memoriam .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Women's Protestant Union Convalescent Home—In Memoriam .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Evangelistic Mission—In Memoriam .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Poor Shirt-Makers' Children—E. W. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| Destitute Children's Dinner Society—G. N., 1s.; A. W., 5s.; A. L., 5s. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 11 | 0 |
| Surgical Aid Society—P. W. M. .. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 1 | 0 |
| Relief of London Poor—P. W. M... .. .. .. .. | 4 | 10 | 0 |
| Ladies' Irish Association—S. J. G., 2s. 6d.; (Mason Relief Fund) In Memoriam, £1.. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 2 | 6 |
| Evangelistic Mission—J. H. L., 2s. 6d.; (Special Relief Fund) M. A. V., £5 .. .. .. .. .. .. | 5 | 2 | 6 |
| Mr. Boyer's Drift Children—A. L., 5s.; (Cripples) Lancaster, 2s. 6d.; S. M. P., £1 .. .. .. .. | 1 | 7 | 6 |
| Miss Rye's Home, Peckham—A. B., 10s.; J. J. W., £2; E. A. B., 10s. 6d. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 3 | 0 | 6 |
| E. London Training Institute—A Servant .. .. | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| London Aged Christian Society—J. J. W. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Miss Perram's Poor Fund—J. J. W. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Scrip. Readers' Soc., Ireland—J. J. W., £2; G. N., 2s. | 2 | 2 | 0 |
| Gratuitous Circulation of THE CHRISTIAN—J. J. W. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Dock Labourers' Mission (Unemployed)—Jane.. .. | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| Rev. A. G. Brown's Work—(Poor) S. M. P., £1; J. C. E., £1 .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Mrs. Wilkes' Rescue Work—S. M. P. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Barbican Mission to Jews (Relief)—G. N. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| Halfpenny Dinners—R. B. T. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| London City Mission—Z. Y. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 2 | 2 | 0 |
| Anti-Sunday Travelling Union—M. H. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| Rev. Peter Thompson's Work, E. London—M. .. .. | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Mr. F. Brading—M... .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Stranger's Rest, St. George's-street, E.—M. .. .. | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Brit. Soc. for Prop. Gospel among Jews—Msy. Pen. Assoc... .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| London Soc. for Promoting Christianity among Jews—Msy. Pen. Assoc. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Church of England Home for Waifs and Strays—Mrs. G. H. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 10 | 0 |
| Spitalfields' Lodging House Band—Mrs. H. G... .. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| Bosworth Road Mission—Mrs. G. H. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 10 | 0 |
| North Bow Mission (Children's Breakfasts)—Mrs. G. H... .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Indigent Blind Visiting Society (Christmas Dinners)—Mrs. G. H. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| Costers' Cottage Mission (Mrs. Penrose)—Mrs. G. H. | 1 | 10 | 0 |
| Miss Mason's House of Rest—M. .. .. .. .. .. | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Y.M.C.A., Finsbury Park—M. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 10 | 0 | 0 |
| Total .. .. .. .. .. | £416 | 5 | 9 |

[ADVERTISEMENTS.]

Mr. Fegan's Homes—Dan. xii. 3, £100.
Dr. ft Children's Mission (C. H. Boyer).—Gal. vi. 2, 5s.
Dr. Barnardo's Homes—M., parcel of arrowroot, etc.
Poor Jews East London, 119, Leman-street.—Mr. Oppenheim received with thanks parcel and box, 5s. from E. S. B.: 5s.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY,

Established 1856.

PRESIDENT: .. .. .. LORD ABERDARE, G.C.B.

2768 Children have been rescued from Dens of Infamy.
5000 Children are in Industrial Homes, to which Grants have been made.
10,319 Children (boys and girls), have been aided by the "Boys' Beadle."
The Society has an Emigration Agency with a Reception House in Manitoba, at Shaftesbury House, Winnipeg, whence lads are carefully placed in employment.
Particulars of the work will be sent on application.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED.

SECRETARY:—ARTHUR J. S. MADDISON,
Office, 32, Charing Cross, S.W.
Bankers: Messrs. BARCLAY, RANSOM & Co., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.

Working Men's Mission, Collingwood Street, New Cut.

Branches: 4, York-street, Walworth-road, and Decima-street, Bermondsey.

WINTER APPEAL.

We very earnestly appeal on behalf of the Destitute and Starving in the Districts of the New Cut and Southwark, to provide Food, Firing, Clothing, and Christmas Dinners to many deserving families. Last Winter our Soup Kitchen supplied 161,000 Meals at the cost of One Penny and One Halfpenny each.

Will the Readers of "The Christian" send us help?

£500 needed by the end of the year.

Contributions will be thankfully received by F. A. BEVAN, Esq., Treasurer, 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; or by T. and J. YOUNG, 33, Nelson-square, Blackfriars-road, S.E.; or by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C.

'Ye shall be a delightsome land.'

BIBLE LANDS MISSIONS' AID SOCIETY

FOUNDED 1854.

President, Rt. Hon. EARL OF ABERDEEN. Treasurer, LORD KINNAIRD.

Our object: to regain the lost Bible Lands for Christ.

50 MISSION WORKS AIDED LAST YEAR in Macedonia, Asia Minor, Armenia, Persia, Arabia, Egypt, Syria, Palestine; ORPHANAGES, Training Homes, HOSPITALS, Dispensaries, SCHOOLS, Native Protestant Churches, GOSPEL PREACHING, &c., &c.

VERY SPECIAL APPEAL IS MADE FOR INCREASED HELP

which will be thankfully received by Rev. W. A. ESSERY, Hon. Sec., Alliance House, 7, Adam-street, Strand, London, W.C. Pictorial Pamphlets free.

The St. Giles's Christian Mission

IS ALWAYS ENGAGED IN THE
VISITATION AND RELIEF OF THE SICK AND DESTITUTE.
TO THESE WRETCHED ONES WINTER BRINGS MUCH
POVERTY AND SUFFERING.
THIS WE ARE MOST ANXIOUS TO LESSEN, AND
VERY URGENTLY APPEAL FOR FUNDS
TO ENABLE US EFFECTUALLY TO CARRY ON OUR WORK OF PROMPT AND PRACTICAL ASSISTANCE TO THE NEEDY
BY PROVIDING
FOOD, CLOTHING, FIRING, AND CHRISTMAS DINNERS
TO MANY DESERVING POOR FAMILIES.
WILL THE READERS HELP US?

Contributions will be thankfully received by
F. A. BEVAN, Esq., Treasurer, 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; or by WILLIAM WHEATLEY, Superintendent,
4, Ampton-street, Regent's-square, London, W.C.

FRIENDLESS & FALLEN.

Homes for 240 Young Women & Girls.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

About £250 still required by December 31st.

The Reader is earnestly asked to send a Christmas Donation towards the sum still needed before the end of the year.

The Committee tender their sincere thanks to those who have responded to their appeal on behalf of this mission of mercy.

Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT will receive contributions, or they may be sent to Office:—200, EUSTON ROAD, LONDON, N.W.

WILLIAM J. TAYLOR.

"Dr. Barnardo's Homes"

(Now containing very nearly

FIVE THOUSAND BOYS & GIRLS)

Are urgently in need of funds to meet the unprecedented demands of this Winter Season. EIGHT new cases are on the average admitted daily, and £140 are required to spread the tables every day for the large family actually under the care of the Homes.

Gifts of Clothing, Clothing Material, and Household Sundries

will also be most acceptable and timely.

THE ANNUAL SALE

of Gift Goods sent in to the Homes is now commencing, and the co-operation of all friends of the Children is earnestly invited. Additions to our stock are very necessary, so that the Boxes (of the estimated value of £6 and £12 respectively) may be filled with a good selection. These Boxes are issued to the public at £5 and £10. Orders should be sent in WITHOUT DELAY.

The articles most in request to replenish our stock include TEACLOTHS, fancy PINAFORES, good DOLLS, COSIES, CUSHIONS, foreign NEEDLEWORK, ladies' UNDERCLOTHING. bedroom SLIPPERS, sofa RUGS, FANCY GOODS, &c., &c.

All remittances and parcels should be addressed to
Dr. THOS. J. BARNARDO, at the offices of the Homes as below.

NOW READY.—First Volume of "BUBBLES," edited by Dr. Barnardo, being the children's organ of the Homes.

Cloth and gilt edged, 5s.; Fancy Boards, cloth back, 3s. 6d. A beautiful Christmas Present for the young, containing 112 Chromo-lithographs.

The Monthly Part of "OUR BUBBLE," price 6d., or 6s. 6d. per annum, sent post free to any address.

At all Booksellers', or at the Children's Book Room, 279, Strand, London, W.C.

JOHN ODLING, Secretary.

18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Archdeacon Hobhouse, of Cornwall, is seriously ill.

Rev. T. Stevens, vicar of St. John's, Stratford, has been appointed Archdeacon of Essex.

Miss Gertrude Harvey, well known as a worker in Ellacombe, Torquay, is shortly proceeding to mission work in connection with the South American Missionary Society.

The Bishop of Norwich has just given an hon. canonry to Rev. C. D. Lawrence, of Lowestoft, who is a distinct Evangelical. He was for some years rector of Bermondsey.

Mr. Douglas Horsfall has secured land in the vicinity of Sefton Park, Liverpool, for the erection of another church, which it is expected will accommodate 800 people. A large population has sprang up in the locality.

The Bishop Bowlby Memorial Committee has been considering three proposals—one to erect a memorial church, another to place in St. Philip's Church a memorial window, and a third to have executed a bust of the late bishop. It was agreed that a bust and window should be erected.

A memorial has been presented to the Bishop of London by the Free and Open Church Association, praying that when permanent churches are built to replace mission churches, grants should be given to those only in which all the seats are to be free and unappropriated.

The death is announced of Rev. Charles Brodrick Scott, D.D., who was for twenty-eight years head-master of Westminster School. Since his retirement from active work he lived in Bournemouth, and took an interest in the Y.W.C. Association, and other philanthropic efforts.

The "Association of Blues for Work among the Poor in London" is progressing. It is, as its name implies, a philanthropic society of members of Christ's Hospital, past and present, who have been for the past two years co-operating with Rev. George H. Ayerst in the mission district of St. John the Evangelist and rendering valuable assistance.

The Golden Lectureship, vacant by the resignation of Prebendary Moore, is in the gift of the Haberdashers' Company. The stipend, which was formerly £400 a year, has been reduced to £150, and the balance—namely, £250 a year—will be distributed among poor preachers within five miles of the City of London, whose incomes do not exceed £300 a year.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Mr. Fred. Bryan has entered on the pastorate of Pateley Bridge and Dacre churches.

After thirty-four years' faithful service at Little Waltham, Rev. Joseph Fowler has felt it needful to resign.

By the will of Mrs. Juliet Douglas, of New York, the Woman's Board of Missions receives a legacy of £1000.

Rev. Dr. Brown has commenced a series of "People's Services" in Bunyan Meeting, Bedford, on Sunday evenings

Fifteen boys of Raratonga, who earned 45 dols. by picking and cleaning coffee, have given the amount to the London Missionary Society to help to pay for the new ship, John Williams.

The churches in the Valleys of Merthyr and Aberdare are quite alive to their duty in commemorating the centenary of the London Missionary Society. Several of the churches hope to contribute double the amount they did last year.

The new returns from the churches of Jamaica show encouraging progress. There are now over 10,000 adherents connected with the churches, 3581 church members (an increase of 101), 714 candidates, and thirty-two day-schools, with an average attendance of over 2000 children.

At an "at home" held at Christ Church, Croydon, it was stated that the congregations had more than doubled since the settlement of the present pastor, Rev. J. Benson Evans, and that all the organisations of the church are in a very vigorous and flourishing state.

The annual report of the various organisations which have their centre in Darby-street, near the London Docks, the East End Mission of the King's Weigh House Chapel, has been issued. Lord Justice Day, presiding at the annual meeting, referred to the mission as helping to break down the barriers between rich and poor, strong and weak.

The Congregational International Council of 1891 has drawn closer together the Congregational churches of Great Britain and America. The next Council is intended to be held in 1900 at Boston, but in October of next year the Triennial Council of the churches of America is to be held at Syracuse, New York State. In all probability an English delegate will be sent.

Calls.—Rev. T. H. Elwyn Thomas, to Newport, Mon.; Rev. J. M. Carrack, of Charleston, to Pendleton; Rev. G. Barber, to Hope Chapel, Wigan.

Resignations.—Rev. W. J. Houlgate, of Lee; Rev. A. Topham, of Freemantle, Southampton.

BAPTIST.

Rev. Dr. Gomer Lewis, of Swansea, is now convalescent.

Rev. Evan Lewis, of Hay, has accepted the call to Calvary, Treforest.

Rev. D. Morris, of Talgarth, has accepted the pastorate of Zion, Ystrad-Rhondda.

At Harston, Cambs, successful evangelistic services have been held for three weeks by Mr. F. Monk.

Rev. T. Evans, of Tenby, has accepted the pastorate at Brunell-street, Cardiff.

Rev. J. Jones, late of Blaenconin, has been recognised as pastor of Penybont and Hebron Churches, Llandyssil.

Since the settlement of Rev. D. M. Pryse as pastor at South Bank, Yorks, much activity has, writes a correspondent, prevailed among the members of the church, and the Word of God preached has been abundantly blessed.

The Boston Baptist Social Union, U.S.A., recently considered the subject, "The Social Union Member as a Citizen." Rev. Dr. Lansing, speaking on "Municipal Reform," said enough was known to convict many of the Common Councilmen and Aldermen of incapacity, self-seeking, and corruption. The police department has protected the saloon, the brothel, and the gambling-den. There is plenty of money for parkways and roads, for those who work on them can vote, but the schoolhouses are wretchedly insufficient in number, and their ventilation and sanitation disgrace the city.

The returns of the Baptist churches throughout the world, as officially returned to Rev. Dr. Booth, were issued on Thursday last. They show a total of 46,502 churches, as compared with 37,478 in 1886, and of 4,136,152 members, as compared with 3,326,542. The returns from Great Britain give 3871 churches and 3793 places of worship, seating 1,264,017 persons. The membership is set down at 349,688. In the Sunday-schools there are 49,099 teachers, and 506,034 scholars. The ordained ministers in charge number 1913. They are assisted by 4643 local preachers. In every one of these departments there is an increase.

Calls.—Rev. E. Monk, of Strebbear, to Okehampton.

Resignations.—Rev. G. Phillips, of Evenjobb and Gladestry; Rev. F. W. Reynolds, of Sneanymoor.

METHODIST.

Rev. T. Greenfield, of West Cowes, has been seriously ill.

A new Primitive Methodist chapel has been opened at Balham, Wickhambrook.

Rev. Thomas Waugh has held a most successful mission at Belmont-row, Birmingham.

At Rhayader a good work has begun, and various conversions have been reported within the past few weeks.

Owing to the success of a mission at Warnton, Oundle, the week's services had to be extended to a fortnight.

A revival has been realised at the New-road Chapel, Peterborough, and many persons have found the Saviour.

The Bowron House Committee have appointed Miss Bushell, of Newcastle-on-Lyne, lady superintendent of the Home.

The President of United Methodists has preached at Southgate, Elland, in connection with the chapel anniversary.

Rev. S. W. Beard, the superintendent of the Bradford Circuit, has been compelled, owing to an affection of the throat to leave his circuit for a while, and seek benefit by a sojourn in the balmier climate of Bournemouth.

A special mission has been conducted at Barry by Miss North. The services were continued for sixteen days, during which many persons entered the inquiry rooms. Some remarkable instances of conversion took place, one of which was that of an infidel, who entered the chapel for the purpose of getting money from his wife to spend in drink.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A new chapel is to be built at Carmel, Aberdare.

Statistics show that the Welsh Presbyterians in America now number over five million adherents.

Rev. Enoch Anwyl, Tremeirchion, has accepted the pastorate of Llysfaen and Llanddulas Church.

Permission has been granted to the Church of Warren-road, Rhyl, to build a new and larger chapel.

Rev. R. T. Williams, of Llanrug, has accepted the pastorate at Hill-street, Wrexham.

A very prosperous state of things is reported at Trinity Church, Notting Hill, under the ministry of Rev. C. H. G Macgregor.

The monthly meeting has confirmed the call given by the churches of Derwen, Clawddneydel and Clocaenog to Rev. Thomas Owen, Edeyrn, to undertake the pastorate.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray, of Cardiff, have been conducting a series of evangelistic meetings in connection with the forward movement at Holywell and other places in Flintshire and Denbighshire.

Call.—Rev. Dr. Robson, of Inverness, to Bridgend, Perth.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

William and Susan T. Thompson, of New England Yearly Meeting, are now in this country after a visit to the East.

Frederic Taylor has conducted a mission in Cheltenham Friends' Meeting-house. In the afternoons he gave most interesting Bible readings, at which the attendance was good, and many felt them to be very helpful.

The present probability of war has made it necessary to consider the return of some of the missionaries next year. It is now probable that Dr. S. B. and Annie M. Fenn and their children, and Henrietta Deane, whose furloughs are due in 1895, will leave Madagascar at that time. It is possible, also, that Alice Kingzett will be obliged to return to England owing to ill-health, and her husband and children may be expected to accompany her.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Llwynpia, Pontypridd, Mr. George Arthurs, aged seventy-six, a worker and preacher.—At Swaffam, in the chapel suddenly, on the 9th inst., Mr. C. Wilderspin.—At Wilmington, Mrs. Stephenson, a devoted believer and generous giver.—At New Brompton, Mr. E. J. Avery, Principal of Higher Grade School, and an active Christian worker.—At Ipswich, Mr. E. Pumfrett Brand, a leader in Y.M.C.A., ragged school, and similar work.—At Anglesey, Rev. W. Hughes, aged sixty-seven, for upwards of twenty years a missionary among the scattered Welsh in Australia and New Zealand.—At Cornelly, Pyle, Rev. Evan Williams a devoted Welsh Calvinist minister.—At Edinburgh, on 12th inst., Mr. C. G. Cunningham, only surviving son of the late Principal Cunningham.—At Liverpool, on 13th ult., Rev. George Lewis, aged seventy-three, well known as a Presbyterian minister at Dudley and Chester.—At Foula, Shetland Isles, on 7th inst., Rev. George Morrison, aged thirty-seven, Congregational minister.—At Findhorn-place, Edinburgh, on 11th inst., Rev. R. Rutherford, aged seventy-seven, senior minister of Newlands Church.

Notices.

Applicants for Tracts.—Harold Terry, Sutton-on-Trent, Notts; Miss Eliza Roberts, Bellevue Cottage, Trurovean-road, Truro.

Communications Received with Thanks.—C.C.C. W.N. W.S. W.H. J.K. H.W.McL. H.B.W. R.A. J.D. C.T. M.K.S. D.J.E. H.R. S.D. R.L. R.M. G.G. W.F. M.L.C. M.F.P. J.G. M.A.H. G.F.B. Miss S. A.E. C.C. W.L. O.T. I.W.T. J.F. R.A. L.C. L.G.H. G.A.

DO NOT make your child an object of suspicion. Trust in him, believe in his warm heart and his good intentions. Give him the benefit of the doubt always. Many an action which you hastily call naughty, is merely a mistake; accept his apology when he says that he "did not mean to do it."

THE LIGHTHOUSE MISSION, of Australia, despatches parcels monthly, to 148 lighthouse stations and lightships in Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania. The past year has been uneventful as regards the Mission, the position of the keepers of lighthouses and lightships being much the same from year to year. A friend, when sending a contribution, wrote:—"The poor fellows there have indeed a weary time of it. I went to the site of our Cape —— Lighthouse, and my heart was moved for the future of the keepers and their children. The place seemed so bleak and bare, and wildly awful." In the course of years letters from stations have accumulated, expressive of the pleasure and profit experienced from the packets sent by the Mission. Jas. Bulstrode, Secretary, "Hillingdon," Spring Hill, near Kyncton, Victoria.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

FUNDS NEEDED to extend the work. Irish-speaking Scripture Readers are sent where required, and the work is carried on in a spirit of love and not of controversy. Reports to be had from the Secretary, Capt. J. Kearney White. Offices: 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin, and No. 9, Paternoster-row, London, where Donations may be sent; or to the Office of The Christian. John xiii. 35.

HOMES OF HOPE,

4, 5, and 6, Regent-square, Gray's-inn-road London, W.C.

The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.

Special efforts are made on behalf of mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women before they become mothers as are unfitted from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.

The Committee need £300 to close the year free from debt. Contributions received by the Secretary, or may be sent to the Office of The Christian.

WM. HORNIBROOK, Secretary.

LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE SOCIETY

Urgent Appeal.

The recent judgment in the Court of Appeal has unhesitatingly upheld the contention of this Society, that the Sunday Lectures complained of are a breach of the law forbidding Sunday Entertainments at which a charge is made for admission. But it decided that the parties against whom the Committee were advised to proceed are not those legally responsible for this violation of the law. The effect of this latter decision is to impose on the Lord's Day Observance Society the heavy costs incurred in successfully disputing the legality of these Sunday entertainments. The Committee, therefore, earnestly appeal for contributions to relieve their general funds from this demand upon it, and to enable them to carry on with unabated vigour their varied endeavours to secure the religious observance of the Lord's Day. Contributions may be forwarded to the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or to the Secretary, Rev. Dr. Peake, 20, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

MISSION TO

DEEP SEA FISHERMEN

Patron: THE QUEEN.

The Council URGENTLY APPEAL for funds to carry on their work among Fishermen. The Society has TEN VESSELS stationed with the fishing fleet, and last year upwards of 1,593 religious services were held, chiefly on the high seas, and 9,160 cases medically or surgically treated on the Mission smacks. The MISSION to DEEP SEA FISHERMEN is the only Society carrying on systematic medical mission work amongst the thousands of fisher-folk on the Labrador coast; medical relief was afforded to at least 1,000 persons during the past season. Cheques, money orders, &c., should be crossed "Lloyd's Bank (Limited)," and be made payable to the hon. treasurer, Thos. B. Miller, Esq., or to

Francis H. Wood, Secretary.

181, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

Destitute Children's Dinner Society.

THIS Old-Established Society is earnestly in need of Funds to carry on its work. Last season they gave 222,484 dinners. They have 52 rooms open.

Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the Treasurer, Lord Kinnaird, 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.; by the Secretary, H. Morton Carr, Esq., 13, Ilminster-gardens, Lavender-hill, S.W.; or by the Bankers. Messrs. Barclay and Co., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

For Mutual Life Assurance.

Invested Funds, £4,700,000
Paid in Claims, £9,000,000
Estd. 1835

All the Profits are Divided amongst the Assured; already divided, £4,600,000.

DEATH DUTIES provided for by LIFE ASSURANCE

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

ARTHUR SMITHER, Actuary & Secretary